CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

It is the only year book of the Fancy. It has been truly described as an ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF BIRDY MATTER.

And there is not any bird-keeper who could fail to be interested and benefited by its perusal. Something for everybody is on every one of its pages; it tells you how to save money in many ways on your seed and food bill; how to conduct your operations on a profitable basis; how to regulate your work in the bird-room month by month; how to construct and stock a fascinating aviary; and numberless other things of supreme importance to all bird-keepers.

IT IS AS NECESSARY TO YOU AS A RIFLE IS TO A SOLDIER.

To the Publisher,

Globe Inn Linnet Club, Open contest, July 10, for time and quality. 25 birds entered. 1, Statham, 158; 2, 127; 3, Knowles, 100. Quality: 1, Cone; 2, Hayes; 3, Bates. Judges, Gibbons and Jones. Timers, T. Statham, W. Meadows; minute man, G. Anison.

Consolation contest for time and quality, July 17. Quality: 1, Cowburn; 2, Holcroft; 3, Hilton. Time: 1, Statham; 2, Baxendale; 3, Gore. All other members received a prize, value 5s. Timers, S. Rigby and J. Litherland; minute man, Disley; judges, Gibbons and Jones. Next open contest, July 24, time and quality, Grey Mare, Bolton Road, West-houghton.—R. Disley, Sec.

LEEDS.

Quality singing contest, Old Bird House, Skinner's Arms, Bushingthorpe, July 18; 19 birds, the best in Yorkshire, competed for three prizes: 1, Huller; 2, Binns; 3, King. Judges, Messrs. C. Clayton, Blackburn.—C. Clayton, Hon. Sec.

Leeds Quality Linnet Singing Club, Plasterer's Arms, Skinner Lane, July 17; 20 birds competed. Judge, H. Playford. Timekeeper, A. Lawrence. 1, 2, Turner; 3, Chipendale and J. Wright shared. July 18, 24 birds sang for four prizes. Judges: C. Lorrieman, T. Solomon, 1, Chipendale; 2, Dearlove (shared); 3, Walker; 4, Turner. A good company were all satisfied with the judging.—F. Turner, Sec.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, Clarence Hotel, Skinner Lane; 23 birds sang for 3 prizes: 1, 3, Hirst; 2, Ward. Judges, Messrs. T. Summers and H. Wigfield. July 18, 25 entered, and some very good singing was heard. We had friends from Hull and Wigan, and our worthy host, Mr. W. Crowther, added the best prize ever known. 1, Dalton; 2, 3, shared Hirst and Dalton. Judges: Messrs. C. Biss, T. Summers, and H. Wigfield.—W. Timmer, Hon. Sec.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A., Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road. Open contest for quality Linnet singing, held July 10, 14 birds sang for three prizes. 1, W. Sissons; 2, Richardson; 3, Towers. Judges, Crane and Jennings. Also July 11, 19 sang for three prizes. 1, T. Johnson; 2, W. Sissons; 3, Stanney. Judges, Hardcastle, Naylor, Butler.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, July 17; 14 sang for three prizes: 1, Richardson; 2, Stanney; 3, T. Stockill. Judges, Jennings and Crane. July 18, 19 sang for three prizes: 1, 2, shared by T. Johnson and A. Richardson; 3, Stanney. Judges, Hardcastle and Naylor.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Club Reports.

WEST STANLEY (Empire) F.F. & C.

Meeting, July 11, Mr. R. Peart presiding, and a good turn-up of members. The partnership question was discussed, and it was resolved that no member can show in partnership with a non-member who has not been in partnership for two years. We passed a good schedule of 42 classes. I hope members will have plenty of stock to fill them all, and give the judges plenty of work.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.S.

General meeting, July 6, St. Thomas's Schools, Ardwick. Mr. A. E. Thorpe presided over a fair attendance. After business, including final arrangements for July show, Mr. H. Boothman gave a lecture on the Norwich Canary. Having already had this season a lecture from a prominent fancier on this variety, it was a task for the lecturer to provide fresh material to make it interesting; however, under the circumstances he proved equal to the occasion, the extent of his knowledge was given freely to those present. He dealt chiefly with the standard points of the Norwich, the stock birds, and the production of show birds. Many questions were asked and answered in a very practical way. A vote of thanks to Mr. Boothman closed a very enjoyable evening.—J. Spencer, Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting, headquarters, June 28, Mr. Norman chair, and a fair number present. Owing to several societies applying for our patronage not having fixed date of show it was impossible to arrange for the full number of patronage shows, but up to the present we have given our patronage to Plymouth, Chester, Redhill, and Llanelli. We are surprised that no London society has applied, and I shall be very glad to hear from any secretary who wants to ensure success for his show. I regret I have been unable to send a list of societies applying to the Provincial Committee for their votes, but owing to incomplete details it has been impossible to do so; they may rest assured that the London committee will look after their interests. A meeting will be held at headquarters, July 26th, and it is hoped that as many members as possible will attend.—Geo. Burton, Hon. Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting, July 6. Final arrangements for the Young Bird Show were made and special prizes allotted. At next meeting a lecture will be given by Madame Madewell on the Crossbill. This lady possesses what is probably the only Crossbill in London, and one of the very few perhaps even in the country, namely, her famous "Charlie," and her remarks are sure to be of great interest.—A. R. Coe.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting was held July 12, the Church Institute, Paddington Street. Mr. A. W. Curtis, chair, and 30 members present. Various correspondence was read. Mr. Rolfs and Mr. F. Day were elected members, and Mr. F. Mansel nominated for membership. Hon. Sec. read out points gained for trophies, and paid out prize money and specials won at young bird show. Mr. Muford had promised to open a discussion on "The Duty and Obligations incumbent on members to their Association," but wrote regretting his inability to attend, as he had been summoned for special police duty. Mr. F. J. Martin kindly offered to fill the gap, but the subject not being to his liking he made some very interesting remarks on "Feathers" and "Double-Buffing." A lengthy discussion followed, in which several members joined. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to steward and officials for their services at young bird show and vote of thanks to chairman closing the meeting.—F. Thynne, Assist. Hon. Sec.

LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting July 13, "Red Lion," York Street, St. James. Mr. Robson, chair, and a good attendance of members and visitors. After general business, the chairman called on Mr. Silver and Mr. Dewhurst to give their promised demonstration on the "Feeding of British and Foreign Insectivorous Birds." Mr. Dewhurst handed round for inspection samples of ingredients used in his mixture, which consists of one part each of meat meal, ants' eggs, grated carrot, half part green peas, four parts biscuit meal, and a piece of cream cheese or coconut butter the size of a walnut. The cheese, carrot, biscuit meal, and currants are passed twice through a seed mill; then the ants' eggs are added, and the meat meal after being scalded, the whole being made crumbly moist with boiling water. This food, together with fruit in season, will keep them in perfect condition. A suitable mixture for the larger birds consists of one part meat meal and two parts Spratts' Chicken Meal, as proof of which Mr. Dewhurst quoted birds in his possession seven and fourteen years old, and still fit for the show bench. Mr. Silver then demonstrated his method of feeding, which consists of a stock mixture very similar to Mr. Dewhurst's, which is kept ready mixed, with the addition of silkworm pupae, which Mr. Silver states from experience possesses great nutritive properties. The stock mixture can be made crumbly moist with either unsalted lard, grated carrot, or minced banana. For Sun Birds, Sugar Birds, etc., a mixture of honey, condensed milk, Mellin's Food, and meat extract, with sufficient water to give it the consistency of thin cream, together with fruit. For Tanagers, etc., sponge cake made moist, with the preceding mixture and fruit. The lecturers were well plied with questions, which were answered with a knowledge and experience. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturers and the chairman ended the meeting.—A. Wallington.

Annual F.F. show, Palmer Hall, July 7; quality and quantity were below average, although Mr. Meadowcroft's team of Borders were gems; Yorks. were second best, but Norwich were nothing to boast about, though members will probably have something hot at open show as in other years. Mr. Brooker, in the absence of Mr. Yates, judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

Mr. W. C. Sholedec, 38, Haddington Road, Dublin, has again taken over the secretaryship of the Y.C.C. and C.B.S. of Ireland.

We have altered the date of our annual show from Nov. 20 to Nov. 13, writes Mr. Andrew Wright, sec. Denton C.B.S. Mr. J. Bewick, Stockport, will judge.

Sheffield O.S. will ramble on Aug. 1 to Caldwell Valley. Those intending going are requested to apply to the sec., Mr. E. C. Job, for tickets for tea on or before July 27.

Societies wishing the patronage of the Fife and Kinross Norwich Plainhead Club should communicate with the sec., David H. McGowan, 61, Russell Street, Lochgelly, before Sept. 4.

Mr. J. H. Bevan, sec. of Porth and Rhonda Valley C.B.S., has taken over the business of The Aviaries, 66, Pontypridd Road, Porth, and will be pleased to see any fanciers who will give him a call.

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. C. J. Allen, Hon. Sec. Royal Cornwall, that Mr. F. Collins, one of our most respected fanciers, met with an accident last week at Gwithan, and broke his ankle; we all join in wishing him a speedy recovery.

Entries for Woolton show close on July 27 to Mr. J. Keen, Woolton, Liverpool. Those who intend showing, and who have missed writing for a schedule, may enter from the advert. in this issue. The entrance fee is one shilling.

We have received in an envelope stamped with the Durham post-mark, July 15, a sheet, bearing figures which evidently represent the home-lessons of a school child. Nothing else was in the envelope, and there was no address to which to return the enclosure.

The fifth annual show of the Lochgelly C.B.S. will be held on Oct. 9 in the Drill Hall, and all profits will go to the Scottish branch of the Red Cross Society. The hon. sec., Mr. R. Muir, 123, Station Road, Lochgelly, will be pleased to send particulars and schedules on application.

A pair of White-eyebrowed Wood Swallows have reared one young one in the Western Aviary at the London Zoo. This is the only Wood Swallow of any kind that has been reared during the past forty-five years at the Gardens, and is the second occurrence there of the breeding of Wood-Swallows, the first success being with the same species of Artamus.

In the life-belt shelter at Mapledurham lock on the River Thames a Whitethroat has built her nest and hatched her young on the upper surface of the lowest part of the emergency lifebelt which hangs on the wall, and a Wren's nest is in a coil of rope in the same shelter. The Wren's nest, however, is one of the dummy nests so often built by birds of this species, and has not been tenanted.

A Military Parrot.

One of the Parrots at the London Zoo has picked up the bugle calls it has heard while the soldiers have been drilling in Regent's Park, and will repeat them at command. A use for such a talented bird suggests itself, but it would be awkward if in actual practice it sounded the retreat instead of the attack.

The Travels of a Bird's Nest.

Mr. F. A. Loach, Wolverhampton, kindly sends us a picture of a Thrush's nest, which was built on a 4in. girder under a box wagon belonging to the G.W.R. This nest, containing three eggs, survived the perils of three days' travel with the numerous shuntings incidental to the journey, and was photographed on the arrival of the train at Watford.

A Unique Albido.

"Country Life" of July 10 contains two charming photographs of a White Wren. This is the first case of albinism in Wrens which has come to our notice. Lest a desire for its possession may arise in the mind of any who have a fancy for albino British birds, we may say that the tiny bird is being carefully protected by the farmer upon whose land it was hatched.

We have decided to allot the patronage of the Northern Border Fancy C.C. at our next meeting, August 4, writes Mr. C. Farrer, Hon. Sec., 222, Jefferson St., Newcastle-on-Tyne. Societies who desire same and have not already applied, please do so as early as possible.

I was delighted to see the splendid drawing of my buff Yorkshire on the front page of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. I think it is excellent; he also won first and two specials at Clapham last week. I have had a good year, thanks to the help of CAGE BIRDS, a copy of which is now on the way to my brother, who is in Brazil.—A. J. Clarke, East Dulwich.

Our Front Page Drawings.

Bearded Tits Bred in Captivity.

By a curious coincidence while our note of last week referring to the breeding of birds in captivity was in type, and before the issue was published, we heard with pleasure that Dr. Lovell-Keays, East Hoathley, has been successful in breeding three Bearded Tits in his outdoor aviary. This, we believe, is a first record of the reproduction of the species in captivity, although many aviculturists have long been striving to attain success in the breeding of these charming birds. A notable fact is that, although several pairs of Bearded Tits are flying in the aviary, the parents of the young birds are the pair which won first prize at the Horticultural Hall Show last November, where Dr. Lovell-Keays made his first attempt at exhibiting birds, and when with 13 entries he won some 16 awards, including a diploma and a silver medal; a grand performance for a beginner. We congratulate Dr. Lovell-Keays upon his latest success.

NEXT WEEK'S NUMBER AND A GRAND VOLUME.

Next week we shall, as announced on our front page, have special articles dealing with the colour feeding of Canaries, British Birds, Mules and Hybrids. Birds of all kinds will almost immediately be going into the moult, in fact, some have already started. With few exceptions, birds that are intended for the show bench must be colour-fed to have a fair chance in competition, and a knowledge of the methods adopted by practical fanciers will be of incalculable benefit to those who are doubtful as to the best procedure to adopt in the task which now lies immediately before them. Colour feeding is an easy matter to those who know how to do it, but without that knowledge the effect is more likely to be damaging to the bird's appearance than to improve it.

Next week's CAGE BIRDS, therefore, must by no means be missed, and those who would know even more about the art of colour feeding than can possibly be squeezed into one number of our journal should avail themselves of the wider fund of information contained in the comprehensive volume, OUR CANARIES, which has been described as "The Greatest Book on Canaries in the World." Therein will be found not only the fullest possible directions on colour-feeding, directions which make the task an easy matter to the veriest novice, but a mine of golden information upon every subject in Canarydom.

The work is embellished by 32 Coloured and 32 Black and White Art Plates (all from life by our artist, Mr. Norman), and 133 Photographs and Drawings. A page might easily be filled without doing justice to the many invaluable features of this grand volume of 380 pages, the cash price of which is only eighteen shillings, an outlay which will be saved many times over by its possessor in the avoidance of mistakes and in the improved health and value of his birds, not to speak of its worth to the young exhibitor who would by its possession be on a level with the old fanciers who have spent a life-time in correcting their own errors, and who are now able to show their birds as experts. Here we need not say more than that it is edited by the world-renowned bird expert, Mr. Claude St. John, and that our manager will be pleased to send post free on application an illustrated pamphlet summarising the wonderful information contained between the covers of OUR CANARIES, and particulars of an offer under which this grand volume can be secured by payment of one shilling down and the rest of the purchase money by easy instalments.

INTELLIGENCE IN BIRDS.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER.

NOTE that the short account of two instances of bird intelligence, selected from many similar happenings in my aviary, has once again brought up into the fighting line a sceptical reader. It is very good of Mr. Johnson to explain to us so fully the psychological difference between the words intelligence and conscience, but I think all of us—and I will include in this gallant company the office boy at No. 154, Fleet-street—quite understand that difference. If I did not refer again to conscience in birds, it was not because I thought that the weakest part of my case, but because there was a tendency in the former discussion to treat the question from a religious point of view, which, of course, is absolutely out of place in our periodical CAGE BIRDS. I referred to facts which were well known to our grandfathers, such as the customary meetings of the Storks, at which those individuals who have offended against the laws of the Stork community are executed, and the return of the Puffins and Black Guillemots to their nesting quarters, which frequently takes place on the same day of the year, season after season; yet Mr. Johnson thought that I was imposing on the credulity of your readers. If I had mentioned some of the really wonderful facts concerning birds that modern research has brought to light, as, for instance, that a Snipe can set and apply a surgical bandage to its own broken leg, I wonder whether he would have called me a lunatic or merely a first-class liar. Yet, if he will look up the subject, he will find that photographs have been published of several such bandages, showing how the bird had bound feathers and grass-stems round the limb at the point of fracture, which, adhering and made rigid by congealed blood, had formed an efficient "splint," and that such well-known ornithologists as Mr. J. E. Harting and M. Victor Fatio have examined the evidence and declared themselves convinced. Again, Mr. Johnson could not believe that the Rooks at their spring assemblies discuss nesting sites, but I might easily have put before him the case of one of the foreign Corvidæ, a species which holds an annual autumn meeting, lasting several days and dignified by a prodigious number of speeches. As the birds come to the meeting in family parties (after the breeding season), and leave it in pairs, I think even he would have been convinced that the object of the meeting and the subject of discussion must be matrimony.

Now, let me say a few words—if only to oblige Mr. Johnson—on the subject of conscience and the moral code in birds. The letter from a lady aviculturist was most interesting, as showing that a moral code is in force to-day amongst Canaries, although a long period of captivity tends to reduce and limit the natural intelligence of any species of birds. The letter supported my contention that in most communities of birds mixed marriages are forbidden. The Hybrid-breeder does his very best to corrupt the morals of birddom; he makes his appeal to their strongest instincts at a time of the year when those instincts are strongest; he supports his appeal by every artifice known to him—and yet he very frequently fails. Compare this fact with the early history of our colonies, in which we find that mixed marriages were very common indeed. Who comes out best in this matter? Man or the birds?

Let us go a little more deeply into the subject and note that wherever there is a community of any animals there will and must be found a moral code, for the simple reason that if the members of the community were continually murdering and plundering one another the community would soon cease to exist. Gradually the offensive and defensive alliance between members of the same community grows into a state of law and order and mutual goodwill and affection, of which we find many curious instances among birds. For instance, we have the well known fact that even Hawks will not as a rule make war on their defenceless neighbours, but prefer to go further afield to fill the larder. Mr. R. Kearton is at the present moment touring the country with a series of films illustrating the nesting of some of the smaller species of birds, some of which he states were obtained in the immediate vicinity of a Merlin's nest, and he tells his audience that the former showed no fear whatever of the latter. In some countries nests of the smaller species are actually found forming part of the structure of eagles' nests, in which position they are protected and secure from attack. A good drawing of such a communal nest may be found in the Rev. J. G. Wood's "Homes Without Hands."

Every bird, therefore, which possesses any social tendencies whatever, will be found to have a definite perception of right and wrong, but right and wrong for it will be simply the moral code of the particular community with which it has been associated. Let us note that there is no such thing as an absolute and universal code of right and wrong, either among the so-called lower animals or among ourselves, for there is no vice in any one of our own communities which is not considered a virtue in some other community, and vice-versa. But a very much more remarkable fact, and one which shows the real intelligence and reasoning power of birds, is that a wild bird with its own standard of morality will, when domesticated, frequently comprehend and adopt our own moral code, and that in a very short space of time. Let me quote a note written a few years since by the late Lord Brabourne (who, I regret to say, has lately gallantly given his life for his country on the field of slaughter): "On arrival in Paraguay the menagerie consisted of but one bird, a Red Macaw; beyond the fact that 'his wing was cut he was entirely free. His usual perch was on the half-walled-up side of the hut, and from there he descended with regularity at mealtimes and climbed up on to the back of the nearest chair; if his demands were not attended to with the utmost speed he would draw attention by gently worrying the neck or shoulder of the occupant of the chair. The intelligence with which he understood the reproach or caress implied by the intonation of his name was a marvel. If the former, he would scuttle from off the chair, pausing every yard in his bow-legged shamble to look up-wards and listen for the least sign of relenting, and, if this was detected, he would return to his original spot to pursue his persecutions." And this but a very short time before had been a perfectly wild bird!

Mr. Johnson has something to say about the "thieving Magpie" and its lack of conscience; but, if he will refer back to the time of the sack of Peking, he will find that five of the so-called civilised nations looted this ancient city with great thoroughness (which was all the more reprehensible because the Chinese are an almost defenceless people, who simply desire to live their own lives in their own way, and have no dreams of world-conquest). Some of this loot was advertised in our own papers in the most unblushing manner; the ancestors of the little Pekinese spaniel were stolen from the Imperial Palace. If the Magpie is a thief, at all events it does not talk about "civilisation" or "national aspirations." Let me again ask which come out best in this matter—birds or men?

Lastly, let me say a few words in defence of my Spotted Flycatchers. Mr. Johnson evidently has but a poor opinion of the hen Flycatcher's intelligence, and suggests that she should have scrapped two of her five young and have reared the remaining three. I should like to point out, however, that, on one subject at all events, this little lady was wiser than Mr. Johnson: she knew that it requires two active 'Catchers to rear even one baby 'Catcher. Mr. Johnson even suggests that she had no love for her children, though we all (including the before-mentioned office-boy) know that birds will often sacrifice their own lives for their young.

If one could only make aviculturists see that birds are three parts mind and only one part body, aviculture as a whole would advance, instead of revolving slowly round a fixed point, as it has for a long time past. I fear that there are too many aviculturists who are contented with the rough shell of the avicultural oyster, and have no knowledge of the beautiful pearl which it contains.

Is the Norwich Plainhead Progressing?

NOW we come to the birds of to-day. In evolving the Norwich Canary as it at present stands, it is logical to conclude that there have been times when a few birds may have crept into the prizes which were what we might term one-point birds. That is, they excelled in only one point. I am practically a young fancier, but in retrospect I can recall some birds which the judge had selected because they excelled in some point which he happened to favour.

But that is only to be expected until the perfect bird is evolved. When a judge looks at a number of birds, none of which is perfect, but all of which excel in some given point, then I say the lot of the judge is, like a policeman's, not a happy one, and he generally selects the one excelling in the point which he happens to favour.

That is why there is complaint of "in and out judging," and that is why the birds which I have mentioned previously always got the plums. They were the nearest to perfection in their day; but there were fewer good birds then than now. Mind you, they are few enough to-day. I can count on one hand, and leave my thumb out, the number of birds bred last year which in my opinion are approximately perfect. Still, there are more good birds than formerly, which shows the improvement in general properties. We have the size, the breadth, and the girth, with the bold head on a closely-fitting, silky-feathered body—that is, on the best birds. In short, we have a larger edition of the good old type that a few fanciers with stand-still ideas want us to resuscitate.

When I think of the best birds of ten or twelve years ago, and compare them in my mind with, say, Mr. Davies's buff cock, and one or two recently bred unlighted—well, I think the latter would leave the older birds standing—to use a racing colloquialism—in all the essential points of a Norwich. One or two of the old-time birds may have been better in individual points, but for all-round Norwich properties they stand supreme.

Birds of the Bull-dog Breed.

What we want is a bird of depth and breadth, with no corners on him, with a chest that is not straight down, or square, as in a fat bird. We want a big wide head, round both ways, to commence wide at entrance, and to open out as it finishes to a thick neck. You never see those ugly horns on a bird such as I describe.

Lots have been said about browiness. I do not like a browy bird any more than other people, but I do not want to go to the other extreme in a quest for the bold eye, and breed birds with heads no thicker than a lead pencil. You can't get the thick neck and the wide head, and the broad shoulders, and the essential chubby face on a narrow-headed bird. We must have the chubby cheeks and the bold front when viewed full face. It is a very desirable point. These, and a neck without the least sign of a kink between head and shoulders are the difficult points to breed, and are the fashion; the wise judge who knows his business makes allowance for them accordingly.

No judge who has not bred the variety should be allowed to handle Norwich, because until he has bred them he has not studied them, and therefore does not understand them. That is why we have so much grumbling about awards and about the Norwich deteriorating into a nondescript, and when novices, or those commencing with the variety, see these grumbles in the paper they swallow them as a Red Indian swallows fire-water, never stopping to think if there is mischief in the frothy agitations.

Keep Moving.

We are too old-fashioned, there is too much "stand-still" about us. We have a kind of a feeling that what was good enough for our forefathers is good enough for us. We must progress; and when we see a way to improve the Norwich we must not hesitate because it may entail the introduction of alien blood; but we must be sure it is for the best before we embark on the project.

Of course, we are not all alike. Some of us can see farther than others. Some there are who know what will be the outcome of a given pairing after six generations, and such people will pair up accordingly with one object in view—that of advancing the Norwich Canary.

But there are some who will have nothing to do with outcrossing. They look on the improvements going on, but stick to their old strains and their old types just as Noodle insisted on only imbibing the wisdom of his ancestors; and when they see the progressive fancier outdistancing them, they cry out with a loud voice as if someone were dropping a ton on their pet corn. Their ideas are too conservative. They refuse to sacrifice those ideas on the altar of expediency. Anything in the way of a change is anathema to them—especially if it touches the change in their pockets.

Now, my contention is this: The Norwich Canary has been undergoing an almost imperceptible change for some years, and no doubt a few rough birds have crept into the prizes at lesser shows, and where judges have been engaged who do not know the best points of a Norwich. But where the best kind of birds compete, those that win are generally free from the exaggerated faults some of our critics ascribe to them, and it is the best class of bird we breed to, not the waster.

I do not know what your ideas are, but my idea of the study of the Norwich Plainhead is that no one can obtain a correct, or even an approximately correct perception of a Norwich in a twelvemonth, or in two years. For the man with little cash in his pocket, the one who has to use his brains, it is a long journey. We learn from the exchange of ideas such as these, but we learn most at shows where we can criticise and compare the birds —leastways, that is where I have picked up what little I know.

I can recall the time, not so long ago, when I knew every great fancier of Norwich, from Sam Cook downwards, and, incidentally, when none of them knew me. I used to stand listening to their criticisms and their admirations of the winners with my ears as wide open as a young curate's at a mothers' meeting. I gathered it all in; and the novice who is out to learn could not be taught in a better school.

The Value of Push.

Believe me, if you are going to learn anything in this world you must not stand on ceremony, or study etiquette as taught in the ladies' journals. You must use what Mr. Allsopp calls "push." We in Lancashire call it cheek—same thing; and if there are any new starters present, I should advise them to button-hole some of these great men at the shows and question them. They will soon improve their perceptive faculties, and they will find that their knowledge, when it is gained, will be more useful than that of the man who nses his purse to get to the top. His birdy education is generally of the ready-made order, and generally about as useful and reliable.

At the close of the paper a very interesting discussion ensued, in which some of our oldest and most successful Norwich exhibitors, including Messrs. S. Cook, J. Raynes, W. N. Turner, and B. Clegg, took part. A large number of the members, though exhibitors of other varieties, had been keenly interested, and showed their appreciation by the hearty vote of thanks which was accorded Mr. Johnson for the able manner in which he dealt with the subject.

BIRD FOODS AND THEIR MIXING.

Notes on the preparation of food for insectivorous, frugivorous and nectar-feeding birds, given in a chat with the members of the London C.B.A., by Mr. Allen Silver, F.Z.S.

IT is not my intention this evening to in any way dogmatise as far as the feeding of birds is concerned, but rather to demonstrate to you the manner in which I find it convenient to prepare food for certain species. There are more ways of killing a cat than the unorthodox one of "choking it with cream," and experiences culled from numerous collections of birds owned by my friends, coupled with the practical working concerned with my own, lead me to believe that the methods I am about to demonstrate are both economical and quite suitable.

I need not go into the details of the recipes for insectivorous bird foods, which as you know are mostly composed of biscuit and preserved animal matter, the latter consisting usually of meat fibre, the dried bodies of "water-boatmen," sold under the name of dried flies, dried ant cocoons (so-called "ants' eggs"), and in some cases ground silkworm pupae and egg in a preserved state. It is also unnecessary for one to state that such foods are seldom employed in a perfectly dry state, so that it is with the mixing for use with which we are tonight principally concerned.

The Necessary Equipment.

To be brief, one only requires a roomy round bowl for mixing, a pie-dish for soaking, if such is necessary, a coarse carrot grater, a knife, and a clean board either to chop or grate upon. To most people in these days time is of some importance, and it is as well to get into the way of quick but thorough manipulation rather than to waste time "fiddling about" with the food for perhaps 15 minutes. You will observe that it is quite possible to thoroughly incorporate and turn out an acceptable and nutritious mixture with as little trouble as can be imagined.

Before demonstrating this I will point out the character and use of the several ingredients I have before me. The first is a game or poultry meal, which should contain no oyster shell, and which can be used as a base for feeding large and not particularly delicate soft-feeding birds. The second is a finer meal, which can be used for smaller birds. Either should be swollen only with hot water, and the requisite amount of dry soft food such as you see here (which is a good grade insectivorous bird food) can be added according to the groups of birds you may keep.

Instead of using game meal, you can supply with good success certain proprietary foods which can be purchased in packets at about 3d. a lb. Keepers of large birds, such as Starlings, Thrushes, Blackbirds, and Crows will find such a food or game meal suitable for a base, and the leavings from the food pots of birds that are eating more expensive food can be added to it. Larks, Pipits, and Wagtails thrive very well on the finer meal very slightly damped, to which, of course, the dry insectivorous food should be added more generously.

Passing over that part relating to the use of a base for cheapening or breaking down food, I now come to the mixing of a dry food made up in due proportions and ready for use. To do this in such a way that it is acceptable to most birds is to contrive that it shall be neither sticky, pasty, stodgy, nor too dry, but that it shall present the form of a crumbling but moist granular mass. There are several methods which can be employed in order to bring this about. The first is the water method.

Various Moistening Methods.

This simply consists of the addition of hot or cold water to the dry food until it reaches the desired consistency when stirred. This method is a rough and ready way of preparation, and will answer when other materials for giving it the proper consistency are unobtainable, but is one that I do not habitually employ or recommend.

Carrot is probably the most convenient and beneficial excipient of all to employ in the making up of a dry food for use, and you will find that when grated a tablespoonful is sufficient under ordinary circumstances to incorporate with a light handful of dry food.

Banana is also probably as good as anything to mix with the food, and, as you see, the method consists only of the proper manipulation of peeled fruit added to dry food. Two inches of ordinary banana will be sufficient as a mixing agent for two handfuls of dry food.

The grease method is similar in idea; i.e., dry food is kneaded with unsalted lard or stiffish beef dripping until it is soft and slightly crumbling. Such a method, except for aviaries where the birds get plenty of exercise, I do not recommend for a number of reasons which time will not allow me to discuss just now.

The chopped lettuce or rape seedling method is usually employed when carrots are unobtainable, and amounts to the very fine chopping and mixing of the succulent leaves of lettuce, endive, spinach, dandelion, or rape cress with dry food.

Mr. Silver, in addition to the foregoing, pointed out that the main point in feeding was that of arriving at a well-balanced ration, and, where possible, to avoid following the whims of all and sundry. He also showed the company present how to prepare food for Tanagers, Sugar-birds, Lovebirds, and generally discussed points of interest relating to the businesslike handling of sticky food and fruit in the bird-room in such a manner that birds could partake freely of either without soiling their plumage.

HOW I KEEP MY SOFTBILLS.

By J. W. SAYWELL (Nottingham).

ANOTHER valuable food is wasp grubs, but these are expensive to buy, so I advise fanciers to gather their own. I don't cure my wasp grubs, except those I wish to keep for winter use; these I place in the oven for about five minutes, then store in a dry place until required. I do not let any live wasps go, but keep taking the most advanced grubs and give them straight to the birds, and I have never found any harmful results.

Pests May be Made Useful.

In any garden you can quickly discover quantities of aphides (green fly) and green caterpillars, which are easily collected on a sheet of paper and placed in a tin to carry home; these are particularly relished by the birds. Last summer the hedges round about Nottingham were infested with the blight of the small silver moth, and the caterpillars were to be found in clusters of twenty or thirty, which made it an easy matter to collect a quantity, and my birds had another agreeable change of diet.

I find the stock food described suitable for most of my birds, although there are isolated cases which may need special treatment. If a bird is not thriving as it should, and wasting its food, it is a good plan to give the foods separately; find out which it rejects, and these can be deleted from the mixture. Then for a change occasionally add a little finely-chopped vegetable such as lettuce, chickweed, watercress, or other green foods in season, or a cold boiled potato.

The Best is the Cheapest.

In all foods I find that the best is the cheapest, as if an inferior food is offered they do not relish it as they should do, and a considerable amount is wasted. The trouble does not end here, for to moult and show birds successfully they must have the very best food procurable to enable them to grow and develop their plumage rapidly and bring out all the colour which only high feeding can do.

On receiving a fresh consignment of dried flies I noticed that they were rather high-flavoured and anything but a palatable dish, so in order to overcome this I make use of fruit syrups to moisten my mixture instead of water. We all know that Softbills feed on fruits as they come in season, and I find the syrups are very much enjoyed, so I make special use of these, especially damson, blackberry, and elderberry. These are the most desirable, as they bring out the rich colour so sought for on the show bench, and do away with the necessity of giving them any colour-food. In these days of dried and preserved fruits it is an easy matter to have a supply of one sort or another, but I give all the fresh fruits as they come in season.

A Timely Hint.

About the end of August the birds become restless and want to be off, and if your birds have moulted then, you must do your best to keep them quiet, or they quickly do themselves a lot of damage. I have never heard of any particular remedy for this restlessness, but I will give you my method.

First place small twigs and branches in the cage to afford them a certain amount of diversion. Thread plenty of these through the wires, as this is where the damage is done. Then at night put your room into total darkness, as it is during the night that the bulk of migration takes place. If a light is left in the room, however, the birds can see what they are doing, and this often saves them from knocking about.

It is most essential to get your birds moulted early. I give saffron tea daily in the water, and this generally brings about the desired result. At this time they should have an extra supply of live food to build up the system and to develop the new feather. A bath should be given on every suitable day, as this brings and keeps them in condition, and a few drops of glycerine added to the water will help to bring the much desired sheen and gloss, without which no bird can expect to win.

A good condition tonic: 1 pint port, 1 lb. honey, 1 oz. citrate of iron and ammonia. Heat the wine, add honey, stir well until dissolved, then place the citrate in the liquor (the latter takes a little time to dissolve), stir well, and when cool bottle up tightly, and it is ready for use. Moisten the soft food with a little of this tonic daily.

In conclusion, let me impress on the fancier not to overcrowd, but limit the number of birds to the number to which he can give proper attention. It is far better to have three or four specimens in tip-top show condition than a dozen specimens and not one fit for the show bench.

The Keeping of Softbills.

SIR.—Mr. Saywell's article, "How I Keep My Softbills," is very interesting, and I should be glad if he would kindly answer the following questions. He writes of catching his own birds by means of traps. What is the best kind of trap to use, and when can I catch Skylarks without breaking the bird laws? Does he always use traps, or sometimes bird lime? Are the "gentles" he recommends the ordinary maggots which you can breed from meat or fish, and are these good for all small birds? Are the flies which he catches for his birds the ordinary housefly?

Birds in the Firing Line.

A Tame Magpie as Mascot.

SIR.—I received a letter from my brother who is serving with the 1st Scottish Rifles at the front, which may interest your readers. He says: "We have a good mascot in the trenches just now. About a month ago, while we were in the reserve trenches, we caught a young Magpie. We reared it, and it is quite tame now. It goes in and out of the trenches with us, sitting on one of the soldiers' packs, and I may tell you it was reared under shell fire. Sometimes he flies out towards the German lines, and comes back again with the snipers firing at him. The Skylarks are singing lovely; they have their nests between the two lines." My brother is a regular reader of CAGE BIRDS, and he joins with me in wishing your paper every success.

G. COCKBURN.

Another Case of Twins.

SIR.—On looking through my stock on June 27 I found that a Norwich hen which was rearing 3 young 25 days old, had laid an egg in the old nest. Having taken the cock bird away from previously setting her, I at once gave her a new nest, took the egg away, and put in a cock bird which had not been used. Copulation at once took place, and the next morning she laid a very large egg, the largest I have ever seen, quite as big as a Thrush's. As she did not lay any more, I sat her on the one egg on June 30, and on July 12 I tested the egg and found it fertile. Visions of a very large youngster, or perhaps a freak, caused me to look at nest on July 14, when I was just in time to see two young birds struggle out of the one egg. They are now five days old, and for their age seem to be quite as large and as strong as any I have ever bred. What surprises me most is the egg being fertile, as it was laid within 16 hours of the cock bird being put to her. Is this a record?

The Cuckoo as a Bird of Prey.

SIR.—As a reader of the Belfast "Northern Whig," and a regular subscriber to CAGE BIRDS, I am sending you a part of a letter sent by a correspondent to that paper. The Editor says in a footnote, "This is a most interesting and important note, and further details would be welcome." To me the note is not only interesting, but amazing, for I have always thought that in the first place the Cuckoo was quite harmless, and, secondly, that it did not "call" in July. Everyone knows, of course, that the Sparrow Hawk and the Cuckoo are often mistaken one for the other, but Sparrow Hawks do not call "Cuckoo."

"During the present month a friend has given me a strange experience of his with this bird—the Cuckoo. At his place are a number of young turkeys housed in a coop in a grass field. His attention was drawn to a bird attacking them, and he found one mangled and in a dying condition. He lay in wait for a repetition of the offence, and there and then shot the guilty bird, which proved to be a Cuckoo. A few days afterwards a strange thing happened, no fewer than three Cuckoos visited the place boldly emitting their well-known call, and had to be driven off, but not before another young turkey was killed. Young turkeys running about among the grass resemble the young of some of our game, and is it possible that the Cuckoo preys on these last?"

IRISHMAN.

To Exterminate Lice in Canaries.

SIR.—There still seems to be some uncertainty as to the best means of destroying the bird louse. Some of your correspondents seem to be thinking of the red-mite—which is quite a different matter. Before the best treatment can be decided upon it is necessary to know something of the life history of the beast, and I believe the exact details have not so far been investigated. It is fair to assume that the cycle of reproduction follows to some extent that of the human louse. It is found that the eggs of the latter take about a week to hatch, and the young begin to breed at about a fortnight old. The adult louse is killed by being deprived of its food, i.e., human blood, for about a week. Now, it is found that the paraffin bodies are the most powerful agents in killing both the louse and its eggs. Unfortunately, a bird has a very delicate skin, and immersion in these liquids would be dangerous. Hence, the treatment recommended by your experts, viz., three hand washes at intervals of a week or ten days, in dilute antiseptics, appears to be the best available treatment. I would remind your correspondent that it is by no means easy to get the feathers thoroughly saturated, as they must be, with a disinfectant, and that all the infected birds must be done at the same time. Also the cages and surroundings, which might possibly harbour a stray louse, should be treated with petrol, or turpentine and spirit, on each occasion that the birds are washed. The aim must be to exterminate every louse and every egg as it hatches. It must be remembered that the young larvae are probably invisible when first hatched. Insect powder, quassia bathis, spraying with potassium sulphide, etc., are only temporary measures, and almost certainly followed by recurrence. As regards the disinfectant used—the kind is not important. It should be used as strong as possible, consistent with the fact that you cannot keep it out of the eyes. So try it in your own eye first!

INTERESTED.

SIR.—Some time ago you gave an illustration of an appliance used by some Australian bird fancier, and I am, to the best of my ability, reproducing same. It is composed of a 1lb. glass jam jar, Fig. 1, to which is fitted a piece of wood as Fig. 2. Then another piece of wood, as Fig. 3, fixed so as to turn as required. Method of application: First get the following mixed at any chemist: 3ozs. pyrethrum powder, 1/2oz. borax, and 15 drops of eucalyptus oil; put all in bottle, then catch birds one at a time, put head through hole and bring clasp down just below head, and insert the bird's body into bottle, taking care feet are well inside; put the wood to fit tight into bottle, hold same sideways, and gently turn round. The bird will flutter, and will shake the powder all over its body (see that it does). Leave it in bottle for about 5 minutes, then take the whole top of bottle off, pull bird gently out, take it in the left hand, undo clasp, pull its head through hole, and put it into a clean cage, and I guarantee not an insect is left. An egg or two might hatch, so it is best to examine bird in two days' time. I can lend "Novice" appliance all ready made if he cares to remit postage, 4d.

O. C. SMITH.

SIR.—I have for the last thirty years been a keeper of many kinds of birds and poultry, and have occasionally been troubled with mite, etc., and in former years tried every recommendation, but the only certain remedy either for poultry houses or cage birds is oxalic acid. I get 4ozs. from the chemist, dissolve in water and make a lime wash, then add about 1/2 pint of the acid and treat the cages, then let thoroughly dry before returning the birds; or, better still, let them remain empty for a day or two. I have given this simple receipt to property owners and lime-washers where houses have been left in a filthy state with live stock, and every instance completely cleared. Where there is a wood floor, add the oxalic acid to the water when washing the floor, and there are no more red mite, fleas, etc., to trouble your pets. Good luck to CAGE BIRDS. It's interesting.

OLD CALABAR
BIRD SEEDS AND PARROT FOOD
IN PACKETS EVERYWHERE.
OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENG.

SIR.—First keep cages particularly clean. Get a small camel hair brush, and just a little turpentine. Brush this well into the joints and ends of perches. The nest box or pan I always dust well with Sanitas, as it is non-poisonous; it is quite safe, and I may say I never get any lice in my nests. Wishing CAGE BIRDS success.

F. C. HOWARD.

SIR.—The very best thing is Keating's powder. Dip a piece of wadding in the powder, rub well into the birds, then sprinkle some about a piece of old linen or white cloth, wrap the bird in it for a few minutes, put it into a clean cage for a few hours, then remove to its own clean cage, so that if any have dropped out in the first cage they will not get on the bird again. Do this again a few days afterwards, and the lice will be exterminated. I would rather have to deal with grey lice in my birds any day than red mite.

Mrs. LYDFORD.

SIR.—The way I manage to keep without them is to get some disinfectant fluid from the Corporation for the purpose of saturating sheets or bedding, clothing, etc.; one cupful to six buckets of water is quite sufficient to wash the bird-room. For my racks, the outside of cages, and for the perches I use the disinfectant fluid without adding any water. I do inside all cages with lime wash and sheep dip, and I put my nest-pans in the fluid for one day and then take them out and let them dry before using any of them. I do the same with my nest linings at the bottom where they fit in nest-pan. When my hens have gone to nest I use Keating's insect powder, and also when the young are about 4 days old. If any fancier will take the trouble he can keep without lice or red mite. Any fancier can inspect my cages at any time. Wishing CAGE BIRDS all success,

The Future of the Horticultural Hall Show.

Great Joint Show Again to be Held.

SIR.—May I ask you to announce in the valuable columns of CAGE BIRDS that the Horticultural Hall show will again be held this year. As last year, it will be a joint show of the L.C.B.A., F.B.E.L., and N.B.B. and M.C. This decision was arrived at during a meeting of sub-committees of the three societies convened for the purpose. Primarily this great exhibition is run solely in the interests of exhibitors, therefore it devolves on them to exert their energies and combine by their efforts to assure success for the venture, more particularly when I point out that the joint societies had a tremendous deficit to cover last year.

I have recently been appointed secretary of the L.C.B.A., and, although I cannot but confess that through a combination of circumstances matters appertaining to the last show were not concluded as quickly as the officials would have desired, it must be duly considered that we are passing through troublous times. I would crave exhibitors' pardon, and ask them to accept assurances from the joint committees that, failing some most vital interference from Messrs. "Bill" and Co., there will be no recurrence this year. I have despatched all diplomas and awards of merit gained at the last show, but should any exhibitors have been inadvertently overlooked, I hope they will communicate with me.

Home-Grown Canary Seed.

SIR.—I should be very much obliged if any reader could tell me through CAGE BIRDS about what time canary seed would be considered ripe enough to cut. I have about two roods of the seed, and it seems fairly good, although it has suffered a bit in length through the exceptional eight weeks without any rain. A "rood" here measures 64 square yards. I intend to cut it and leave it for a few days outside and then thrash it, as recommended in CAGE BIRDS by a contributor early this year. I enclose a few heads, but do not think that there is much in them yet. I have also a good rood of charlock, which seem to be doing extra well. I shall gather this when I see the lower pods about to burst. Is charlock a seed suitable for Canaries? I gave them a good bit last year, and they ate it with seemingly more relish than summer rape. Any help on the above questions would greatly oblige yours,

H. HALL.

Macclesfield.

(The sample heads sent are certainly not nearly ripe, and the seed grains have very little in them. After the rain of the past week an improvement in the bulk of the kernel should soon be manifest, and a few days of bright sun afterwards should ripen the seed.—Editor CAGE BIRDS.)

The Ups and Downs of Hybrid Breeding.

SIR.—As a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS I am particularly interested in the hybrid news. Hybrid breeding having been my fancy for the past 50 years. I suppose there are others who, like me, are glad to hear of other people's fortunes, and are interested in their failures. Mine have been amongst the failures so far this year, not having yet bred a Hybrid, and having had but one good egg which nearly hatched—not quite. A hen Bullie sat on four eggs in the early part of June, all unfertile. I gave her two canary eggs to go on with when I discovered that her own were no good. She sat her full time, hatched the Canaries out, and has fed them well, with the result that the young ones are three or four days in advance of the others of the same nest fed by Canaries. I was induced to try this plan through having some years ago succeeded in breeding and rearing three Canaries with a Bullfinch hen. It is very interesting to watch them feed, as it is usually about two mouthfuls, then stop for perhaps 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour, then repeat same as before. The Bullie is now sitting on five of her own fine eggs with Goldfinch. I don't think it is his fault if these are not good, he is serving two hen Bullies with vigour; they are kept in a garden aviary in cages 46 inches long, 30 high, and 18 deep. She fed on egg-food, but cooked after a method of my own in a different way to any I have seen before, plenty of green food, and occasionally thistle seed. Would it be of interest to you to know how she gets on with the nest of eggs she is now sitting on? The last egg was laid this morning, July 19.

J. F.

(We shall be glad to hear how the Bullfinch hen progresses, and perhaps our correspondent will give his own method of preparing his egg-food. The interchange of knowledge is to the general advancement of bird keeping.—Editor.)

RADCLIFFE C.B.S.

F.F. show, July 3, Conservative Club, Church St., Radcliffe; about 80 birds staged. Mr. R. Barrass, Rochdale, judged, and gave every satisfaction. The society has about 30 members, and is in a sound financial condition, every member doing his best to help, and the members hope soon to hold an open show. We had a good attendance of old bird fanciers from surrounding districts, and they gave the room great praise, saying it was an ideal room for a bird show, and promised to give us support if we held an open show. At the annual show, first Sat. in Dec., we are having an open class for pet birds in the district, by which means we hope to arouse more interest in the townspeople and get more members. Fanciers within a radius of seven miles from Radcliffe Bridge are welcome to any of our meetings, first Tuesday in month.

WADEBRIDGE.

This show, held by the Wadebridge F.A., was run for the benefit of the Blue Cross Fund, in the Town Hall, July 14, but we regret to say that owing to the paucity of entries, all the open classes were cancelled. Other sections made a grand display, one of the best ever seen in Cornwall. The show was excellently managed by the committee, and well supported by the public. Mr. E. Mitchell made a most obliging and painstaking sec., and was well supported by his committee. We only regret the cage bird fancy did not share in the success achieved. Mr. C. A. House judged.

Local Can. (10): 1, 2, vhc, he, Wills, very smart, racy, good feathered yell. Bord., and a long neat feathered, stylish buff Yorks.; 3, Dockery, long, slim, yell. green Yorks., good style and feather; res, Pearce. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual F.F. show, Lamb Hotel, July 10. In spite of the fact that several of the members are serving their country, and that it has been rather a poor breeding season, there was an excellent entry of 78. Quality was very good, and we were very pleased to see a revival in the Crest section. For some seasons this variety has been rather neglected, but here Crests were quite a feature, 19 being staged. Mr. T. J. King's clear body G.C. was greatly admired, and won special for best Crest and also for best bird in show. Mr. J. H. Payne judged.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Second annual Y.B. show, Kingsland Assembly Hall, July 7, with close on 100 entries, and some of the birds will be heard of again if mounted well. Mr. Page put down some very good Norwich, which showed the colour coming through nicely, as did Mr. Foyle. Mr. Love won challenge cup with a very nice young Norwich, a gem. Yorks. were a lot of gems, and time will bring them up together. Novice classes had some good stuff. British had some good birds among them, and the foreign, exhibited by Mr. Slade, were perfection in feather and condition. The sec. and committee worked well; all was ready for the judge in good time, and the awards were soon placed on the cages. Mr. W. Haysom, Southampton, judged, and his awards were well received.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

F.F. show held Crown Hotel, July 10. A large number of visitors present. Mr. J. Pritchard, Abertillery, judged, and gave every satisfaction. The society is only in its first season, but there is every sign of it becoming one of the foremost in Wales and Monmouthshire; it is now between twenty and thirty members strong. Mr. G. Broome, who was sec. to the Abertillery C.B.S. when it was formed, is now in harness at Blaenavon, and if the members will rally round him, they need not fear about the future of their society. Sp. best bird in show was won by Mr. Latham with a grand cl. yell. Yorks. Yorks. were a very keen lot, there being some good birds staged. Norwich were also very good, and there was a fine class of Rollers. The wee gems and Brit. completed a very nice F.F. show. The room was one of the best, and credit is due to the members for the way they dressed the room with the palms and plants.

Nor. Cl. or Tkd.: 1, Broome; 2, Gilbert. Mkd. or Varieg.: 1, 3, vhc, Broome; 2, 4, c, Thomas and Durham; he, Gilbert. Yorks. Cl. or Tkd.: 1, sp, 2, 3, he, Latham; 4, vhc, Jones; c, Morris. The bad luck has still continued and there was only a poor entry.—A. W. Knaggs.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Young bird show, at Cloek House, Clapham, July 14. Some grand specimens were staged, Yorks. being particularly strong. There was a nice class of Hybrids and some grand British, conspicuous amongst which were a very fine Blackcap, the property of Mr. Vale, and a grand Brambling, exhibited by Mr. Francis. The Blackcap sang splendidly throughout the evening. There were several fine foreign birds, the pick of which was an Indigo Bunting shown in splendid colour and condition by Madame Madewell. As Mr. Norman, who had been elected to judge, had the misfortune to be late, Mr. Vale judged the Canaries, and A. R. Coe judged the Hybrids, British and Foreign, and the awards gave apparent satisfaction. The chief winners were: Nor., Mr. Greenland; Yorks., Mr. Clark; Brit. and For., Madame Madewell and Messrs. Francis, Cooper and Vale.—A. R. Coe.

Meeting and 6th annual show of young birds, July 10, large Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross. Entries totalled 83, an increase of 49 on last year's total. Quality was very high, and the classes were well filled, the "wee gems" leading in numbers. Mr. A. Sloan (Possilpark) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

summer rape. In addition give separately every third day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar. On the intervening days give first half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, white millet, maw, teazle, and broken groats, and next a fairly liberal supply of wild seed heads, especially shepherd's purse, plantain, and mouse ear. Continue this for a fortnight, then miss a week, and repeat for another fortnight, and continue thus until the bird is nearly through its natural moult. Allow it to bathe as freely as it likes, and slightly moisten the bare places with sulphur ointment once a week, but as much as possible avoid soiling the surrounding plumage. In the drinking water add 20 drops of Fluid Magnesia every second day for a week, then miss a week, and repeat for another week. After this give 20 drops of Chemical Food twice a week for a month. (2) Of course there may be such a thing as young Canaries eating too much, but it is not very likely to occur, as prior to the end of the first moult they will bear a lot of "feeding up." You will do no wrong in allowing them access to an unlimited supply good sound canary seed. It is only the extra tit-bits and luxurious fare that you need limit. Soaked rape is a very wholesome and nourishing food, but it would be as well to limit the supply somewhat to the bird that subsists entirely on it, until she varies it with a little canary now and again. Give the usual supply of canary, and give only a small teaspoonful of rape each day, and gradually reduce this quantity by one-half, until you find she eats the canary freely.

MRS. A. B. NEWTON.—Replied to by post. SORE AND SCALY LEGS (G.R.P.).—(1) It is quite a usual thing for the scales on the legs and feet to become coarse and enlarged as the birds approach old age, and yours is not young now. With some birds the growth is much more pronounced, and also takes place earlier in life than in others, and it is often accompanied by much tenderness whilst the birds are moulting. You can relieve it considerably by bathing in a lukewarm solution of extract of wych hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water—for a few minutes daily, or every second day, according to the urgency of the case, until sufficiently relieved. After bathing, dry carefully, and gently anoint with a little boracic ointment. You may also add 20 drops of Fluid Magnesia to the water for two consecutive days to cool the blood. (2) No, the trouble is not in any way infectious to other birds.

INSECT PESTS (E.V.).—Thanks for your letter. Sorry that my fears that the advice might be too late were only too well grounded. You need not have the least fear about using the disinfectant as long as you rinse and dry the cages afterwards. With using it regularly you should be quite free from insect pests, especially lice. There are only two insect pests that may be regarded as common enemies of the canary breeder, though I note you speak of being troubled with various kinds. The chief enemies are red mites, for which you should overhaul the cages; and grey lice, for which hand-washing is the quickest remedy. You may glean something from the present correspondence, but you must guard against falling between two stools. Your present method, if properly employed, will not be easily beaten. Very glad to learn the history of the bird with the damaged beak, which is very interesting, and shows how adaptable nature can be.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

AILING GREENFINCH (Alicia M. Cook).—As a rule, insects are the cause of the trouble that your bird is suffering from, but if you are quite certain he has none, a change of diet may improve matters. I would therefore advise you to give him a spoonful of soaked seeds daily, or seeds that have commenced to germinate. If you damp some rape and teazle and keep it in a warm place, it will commence to sprout in a few days. Before making this change give three drops of Syrup of Rhubarb and as much Glauber's Salts as will cover a threepenny-piece dissolved in his drinking water. I am doubtful if the bare place will be covered with feathers again until the bird moults, which he should do shortly; but, anyway, the change of treatment would be beneficial.

TO STEADY A MULE (John Geep).—You omitted to send your address. Kindly do so on a postcard. You can only steady your bird by repeatedly handling the cage, talking to him, and giving a grain or two of hemp or sunflower, or other seed that he is fond of whenever you go near him. Fortunately, there is no time so good as the present for this training process, and it should be continued all through the moult. You appear to be feeding him quite correctly to get him through. Let him bathe frequently. There is nothing better for the plumage than plenty of soft water. If you are going to colour-feed him you should commence at once, before he actually starts to cast his feathers. Glad to hear you are doing so well with your Mule breeding.

TREATMENT OF LINNET (Linnet Lover).—Your treatment is not generous enough, and unless you make a change in his diet you will lose him during the moult. Make up the following mixture: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape, charlock, and linseed 1 part each. Let him have this as his staple food. Give a little lightly cracked hemp three times a week. Make another mixture of gold of pleasure, dandelion, maw, mustard, and lettuce, and give a teaspoonful on the days you are not giving the hemp. Discontinue the milk sop, or only give it occasionally, and then mix two drops of cod liver oil in it. Supply all kinds of seeding grasses, shepherd's purse, and any other wild seeds you can collect.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (W. W.).—Do not spray your breeding mealworms. Keep them in a warm corner and disturb them as little as possible at this time of the year.

THE BEST SINGING BIRD (F. Moulding).—It is quite a matter of choice as to what bird you have for singing. Tastes differ, and some prefer the sharp notes of the Finch family, while others think much of the Softbills. If you have had no experience in the keeping of birds, I would advise you to try either of the following: the Linnet, Skylark, or Song Thrush. The Linnet is a consistent singer and easy to keep, as his principal food is seed, and if you are fond of the Finch song, you cannot do better than have one. The Skylark and Song Thrush would both be known to you; they are grand songsters, but need to be fed on soft food mixed fresh every morning in hot weather twice a day. Both these birds are very popular as songsters, and of the two you would probably do the better with the Skylark. A good one is difficult to beat as a continuous performer. Whichever you decide upon, I would advise you to send to this office for the Nutsell Booklet on the bird; it will give you much more information than I can in these short notes.

HOW BIRDS MOULT (Longton).—When seeking information the rules is for readers to send us their name and address. Will you please let us have it on a postcard. There is no hard and fast rule about birds moulting. Young birds commence by casting the feathers down each side of the breast. Old birds usually throw off the large wing and tail feathers first, but if a bird has accidentally knocked out, or had plucked, certain feathers, these grow first and frequently the moult will continue from that particular place and extend over the body. Invariably in all birds the head is the last part to finish.

COMPANION FOR LINNET (Auntie).—Sorry you have lost one of your Linnets. I expect the one you have left is sickening for the moult. Unless you see how a Linnet can spoil the song of an ordinary Canary. Personally, I should be more afraid of the Canary spoiling my Linnet's song. All Goldfinches do not worry the wires of the cage, although I am afraid the majority of them do; but a thoroughly steady bird is all right and a bright cheerful singer. If you are afraid of the restless nature of the Goldie, why not try a Greenfinch? They are common, therefore easily obtainable, and many of them are quite nice singers; so are the Buntings, although the song is inclined to be monotonous, but they are very persistent and quite easy to keep, as they will eat very little beside Canary seed.

THRUSH LOSING PLUMAGE (Mrs. Richards).—It is quite evident that your bird is suffering from insects called grey lice. These eat the feathers off close to the skin, which accounts for your not seeing any living about. As you are a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I would advise you to study the correspondence columns, as just now several letters are appearing upon this very subject. You could try one of the methods advocated. With a single bird you should not have much trouble in clearing him; the difficulty comes when one has a whole roomful affected. Now is a good time to attend to him, as he will soon be moulting, and if you get rid of the insects, he will come out of his moult with a full plumage. Attend to his general health; give an aperient such as Epsom or Glauber salts, as much as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonfuls of water, after which feed him rather generously, give a little egg food two or three times a week, mealworms or other insects and fruit.

REED BUNTING (E. P. Matthey).—The Reed Bunting is a sedate, and must therefore be exhibited in the class provided for Buntings or for seed-eating species. These birds will live almost exclusively on canary seed, but should have other seeds offered, such as small oats, rape, cracked hemp, maw, and grass seeds. You should also give a few ants' eggs, live ones, if possible, if not, soak some dried ones in milk, and put them on a cloth to drain before using. If you can get him to eat a little soft food, it will assist greatly in keeping him in condition. They do not care much for green food, but will sometimes nibble a little piece, when given fresh.

CATCHING FINCHES AND BUNTINGS ("Cinéma").—As a reader of CAGE BIRDS, I am afraid you have missed reading many of the articles published from time to time on the catching of wild birds. A single bird or two can frequently be captured by the simple cage trap with a compartment underneath for the call bird. The spring net trap is another simple contrivance, although mostly used to catch softbills, the bait consisting of a lively mealworm. Lined twigs set near water or a similar place much frequented by birds are frequently successful, but the method mostly used by professional catchers is the clap net, in which part of a flock is frequently caught with one pull. The time to catch is regulated by the bye-laws in operation in the county in which you propose catching. In some counties the rarer birds are protected all the year round. August is rather early for bird snaring, as some of the Finches are still nesting and the majority are in moult. It would be as well to make enquiries in the district you proposed staying, before making a start. Lists of the birds scheduled can generally be obtained at the police station.

HYBRID BREEDING IN AVIARY (Novice).—The most successful Hybrid breeders use cages or small aviaries for breeding operations, and only allow one pair in each cage or aviary. In an aviary the size of yours I fear you would not have success with more than the one pair of British birds. You could use it for Mule breeding, putting in three hen Canaries and a cock Goldfinch, and in that case the Canaries could be allowed to rear their own young. Nesting places for them would be boxes, nest pans, or wicker cages. Hang up plenty, so that they can make a selection. You should not have much difficulty with your birds that have been wrongly fed. Give them a daily allowance of the seed they are particularly fond of, and reduce the quantity until you get to the limit. Give other seeds in another vessel, and let them always have some before them. It is impossible for me to tell you "what seeds to feed all your birds on" unless I know what all your birds are. If you send me a list I may be able to assist you. The birds you mention do much better by themselves, either in pairs or several pairs together. They are not always safe with British birds. You will find particulars as to the treatment of freshly-caught birds in the Nutsell dealing with the species in which you are interested. These Nutsells are 2d. post free, or twopence each from your local newsagent.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

IN POOR PLUMAGE (Heard).—Such cases always progress slowly, and you must persevere with the treatment. As it is showing a dislike to the porridge, discontinue it—it will be better without it—and as it is fond of slightly moistened sponge cake, give this, putting five spots of C.L.O. Emulsion thereon, and then lightly dust with flowers of sulphur. If it will take this, give it a fair-sized piece twice daily. As regards seed, try it with the following: Giant Spanish canary, oats, hemp, and sunflower seed in equal parts; well mix, add half-pint of shelled monkey-nuts to each quart of mixture and again mix. Green peas and any kind of English and foreign fruit it will take can be supplied freely. Give it several drops of tasteless castor-oil direct to the mouth, from the end of a feather, piece of stick, or quill, or soak it into a piece of sponge cake if it will take it better that way. Give, say, 5 drops daily till the bowels have been fully moved, then the fluid magnesia given at intervals, should suffice to keep them properly regulated, if not you must have recourse to the castor oil again. Do not give milk in any form now if you can avoid it. Give it a handful of flowering and seeding grass occasionally to pick over. The trouble has evidently been going on some time. It can safely be assumed that there is something radically wrong with a bird that does not moult properly for several years. Now, you can only persevere with the treatment given here, in conjunction with that of our previous reply. Give it outdoor treatment on all suitable days, but do not subject it to cool winds or place it in an exposed position. Report progress again about the end of next month.

IS IT A COCKATOO? (Austin).—The description you give is that of the Rose-breasted (Roseate) Cockatoo. Other popular names in use among dealers and others are: Australian Grey Parrot, and Australian Grey and Red Parrot. You must note that the advert. you enclose does not mention African Grey Parrot. One of the latter, with the abilities, qualifications, etc., ascribed to your bird on the list, would have a minimum value of £5, and the price it was listed at would tell most people that it was not an African Grey Parrot. Of course, if you asked for an African Grey, and you have been sent an Australian, you have your remedy, though one could not speak definitely without the whole correspondence. Our legal expert would give you an opinion if you forwarded him copies of all correspondence and lists—your own as well as the vendor's—relating to the matter. While the description you send is certainly that of the Rose-breasted Cockatoo, there are surely, in such a town as yours, many fanciers who could name the bird for you if you let them see it, and so place the matter beyond doubt.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING. ARE THEY A PAIR? (Dereham).—Yes, they are a true pair. The cere of the hen becomes more and more blue as she goes out of breeding condition. As she returns to breeding condition the cere will become brown again. The cere of the hen in breeding condition varies, in individual birds, from a dark cream colour to a ruddy brown. Budgerigars are a gregarious species, and never settle down to nesting so quickly when kept in single pairs as when two or more pairs are kept together. Though many Budgerigars have been bred in cages, they always take longer to settle down to nesting under the conditions of cage life than when kept at semi-liberty in an aviary. You would probably hasten matters by either taking out the partitions and giving them the whole, also procuring another pair to keep them company, or by procuring another cage without any partitions and similar in size to your present. Keep two pairs of birds in it and they should soon settle down to nesting. Even under present conditions your birds should ultimately nest, but it may not be this year. Neither could one definitely say that two pairs turned into a large cage at this time of year would go to nest at once, though there is a probability that one or the other would soon do so, and then the other would emulate the example set them.

PARROT LOSING FEATHERS (M.J.C.S.).—You give me no idea as to how you have been feeding it, consequently I cannot say whether it is the consequence of a long course of improper feeding, which some individuals resist for a long time, or whether it is merely a suddenly acquired vice. You had better repeat your query, supplying me with the particulars asked for. In the meantime, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water every other day, till you get a reply, but if the voidings should remain watery-lose for more than a day, then cease giving the magnesia. Grit and cuttlebone should be always in the cage, also a thickish piece of the branch of a tree for it to exercise its mandibles upon.

DIET FOR COCKATOO (D. Gibson).—Your bird will be better without the general mixture. Add to your present mixture some good oats and sunflower seeds; also offer it pieces of biscuit, various nuts, but only give a Brazil nut occasionally. It also ought to take a little fruit and green food (a leaf of lettuce after the fleshy stem has been cut out, flowering grass and other weeds), green peas, both shelled and in the pod. However, so long as it eats heartily of hemp and canary seed, it will not starve, but it would be better if it took a more varied diet. Do not be tempted to offer your bird a bit of everything, table scraps, etc., or you would soon ruin it. I never came across a Parrot or Cockatoo that would refuse sunflower seed yet, and I think if you coax it a little with some of the other items named, it will soon fall a victim to your blandishments.

OUTDOOR AVIARY (T.T.B.).—(1) Yes, I consider all the birds you mention should safely pass the winter in your aviary, presuming, of course, that you shut them up at nights and during the day-time of any very extreme periods. (2) So long as the earth is dry, a wooden floor is not called for. In my opinion the aviary would be better without it. Keep the earthen base well covered with gritty sand. (3) With Budgerigars in an aviary you can keep Lovebirds and Cockatiels, say, 2 pairs Budgerigars and 1 pair each Lovebirds and Cockatiels (I should advise Black-cheeked Lovebirds). I cannot advise keeping Budgerigars and Finches together. (4) The list of species you give should do well to gether and come within the scope of reply No. 1. I cannot advise putting the Java Sparrows in so small an aviary, though amiable pairs occur (I have possessed such). As a whole, Java Sparrows are more or less bullies. I do not consider artificial heat would be required. During the winter months you can fix up small sheaves of straw, and which some at any rate, of the small Finches, would roost. I fear you will have to wait and seize your opportunity in these times for acquiring the birds. At the same time, unless you secure birds from some aviary, they ought to go out at once if they are to winter outside. If you can anyway spare the space, I advise you to increase the light to three or four times its present size, and plant it with privet, aucuba, laurel, berberis, and enonymus, with grass and other weeds growing amid the bushes. Put in bushes of sufficient size to supply immediate cover.

BUDGERIGARS NOT NESTING (Esperance).—See our reply to "Dereham" in this issue, practically the whole of it meets your case. Foreign species; in fact, all wild species of birds, British or foreign, cannot be looked upon to settle down to nesting, as domesticated Canaries do, when put up for breeding. Three months is not a long period, but they will ultimately settle down to reproduce then kind, though it is quite possible they may not do so this year, and, again, they may. You will soon know when they are in breeding condition. The cere round the nostrils will be bright blue in the males and vary from dark cream colour to ruddy brown in the females; but if not settled down they may not breed even then. A keeper of wild species of birds cannot hope to succeed without unlimited patience. Once your birds start breeding they will go merrily on, practically all the year round, only pausing for the moult. The breeding season is not over till the end of October. They will get used to the slight movements you speak of. If you can do so, by all means have a place put up for them in the garden. (2) The Spice Bird is usually quite common and cheap, but only a very imaginative person could call it a song-bird. Birds, even those usually common, are scarce this war time. You will find all the shows given in due course if you watch the weekly issues of CAGE BIRDS.

SNEEZING BUDGERIGAR (F.H.).—I never knew a door yet that was entirely free from draught or window either, however good the fit of the middle joint, or close fitting at the lintels. If this is the best position for the bird, then I should advise hanging over the doorway a thick curtain sufficiently large to properly screen the cage. Your dietary is satisfactory, but if you are not giving it, do not fail to supply grit (not sand) and cuttlebone regularly. You say your bird does not drink. Budgerigars drink very little, but undoubtedly take a few sips occasionally. Carefully catch the bird, and bathe its nostrils with a tepid glyco-thymoline solution. It will do no harm if a little is swallowed. Then while you have the bird in the hand, dip the end of a feather in castor oil, and smear this over the interior of the bird's mouth and tongue. Usually it is too distressing to catch a small bird up often, but so long as the sneezing continues you can spray the nostrils with the glyco-thymoline daily. Lightly colour the drinking water (only use quite a small drinker) with Chemical Food for the next two months. If the trouble does not pass in say a month, you had better write again giving full details, as I do not retain queries here.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. H. Novice.—Scarcely any issue of CAGE BIRDS has appeared for many months past without some reference to the breeding and exhibiting of the Norwich Canary. It is too late now for any information as to its breeding to be of any use this season. Our book "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which we could send you post free for sevenpence, would give you all the particulars you desire, and a perusal of our back numbers would afford you a further fund of information.

S. Isaacson.—According to our information, Goldfinches may only be caught between Dec. 2 and the end of February in County Clare. Enquiry at your local police station would confirm or correct this.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateils is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardhills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register," a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos., with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

UNADULTERATED

Now this is of more importance than many think, for you surely don't want to pay for cheap sugar, ground rice, and certain liquids, that all make up weight. I sell you the genuine article imported, and from original tins, besides being the best money and experience can purchase.

EGGERTINE! EGGERTINE!!

which rears Canaries far better than any other preparation known, is made from new-laid English eggs, and not useless dried yolk of egg, has also many other valuable ingredients. It is not, therefore, a substitute, but a genuine egg food, 1/3 and 2/6 per tin, post free; it can also be all ready mixed and made into a red or yellow feed ready for use without any preparation by the user; same price. My Red Feeds at 1/10 per lb., 1/- 1/2 lb., postage extra, are unsurpassable. The "Excellior" Blend is the finest Red Feed ever put on the market; it is the finest Red colour producer procurable, being a correct mixture of hot pepper and Sweet: Rudd, Specialist, Norwich.

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kimch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateils is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-feeding, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memoranda, with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 25/ 5/-, 50/ 7/6, carriage paid.

Club Reports.

EAST HAM F.S.

Half-yearly meeting, headquarters, The Earl of Wakefield, July 15. Balance-sheet for half-year ending June 30 was placed before the members. The hon. sec., in his report, referring to the balance in hand (£9 3s. 8d.) congratulated the society upon its solvency. During the half-year the society has given 18 silver spoons won at their three monthly shows. Total receipts for half-year, £19 10s. 10d.; expenditure, £10 7s. 2d. Ten new members were made during the half-year, and a further five were elected on July 15: Messrs. W. Hamilton, Lofthouse, R. Thompson, J. Edwards, and Catter.—W. A. Harwood, hon. sec.

PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Meeting, July 20, Oddfellows' Hall, Morley Street, Mr. French chair. After business Mr. J. Bavage read a splendid paper on the management of Crests and C.B., which was greatly appreciated. Mr. Bavage brought one of his breeding cages showing how he fixes his nursery inside, all his cages having loose bottoms which is a great improvement. Questions were asked and answered to the satisfaction of all. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Bavage who suitably responded. There was some discussion on our coming October show, but it was decided to let it stand over until next meeting, when we hope all members will attend. One new member was elected.—W. Luscombe.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station-st., July 7; fair attendance. Mr. A. Broadhurst, chair. Four members proposed: Messrs. O. Parker, S. Parker, R. Parker, and J. Baugh. Fanciers who wish to join now will only have to pay half-year's sub. 2/-. There will be specials for members' competition at both the members' and open shows. Will those who wish to become members send their names along? Decided to hold a members' show; date left open. We were very sorry to receive the resignation of one of our oldest members, Mr. Silvers, and taking into consideration the years he had spent with the Society, it was decided to make him a life member. We hope he will visit us whenever he can make it convenient. Next meeting, Aug. 4, at 8. Let us see a record gathering.—A. C. Shirley, Assist. Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting, Lockhart's Cafe, Grainger Street, Newcastle. Mr. W. F. Swan presided over a good attendance. Mr. James Stanger, Pelton Fell, and Mr. Coates, Beamish, were elected members. Decided to purchase another cup to replace the one Mr. Smith won outright last year; this gentleman has given two guineas towards same; it is to be competed for on the same conditions, twice in succession or three times in all. Decided that we give our patronage to one show only this year (Blaydon C.B.S.), Nov. 12 and 13. Agreed to give 15 medals for competition, cup and gold medal for best old bird, silver medal for best old bird in each class other than cup winner, also cup and gold medal for best young Crest, cup and gold medal for best young C.B.; Sec. has guaranteed a young yellow Crest or C.B. class extra. Three medals will be competed for in each class, one member to win more than one medal in each young class, silver medals will be given for best Crest and best C.B. in young classes, shown by a novice. Subs. now due.—Dohson, Hon. Sec.

WEST STANLEY (Victoria) F.F. &c.

Meeting, July 18, Mr. J. Armitage presiding over a good turn-up of members. We passed a good schedule of 48 classes and made rules for same. It was very pleasing to get such a good turn-up. Members, don't forget to give your vote to R. Peart and T. Nicholson, July 31, or Sunday morning, Aug. 1. It is to the interest of all members to record their vote, because they all know that it means a great helping to our show.—R. Hutchinson.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting and table show, July 14, Mr. Crawhall chair. The annual show was discussed, and it was decided to postpone this question until the August meeting. Members please note, there is a motion to include a few open classes in our schedule this year. Members who find it impossible to attend the meeting are requested to convey to the Sec., 6, Gill Street, Benwell, their opinion on this matter. Mr. Crawhall has obtained the usual quantity of colour-food, but as many members have not sent in their orders, a large quantity is likely to be left on his hands. This is not fair to Mr. Crawhall, as he has purchased this food out of his own pocket and re-sold it to the members at cost price. Entries at the table show showed an improvement, and birds of exceptional merit were on view, especially a ticked yellow exhibited by Mr. Havis, of Blaydon, a novice member. Mr. Crawhall will give a Yorkshire cock, value at least £1, for the best bird bred and exhibited by novice member at the table show, August 11. Fanciers residing within the four Northern counties interested in the variety are invited to join us. Entrance fee 1/-; annual sub. 2/6. Table show awards.—Champ. Cl.: 1, 4, Crawhall; 2, 3, Tindale. Mkd.: 1, 4, Tindale; 2, 3, Crawhall; vhc, he, Mather. Nov. Cl.: 1, vhc, c, Gregory; 2, Havis; 3, 4, vhc, Leach. Mkd.: 1, Havis; 2, 3, 4, Leach. Mr. J. Curry judged and gave great satisfaction.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

The Shows.

IDLE C.B.A.

2nd F.F. show, Springfield Hotel, July 24. Mr. J. Lund (Bradford) judged 40 birds, giving complete satisfaction. Quality was of the highest order. Class 1: 1, 2, 4, Sparks; 3, Whitaker; vhc, Elsegood; he, Chippindale; c, Pearson. Class 2: 1, 1, he, spl, best bird in show, Chippindale; 2, 3, Wood; 4, Elsegood; vhc, Whitaker; c, Baxter. Class 3: 1, Chippindale; 2, Wood; 3, Loyd; 4, Pearson; vhc, he, Baxter; c, Sudd.—T. Elsegood, Sec.

BURNLEY O.S.

Table Show, July 17, Star Inn; birds shown on last occasion debarred from entry. Mr. Braybrook judged again and gave satisfaction. Class 1: 1, Catlow; 2, 3, West. Class 2: 1, Hines; 2, West; 3, Broxup. Class 3: 1, J. Broxup. Class 4: 1, 2, J. Broxup. Winners of specials left over from N.F.S.: Mr. Edwards' sp., R. Hines; Mr. Spencer's sp., H. Catlow; Mr. Lingard's sp., J. Broxup. Next meeting Aug. 4.—T. Chadwick, Sec.

WIBSEY C.B.S.

Show, Horse and Groom, July 17, Mr. J. H. Fowle judged. Cl. or Tkd. Yorks: 1, 2, 3, Pickup; 4, he, Chapman; vhc, W. Crowther. Buff: 1, Pick-up; 2, 3, Chapman; 4, Crowther; vhc, Farrer. Unv. Mkd. CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Annual N.F. show, July 3, headquarters, Crown Hotel, Station St., with over 60 entries, not so many as expected. Norwich came up strong in number, particularly in novices. Yorks. were down. There were birds in both varieties which should answer for themselves during the coming show season. Several fine British birds were staged. Mr. J. H. Roe judged, and gave satisfaction.

Champ. Nor. Buff: 1, 2, Bastock; other entries absent. Var.: 1, Bastock; other entries absent. Yorks. Yell.: 1, sp, 3, Swinden; 2, Richards. Buff: 1, 2, Richards; 3, vhc, Aukers. SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Young bird shows of the South Birmingham O.S., June 26th and July 20, Headquarters, Marlboro' Hotel; judge, Mr. Roe. There was not the usual number of birds owing to so many members being on war work and not finding the time to look after their birds. June show winners: Cowley Swindon, Bayliss, Baugh; special winners: Rahy, Cowley, Yardley. Points towards the cups: Swindon 15, Cowley 13. No competition in British or novice section. July show; judge, Mr. Russell; brought a much better entry, and some fine Yorks. and Norwich were staged. Mr. Swindon's winning yellow is a gem. Winners: Champ.: Swindon and Bayliss; Nov.: Proty and Hawkesford, the latter showing a very fine varieg. Yorks. Mr. Yardley also took 1st with two very fine Norwich. Points for cup: Swindon 18, Bayliss 13, Proty 12, Hawkesford 4. Special winners: Swindon (2), Hawkesford, Barron, Yardley. The meetings of late have been well attended and 12 new members have joined. Owing to secretary being away from the city so much reports have not been dealt with so speedily as in the past, though no lack of interest or slackness has taken place, and the society is still pushing forward. Our members are helping the flow of munitions, so we can well afford to be proud, and no doubt the autumn shows will have record entries.—J. Sheppard, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BRADFORD O.S.

Second members' show of season, July 17, Mr. H. J. Clutenden judged the 70 birds shown with every satisfaction. Open Yorks. Cl. or Tkd. Yell. (7): 1, 2, vhc, Symes; 3, 4, he, c, Helliwell. Buff (4): 1, 2, 3, Symes; 4, Helliwell. A.O.V. (6): 1, Symes; 2, vhc, he, Wilcock; 3, Horsfield; 4, Helliwell. Nov. Cl. or Tkd. Yell. (6): 1, 2, McEwen; 3, he, Bolton and Lunn; 4, vhc, Wood. Buff (9): 1, 4, Wood; 2, vhc, he, Bolton and Lunn; 3, McEwen; c, Rhodes. A.O.V. (12): 1, he, Wood; 2, 3, c, Bolton and Lunn; 4, Bromham; vhc, Cran-croes. Nor. Yell. HALIFAX C.B.S.

2nd N.F. show, July 24, King Cross Band Room. Forty birds were staged for Mr. C. Pickup (Great Horton) to judge, and he was set a difficult task to find the winners in such a splendid lot of birds. His awards, as usual, met with the approval of all. Many of the exhibits will certainly be heard of again during the open show season.

CHESTER-LE-STREET C.B.S.

N.F. show, Dun Cow Hotel, July 17, with a very fair entry of 52, considering the bad breeding season some members have experienced. Mr. Lindsay staged some very nice young Norwich, which should be heard of later, and there were also two or three nice young Yorks. Borders were not up to the usual standard. Mr. W. L. Smith (South Shields) judged to the satisfaction of all concerned. Nor. Yell.: 1, 2, 3, Lindsay; vhc, Arnold; he, Forster. Buff: 1, 3, Stanger; 2, Lindsay. Yorks. Yell.: 1, Stanger; 2, Arnold. HANLEY C.B.S.

Second F.F. show, July 17, Bircheshead Hotel. The entry was fairly good considering the members had not experienced the best of fortune. Yorks. came up strong, and some very neat specimens were staged. Mr. Beckett makes a good sec., and had everything in order. Mr. F. Bates judged and gave every satisfaction.

In the Courts.

A Prosecution that Failed.

At the Alford Police Court, Edward Garner, Mablethorpe, was charged with an offence under the Wild Birds Protection Act, on June 23. P.C. Clark stated that he saw a bird cage on the defendant's lawn, and on examining it found four young Thrushes inside. The defendant stated that a visitor brought them to him. Witness told defendant he would be reported. Defendant, on oath, stated that a visitor brought the birds to him and asked him to take care of them. The man fed the birds in the morning and looked after them, and he (defendant) looked upon them as the man's property. He had, after the constable called, liberated the birds, and the man was very cross about it. The case was dismissed on the payment of costs.

Mr. James G. Torbett, sec., writes that Muirkirk Annual Show will be held Nov. 13. Mr. H. Norman will judge the members' young stock show of the Croydon F.A., Aug. 11.

Secretaries of Midland shows willing to accept patronage of the Midland Counties F.C.C. should please apply at once to W. Wells, Helmside, Erdington, Birmingham.

Upon the application of the Gloucester County Council the Starling has been exempted for two years from the protection of the Wild Birds Act.

Among birds seen in the town of Bedford lately are the Golden-crested Wren and the Lesser-spotted Woodpecker and young, the latter in Bushmead Avenue.—"Bedfordshire Times."

Mr. W. A. Harwood, hon. sec., writes that admission will be free at the First Feather show of the East Ham F.S., July 31, at the Earl of Wakefield, East Ham. Visitors will be welcome.

The many friends of the veteran fancier, T. Winter, writes Mr. W. L. Smith, South Shields, will be pleased to hear he is well on the road to recovery after passing a severe operation.

Next week being Bank Holiday week, we shall be obliged if advertisers and correspondents generally will send us their communications as early as possible. Matter for the editorial columns must reach us not later than Tuesday morning to be certain of insertion.

In our issue of June 26th Mr. Colquhoun, of Bilshy, Alford, advertised for a tame, hand-reared Rook, and has received an offer from a Mr. H. Cator, of Bett Cottage, Eastgate, Bury St. Edmunds. A letter accepting the offer has been returned to Mr. Colquhoun endorsed "Not Known." Will Mr. Cator please send to the advertiser an address which will find him.

The Y.C.C. of Scotland will allocate club patronage at the next meeting, Aug. 31, writes Mr. W. Priest, Hon. Sec. Societies who have not already applied should do so as early as possible. Classification same as last year: Cl. or tdk. yell. cock, ditto buff, cl. or tdk. yell. hen, ditto buff, varieg cock, ditto hen, yell. cock bred 1915, ditto buff, hen bred 1915. Societies applying for patronage must state judge.

Many fanciers, writes the Manager of the Lambeth Aviaries, 35, Gladstone Street, St. George's Road, S.E., have dropped out through the war because of not having the capital to renew their stock; these are the fanciers we are after, and we are prepared to supply them on easy and reasonable terms. Those who find themselves short of ready-money through the stress of the times would do well to take advantage of the fair terms offered by the Lambeth Aviaries.

OBITUARY.

Many friends and fanciers, writes Mr. W. A. Lott, will hear with deep regret of the loss which has befallen Mr. R. Brownlie, Brockley, in the death of his wife, who passed away on July 24, after a long and painful illness. Mr. Brownlie is well known to many in the South of England as well as in Scotland as an enthusiastic Border Fancier and a lover of British birds, and I am sure that all who know him will extend their heartfelt sympathy to him in his sad bereavement. Mrs. Brownlie was interred at Brockley Cemetery on July 29.

MR. A. A. POOL (Bristol).

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. W. H. Parker, that I have to report the death of Mr. A. A. Pool, 37, Manor Road, Bishopston, Bristol, which took place July 20, after a short illness. The late Mr. Pool was a much esteemed fancier of about forty years' standing, meeting with considerable success, and was a great friend of the novice. I feel sure the Canary Fancie in general will be deeply grieved at his loss, and that their sympathy will be with Mrs. Pool in her bereavement.

MR. C. A. WALSH (Halifax).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, Sec. Halifax C.B.S., that I inform you of the death of George Amos Walsh, in his 18th year, after a short illness. He was the only son of that esteemed and well-known fancier, Mr. H. W. Walsh, a member of our society. He took a very great interest in his father's birds, and on many occasions has been a valuable help to the society, although not himself a member. When the first open show was held, in October 1914, it was no small part that he took towards the success of the venture. I am sure that every fancier will join with us in tendering to Mr. and Mrs. Walsh our very deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

MR. D. A. S. LONGDEN (Swansea).

Mr. S. J. Nicholas (Swansea) writes: "It is with deep regret I have to inform you of the death of my old friend, Mr. D. A. S. Longden (Swansea). Taken rather suddenly ill on Good Friday last, for some weeks his condition was precarious, but ultimately so marked was his improvement that his friends hoped he would recover. I am grieved to say he had a relapse, and gradually sank and passed away on Saturday last, July 24. By his death the Fancie in Wales has lost a staunch and faithful friend, ever ready to do anything possible for the welfare of the hobby he loved so well. All fanciers will, I am sure, join in extending their deepest sympathy with his sorrowing widow and children in their sad bereavement."

MR. W. REID, Kilmarnock.

We are sorry to announce the death of an old and esteemed fancier in the person of Mr. William Reid, which took place on July 21, at his residence, 21, West Shaw Street, Kilmarnock, at the ripe age of 82. He was one of the founders of the Kilmarnock C.B.F.C., which is now in its 42nd year. He was a very enthusiastic Scotch Fancie breeder, and took a very important part in the management of both the club and open show. He had a kindly nature, was always very willing to help any new fancier in a difficulty, and seemed to be in his true element when engaged in some needful or philanthropic duty. He was a useful citizen to Kilmarnock, sober and industrious, a typical representative of the old practical shoemaker, and will be greatly missed by a large circle of brother fanciers and friends. He is survived by two sons and two daughters, to whom we extend our sympathy.

The July issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, opens with an article on Cranes in captivity by the Marquis of Tavistock, who also writes about his Little Owls. Mr. Maurice Ansler contributes an account of the breeding of the Orchard Finch. Dr. Lovell-Keays continues his Nesting Results for 1914, and writes of the breeding of the African Zosterops. Among the other articles are "The Buzzard," by F. Dawson-Smith, and "Failures and their Lessons," by W. Shore Bailly.

The meeting place for the ramble of the Sheffield O.S. on August 1 is the Midland Station. Train leaves 2.25 for Grindleford. Tea at Checker House, Frogget Edge. Friends and ladies are invited to join.

I must congratulate your artist on the very excellent drawing of my winning Buff Norwich, writes Mr. J. B. Kerr. The bird which won at the recent L.P.O.S. Young Bird Show was not the same bird. In the three shows at which I have exhibited, different birds have won, proving the uniform character of the youngsters. Being overstocked and having little time to give to the birds, I had to advertise last week offering some of my stock birds for sale, also a few of the youngsters, and refer you to the report of the L.P.O.S. Show, July 15, for latest awards.

It is reported that in some districts Goldfinches, Skylarks, and Starlings are markedly increasing in numbers. An appreciable increase in all of the three species together would be received with somewhat mixed feelings; none would object to greater familiarity with the beautiful and harmless thistle-eating Goldfinch; farmers with patches of autumn-sown wheat probably think that the Skylark population is already of quite respectable proportions, while in fruit-growing districts at least there would be few indeed to welcome more Starlings—there are already too many.

Ramsden's Pure Tasteless Pepper is ground from garden cultivated pods, sun dried, and of the current season's growth. Stored in hermetically sealed canisters, thus retaining its beautiful colour and aroma. Sold packed in tins only, with a full guarantee under the "Food and Drugs" and "Merchandise" Acts, at following prices: 1lb. 2s., 3lbs. 5s., 5lbs. 7s. 6d., 7lbs. 10s. 6d.; 22lbs. 30s., carriage paid. The guarantee covers all pepper sold in original canisters, but does not cover pepper sold loose by traders. All canisters over 1lb. are sealed. Owing to the wonderful depth of colour, Ramsden's Pure Tasteless Pepper, in use, proves to be the best and cheapest on the market.—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London. (Advt.)

Was There Canary Breeding in 1915?

In an article entitled "The Trusted Pet," "The Nation" refers to the Canary as a bird "that has been bred for a thousand captive generations."

Two Nests in One.

In a copse at Codicote two Thrushes built their nests so closely together that although each nest was distinct, and each had its clutch of eggs, the two structures appeared as a double nest. This curiosity is now to be seen at Letchworth museum, where the nests are being shown in the actual twigs in which they were built.

Misguided Perseverance.

"F. H. S.," writing to the "Scotsman," relates that from one House Sparrow's nest he took five eggs on May 14, three on May 19, three on May 25, two on May 30, and two on June 4; fifteen eggs in all. The hen then seems to have decided that she was engaged on a hopeless task, and she and her mate deserted the nest.

A Rare Summer Visitor.

A Red-breasted Flycatcher is reported to have been seen in a Midland garden last month. This beautiful bird is a very rare visitor to England, and its few appearances have been as an irregular passage migrant in late autumn. We think it has only once before been recorded in June, this being in Cheshire, near the district of the latest appearance.

A Curious Theory.

In reporting the presence of a cream-coloured Blackbird in some private grounds, a daily paper says: "When we noted the presence of variegated Blackbirds—we saw more than one, and a Robin as well, last winter—we attributed the failing colour to impaired vigour due to cold and lack of food. But these causes are hardly operative now, and the effect must be a result of peculiar constitution. Possibly the bird is one of our variegated specimens which has now completed the change."

An Anonymous Query.

We have received on a postcard headed "Waterhurst Place, Ardingly, Sussex," an enquiry respecting a sick Bullfinch, with a request for an answer by post. If the enquirer will send his name, which he omitted to give on his postcard, with full particulars of the feeding and treatment he has been affording his bird, his query will be sent to our Mr. Norman, who will be pleased to reply by post if a fee is enclosed in accordance with the rules at the head of the query columns.

Queen Alexandra as Patroness.

More than half a century ago a Danish Princess came to our shores to wed the Prince of Wales of the day, and for more than half a century there has never been any doubt as to who is the best loved lady in England. This gracious and beautiful princess, now Queen Alexandra, has ever been ready to identify herself with any properly directed philanthropic movement, and she has now granted her patronage to the National Egg Collection for the Wounded, a scheme for the amelioration of the lot of our soldiers in the hospitals. This gigantic organisation, the offices of which are at 154, Fleet Street, is backed up by thousands of supporters who are working without fee or profit, and has already been the means of supplying over seven millions of new-laid eggs for the benefit of our wounded. In one individual week nearly half a million eggs were contributed, and it is the ambition of the organizers, now that Her Majesty is patroness, to raise one million eggs in one week. It is proposed to institute an Alexandra Week to commemorate the patronage of Her Gracious Majesty, and readers of "CAGE BIRDS" may join in the gigantic scheme by sending all the eggs they can spare or collect. Few or many will be equally welcome, and those who would like to be associated with the noble idea should write to the organising secretary of the National Egg Collection, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SOCIETIES AND THE WAR LOAN.

A Grand Lead by the L. & P.O.S.

The Committee of the London and Provincial O.S. have decided to invest £50 of the Society's funds in the War Loan, and strongly urge other societies to invest all they can, so as to help bring success to our noble arms, writes Mr. H. L. Huggins, hon. sec. By lending funds to the country we can "do our bit," even if we cannot enlist. Now is the time to help our country and ourselves; every shilling invested is a silver bullet "needed for victory." We have also decided to make all members serving in His Majesty's forces honorary members until their return to civil life.

Canaries for Exhibition.

THEIR PREPARATION AND COLOUR FEEDING.

A Lecture Given by Mr. W. Roberts Before the Stoke-on-Trent C.B.A., June 7.

IN the process of colour-feeding and preparing birds for exhibition, we must remember there are many small, but all important, items which are all necessary to ensure any measure of success on the show bench. In some varieties, such as the Norwich, my favourite, colour is of the greatest importance—the Norwich Plainhead Club allows 15 points for this alone.

To obtain the best results in colour-feeding we shall have to breed for colour; this will be accomplished by keeping some green blood in our stock. It is useless cramming your birds with colour-food if they have been bred from clear year after year, and I can assure you they will never win a colour-food medal. The time to start colour-feeding varies in individual birds; some that are hatched in May will break before others that were hatched in March, but, generally speaking, we may venture to put them on colour at the age of 10 weeks for the first and second rounds, and at seven or eight weeks for the third round; this will give time to get their blood charged with colour before they begin to cast their feathers.

How to Prepare the Colour-food.

When purchasing your colour-food, be sure that you get the best, as a cheap colour-food may only bring you disappointment. Some fanciers add oil to the colour-food; this I think is a great mistake. I have yet to see the colour-food which, in my opinion, needs oil. I will now give you my method of mixing: To 1lb. of cold pepper I add 2oz. of hot, and 4oz. of moist sugar, mixing all well together; this should stand at least a fortnight before use. When putting birds on colour I give only a very small quantity at first, just enough to colour the egg-food slightly, and this I gradually increase until I get on full strength, which is one in six—that is, one teaspoonful of colour to six of egg-food; this I consider is strong enough for all practical purposes.

At the beginning of the moult I single out all the best birds and moult them separately, covering the cages over with brown paper or a thin muslin cloth. This answers several purposes; it keeps them free from draughts, it also keeps them clean, it stops the sun from fading the colour before it is fixed in the feather, and lastly, they eat the colour-food more readily than when left in the open light.

When three parts through the moult—say, up to the neck and head, which are usually the last to finish—I give sulphate of iron in the drinking water twice a week; this helps to fix the colour in the feather and tones up the system. I also give a few grains of linseed on the cage bottom every other day; this is necessary to counteract the constipating effect of the iron, and produces that sheen on the feather so essential to our success on the show bench.

Don't leave off too soon.

At the apparent close of the moult many beginners take their birds off colour-food too early; it is thought that, because there are no loose feathers, the moult is complete, and surprise is caused when, in a few weeks' time, natural-coloured feathers are seen round the eyes and beak. I never take my birds off colour too early, but give one teaspoonful per bird each day until well through with the neck and head, and then continue every other day until at least a fortnight after the birds are fined down.

Having finished with the moult, we now come to the point of preparing our birds for the show bench. If we have got the required type, quality, and colour, we are still useless without condition, and as an instance of its importance, we often see good birds standing cardless, birds which, with condition, would be in the money. Now, I consider that different birds, even of the same variety, often require different treatment if we must put them down in their best show form; for instance, a good bird may carry too much feather, or be very slack in feather, such a bird will require different feeding through the show season than would a bird of good, tight feather and quality. The former I should keep in as "high" condition as possible to enable it better to carry a tight "jacket," whilst the latter would get plenty of flesh-forming food which will greatly add to its size.

One of the most important items in moulting and conditioning birds is the bath. I know of no finer thing to help them off with the old coat and on with the new. It is also one of the necessities which tend to make that wax-like appearance we all so much admire. Lastly, we must have clean birds and clean cages. Nothing looks worse than a clean bird in a dirty cage.

Hints on Colour Feeding.

Some valuable advice by that well-known fancier and judge Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Liverpool.

AFTER the worries and anxieties of the breeding season, the question of colour-feeding acts as a fillip to the average fancier. It is an art to get a red-hot specimen that is fit to stage in decent company; generally it is the rotters that carry the best colour. Why is this? Probably you have thrown all the "rotters" in a dark flight, and have given them the leavings from your best birds. These two happenings supply the answer.

By being in a dark corner, what colour has been put in the feathers has struck there, the sun or strong light has not bleached them. The leavings have been thoroughly impregnated with the colour-food, and every bit that is eaten by the "rotters" is full of the colouring agent. This proves we should mix our food overnight for use next day.

When you have got your stock well on the feed, mix sufficient colour-food with your egg-food to bring it to the same, or practically same, colour as the colour-food itself. I have found thirteen ounces of tasteless, and three ounces of hot natal, to answer the purpose of making the birds red-hot—that is, if there is any colour in the birds to bring out.

Breed, as well as Feed.

For years some fanciers have bred clear to clear until there was no colour left in them. You must have natural colour in your stock before you can expect to get a good artificial colour. A good variegated stock cock you must have as a foundation. Why I advocate a cock is that size and colour comes from the cock, and type and quality from the hen.

Give your birds sufficient pepper to make the colour visible in their droppings; you will then know their blood is thoroughly impregnated with the colouring agent, and you can regulate your quantity accordingly. A wise fancier will keep his best birds in single cages; this will prevent plucking, etc. It is hard lines when you have a good specimen and find it plucked three weeks before your pet show comes off; you have your work all over again.

If you find your birds are not taking the feed, try the Lancashire trick of putting a few spots of oil of aniseed in it; that will entice them. If this fails, you must try a mild form of starvation by taking their seed away until dinner-time every day. You may say this is cruel, but don't forget you are out to get your birds a good colour, and not half do it, so a little of the "mailed fist" is required; you must not stand on ceremony while your pals are beating you—play the same game as them.

How to Fix the Colour.

Your stock will require sulphate of iron to fasten the colour. I do not give any until half-way through moult, for it has a tendency to bring on costiveness, also to tighten the feather. What we want at first is all the old feathers off, so why give iron to tighten them on? When I do commence with iron they get it for breakfast every day. To those fanciers who can afford it, Parrish's Chemical Food mixed with the colour-food acts better than iron, besides being a good stimulant. Another fine thing I have found, that is, a little scalded clover meal given twice a week with the food; it is an admirable tonic, for the birds get sick of the colour-food in time. Bread is very good for us, but we require a little cheese with it now and again.

There are various ways of mixing colour-food, but whether you use bread, biscuit, or any of the prepared biscuit foods, add sufficient soft brown sugar (we call it Togy or dock sugar here) to make it palatable, and see that you thoroughly mix it so that the birds cannot discern the biscuit from the colouring agent; they are very wily. Linseed tea is very fine during the moult; it adds a sheen to the feather. A teaspoonful of linseed in a pint of boiling water will go round an average stock of birds.

Should your birds get stuck in the moult, stop your colour-food at once and give them a teaspoonful of the following mixture in their drinking water until they start again. One glass of rum, two pennyworth each of meadow saffron and gentian, mix together, cork up, and let stand overnight. Then add a noggin of water and shake up well before giving; this is a proved remedy.

Many fanciers ask which is the best colour-food; some swear by one, others another, but I suppose it all ends as Falstaff said, when asked which was the best ale: "There is none bad, but some are better than others."

The Colour Feeding of British Birds and Hybrids.

By J. MADDISON (Newcastle-on-Tyne).

HAVING been requested to write a few lines on the colour-feeding of Mules and British birds, I will give particulars of the method that I have adopted for a considerable number of years in the colour-feeding of Mules and British Hard-bills.

For some time previous to the moult I give them a liberal supply of shepherd's purse, and when the birds begin to moult I freely stop giving green food to the birds that are being colour fed. Before they commence to moult, I get the Finches accustomed to eat egg-food, and to induce them to do so I use a piece of thin flat wood about two inches long, one inch wide, and notched at the sides. This is fixed between the second and third wires from the perch, and I place on it a small quantity of egg-food made into a paste.

The Paste Described.

All my Mules and British birds that are colour-fed are moulted upon this paste, which is placed on the flat piece of wood previously mentioned. The paste is composed of equal quantities of Spratts' cod liver oil food, broken biscuits, and scraps of white bread. I put the bread in the oven till it is nice and crisp; it is then easily crushed with a rolling pin or put through a mill; the biscuits also are crushed and mixed with the bread, the cod liver oil food, and a little sugar.

When making egg-food I put the required quantity of the above mixture into a cup or saucer, and pour sufficient boiling water over it to make it into a paste, but not too sloppy. The egg, having been put through a sieve, is then added and well mixed into the paste with a table knife.

I then put a little of the mixture on each of the pieces of wood already referred to, and if not given too much at a time, most of the birds soon begin to look for it. When they are eating the egg food freely I add just a little colour-food to it, the quantity can then be increased as required.

Mix Over Night.

When the birds begin to moult I mix the egg and colour-food at night, two parts egg to one part colour-food, and next morning I add to it an equal quantity of paste.

I give a teaspoonful to each bird every day till they are in full feather. Mixing the egg and colour-food overnight allows the egg to absorb the colour, thus causing some birds to eat more colour-food than they would otherwise do, as some of them are very clever at picking out the egg and leaving the colour-food.

Some birds refuse to eat the colour food so long as they can get plenty of seed. When I have such birds, I either remove the seed, or mix it with colour-food, to which a little extra oil has been added. The oil makes the food adhere to the seed, so that the birds cannot eat the seed without getting some of the colour-food.

My show birds are moulted in separate cages. I know there are fanciers who advocate large flight cages or aviaries, but some birds, when given too much room during the moult, require a lot of steady-ing afterwards, and many birds are beaten at the early shows through failing to do themselves justice, owing to their unsteadiness.

During the moult I cover the fronts of the cages with light coloured paper; it keeps the birds quieter, helps to keep them clean, and subdues the light. A bright light has a tendency to cause the colour to fade.

The Young Birds After Leaving Their Parents.

WHEN the young birds begin to take to the perches they are about ready for taking from their parents, but a few days longer won't hurt them if the old birds do not pluck them. If, after taking them away, you hear any uttering plaintive chirps, put them into a nursery cage to enable the parents to feed them for a little longer. When you have decided to take them away, give them for the first day soft food similar to that they have been reared with by their parents. On the second day give them three parts of the food with one part of scalded cod liver oil food added. By a method of reduction and increase you will have them on a diet of the cod liver oil food solely in four or five days. On this method of feeding the young will thrive splendidly. For the mid-day meal give scalded bread and milk.

Hang the water glass in the usual place for them and fill for two days with water which has been boiled and allowed to cool. On the next day boil some tormentil root and give the liquid in place of ordinary water; repeat in this order. Give crushed hemp and canary seeds and whole rape in a dish in the cage bottom, also give soaked or scalded rape instead of green food. Hang the seed-box on for them, almost filling it with plain canary and a good layer of rape seed on top. When the birds are well on plain seed reduce the soft food until they are having only about half-a-teaspoonful per bird per day. Keep this up until they are ready for colour-feeding. Offer the bath when they are about four weeks old. Also throw some Quaker Oats in the cage, these are a good food for both young and old. By following the above I have no doubt that a good percentage of young will be reared.—"ACORN."

What Makes Bird-Breeding So Fascinating?

WHAT is it that holds us so? At the beginning of the year we look forward to when we shall be pairing, with the hope that we may rear more and better birds than we did last season. When we have bred and reared them we look forward to a successful moult, watching with care the promising youngsters. When we have moulted them we look forward to the winter shows, which we hope may bring us fame, if not fortune.

It is this constant looking forward that stimulates us and keeps us interested.

But looking forward will not bring us much success if we do not add to it a constant striving after better results. When we pair up we must take all the care and pains we can to try and understand our birds, so that we may get the best possible results from the stock at our disposal. A man who has fair stock birds and uses them to the best advantage will often get better results than a man who has a long purse and is constantly buying here and there, yet never establishes a strain of his own.

A word of advice to those who have not much money to spare. Persevere with what you have; pick the best out each year, keep them, and, when funds will allow, buy a good one to introduce new blood. This is much better than clearing out and starting again, because you have not won all the first prizes. The secret of success is, understand your birds and use them right, then time and patience will work wonders.

In breeding, do not be over fussy in your attentions. Remember that the birds will often carry out their domestic duties better without your assistance than with it. I do not mean by this that you should not help them sometimes (soaking the eggs, for instance, when they are a day or two overdue). But in all matters connected with bird breeding remember that the best you can do is to assist. Nature and the birds will by themselves bring you plenty of young ones.—"NEMO."

The Mascot of the Sherwoods.

A Jay is the latest accession to the ranks of living mascots so beloved by our soldiers. The "B" Company of the 12th Battalion of the Sherwood Foresters has a Jay which is said to know every man of the company. It helps itself indiscriminately to their rations, and is doing well on its curiously varied fare. It is intended to take the bird with the company when it is detailed for service at the front, and the men all have belief that it will bring them luck.

The Cinnamon Canary.

"The Bird of Royal Blood."

A Paper read at the meeting of the Western Counties O.S., Plymouth, on June 15th, by Mr. A. B. Brown, Plymouth.

IN choosing Cinnamons for stock or show, colour must be the first consideration, and in all cases this colour must be sound or evenly distributed throughout the whole of the bird. Many of the richest-coloured specimens are ticked in places with light feathers; this is especially noticeable on the neck and wing butts, but the worst place on which this can appear is the vent, thighs, and under the lower mandible. It is very difficult for this fault to be bred out, and even after several generations it will crop up in the young. In the eyes of a good judge birds that are so mis-marked would be wrong-classed when exhibited in a class for selfs, as their proper place would be in the foul Cinnamon class.

There are several grades of Cinnamon colour, and each may be correctly termed sound throughout, but in accordance with the richness and transparency of colour so is its value. Some birds are very brown, others dull brown, some greyish green, or what is termed smoky; others little better than Greens, whilst many have white feathers in wings and tail. None of these is desirable for stock or show, although many of the hens showing white feathers in the wing or tail might be used for stock if none better is available, and providing the remainder of the plumage is sound and rich in colour, and providing also that they be mated to a good self Cinnamon cock, bred from good rich-coloured parents which were in turn bred from self Cinnamons.

The Danger of Double Yellowing.

It has often been said in my hearing that a good Cinnamon has never the head properties of a good Norwich. This in the Yellows is very often true, as the richest-coloured selfs generally run small in head, and it is brought about by the practice of double-yellowing, which was and is now carried on to get increase of colour. In the case of the Buff there is not such difficulty, as the modern Buff Cinnamon carries a fair share of colour with size, and is often double-buffed to increase the size of head and chest, as a counter to the double-yellowing.

It will be easy to gather by the foregoing how best to select stock for breeding the Cinnamon. If care has been exercised in selecting for colour properties, it is obvious no fresh stock would be required on account of this for some considerable time, so that, given discretion, all energies may be concentrated on the gradual improvement of size. To do this correctly only large birds of sound transparent, bright, rich colour must be retained yearly for the following season's stock. If you have good, big-headed, and stoutly-proportioned yellow cocks, these are to be treasured, but it must not be forgotten that Yellows bred from Yellow cocks do not usually throw such big young as the Yellows bred from Buff cock and Yellow hen.

So it is plain the use of the Buff cock and Yellow hen to maintain size is equally as important as that of the Yellow cock and Buff hen to keep up colour, and although the Buff cock has his share of colour, it must not be allowed to dwindle away by constant pairing of Buff cock to Yellow hen. I advise a pair of each, and the progeny of the Yellow cock crossed into those of the Buff cock, alternately working backwards and forwards when the birds are of the quality suitable for the purpose in view.

Colour and Character.

Cinnamon colour and character are intimately associated with sex. They can only be propagated and perpetuated through the males. A cock quite free from Cinnamon blood can never breed Cinnamons, although he may be mated to a pure bred Cinnamon hen. A pure Cinnamon cock mated to a hen quite free from Cinnamon blood will never breed a Cinnamon-feathered cock, but may breed Cinnamon-feathered hens, while, before a Cinnamon cock can be produced, Cinnamon blood must be in both parents.

The choice of stock birds should not be haphazard, as in this variety, more than any other, a detailed history of the birds should be obtained. Again we are indebted to CAGE BIRDS, as from week to week, we can read the doings of such and such breeder whose name appears therein from time to time in connection with the show-bench. If his birds gain high honour in good company, depend on it he has good stock, or knows others who have. If business is done satisfactorily at a fair price, the breeder will supply the necessary information.

Show birds, or stock birds of the right sort, may cost pounds to buy, but with their quality and history are cheaper than the ordinary common birds which eat quite as much, take the same amount of care, and never win anything nor breed anything which will win a prize, or sell for more than a few shillings, and even at that are wasters, as there is no hope of the future with them or their progeny.

by the mud-wash, which goes on for successive generations, although one generation is dead before the next has reached the pupal stage. Surely all this is merely the blind workings of instinct?

Here, then, is the secret of the reason of the desertion of her nest by the Flycatcher as recorded by Mr. Teschemaker. She was sitting instinctively, and the death of her mate caused a disruption of the harmonious order of her life upon which that instinct was based, with the result that the brooding instinct died, just in the same way as I am told (although I never tried it) a broody hen may be cured of her craving for sitting merely by immersing her in a pail of water. This kills the brooding instinct; it does not cause her to "know" she "cannot" bring up her chicks.

The fact is that man is gifted with great intelligence and very little instinct to fit him for the more or less artificial environment with which, by civilisation, he has surrounded himself. Birds, as natural creatures, have finely developed instincts and very little intelligence, and if birds do things which are too wonderful for even man to do—as they do in many instances—it is merely because instinct itself is a higher psychologic phenomenon than intelligence. Birds could not succeed in living out their lives and enduring the vicissitudes they daily encounter were they dependent upon intelligence to guide them. I therefore think it a profound mistake to say that birds "know" anything in the sense that man understands knowledge, or that they have intelligence in the human conception of the word.

A. R. COE.

Precocious Youngsters.

SIR,—Some time ago a reader of CAGE BIRDS, in giving an account of the keeping of his birds, stated that he had young birds out of their nest at 21 days old. Although not an old fancier, I have had youngsters out at 15 days, and now have a cock singing at five weeks old. I have followed Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and this has had a great deal to do with my success.

F. O'SULLIVAN.

The Cuckoo as a Bird of Prey.

SIR,—Appropos of the letter under the above heading in CAGE BIRDS of July 24, I am sending you a cutting from "The Field." The Cuckoo mentioned therein was not exactly a Bird of Prey, but desperately near it. The letter was sent by the Rev. C. T. Wickham, of the Old Rectory, Twyford, and is as follows:—"My gardener has just told me the following story. On June 11 he saw a Cuckoo fly into a chestnut tree in the garden, whence it swooped down to an ivy-covered wall adjoining the house, and emerged in a moment carrying in its beak a Wagtail held by both wings, so that, as he described it, "the head and tail stuck out." With this burden it flew to a tree in a field about 100 yards off, and there disappeared. Returning presently without the Wagtail, it flew back first to the chestnut, then to the wall; where it busied itself for a moment or two, and finally flew off, and was seen no more. Almost immediately the Wagtail came back apparently none the worse for its adventure, and disappeared in the ivy. On inspection a nest was found with a Cuckoo's egg in it, but no others. The Wagtail has since deserted the nest, and is busy with its mate collecting material for another."

ANOTHER IRISHMAN.

Leaf-mould v. Sawdust for Cage Bottoms.

SIR,—In your issue of July 2 Mr. Saywell recommends sawdust for cage bottoms. I have always considered it risky stuff for softbills in the event of some being swallowed, which is unavoidable when giving them snails, fruit, etc., which they always drag on floor of cage before swallowing, and I should be glad to know whether anyone has experienced any ill effects from its use. I use leaf mould, with a little sand in one corner, the mould being a deodoriser, and soft to the feet (my cages always smell sweet since using it). Mr. Saywell also states he puts baize round perches; this is very good, no doubt, but may harbour insects, etc. Couldn't cage-makers make all perches oval or round? Also the cross bars of cages might be made oval inside, and this would avoid injury being done to the base of the bird's beak, which sometimes occurs to fresh-caught birds. When you want to catch one, they blunder about cage, and the same injury may occur; this would not happen if inside of the crossbars were oval. I have often wondered why our cage-makers have not done it years ago.

It may interest CAGE BIRDS readers to know I am trying to train another Blackbird, as in 1910 and 1911, but I don't think I shall ever train one as I did him. Any time, day or night, he would answer me and go through tunes, and never keep me waiting longer than two minutes.

E. CHISL.

Lupin Seeds as Parrot Food.

SIR,—Will you kindly say, in an early issue of CAGE BIRDS, whether seeds of the common perennial herbaceous garden lupin, both the white and the blue (not the tree kind) would be a safe food for a Parrot? A great many of these plants are in my garden, seeding profusely; I should be glad to find use for them.

H. F.

[We have had no experience of Lupin seed as food for Parrots, but we see no reason why it should not be used. It is rich in albuminoids (flesh-forming), and would need to be used with discretion, or the birds might become too fat. Perhaps some reader will oblige.—Editor CAGE BIRDS.]

New Secretary for Blaenavon C.B.S.

SIR,—I have taken over the secretaryship of the Blaenavon C.B.S., and all communications in future should be addressed to me at 82, King Street, Blaenavon. I should like to correct a statement made by Mr. Vaughan, of Pontypool, that Blaenavon was up on the mountains, thus giving exhibitors the impression that their exhibits had to be taken to our show by aeroplanes. There are two main lines running into Blaenavon—the G.W.R. and L.N.W.R., and exhibits will arrive safely by either, and get every care and attention at our show. We intend to pay prize-money within seven days of show. I hope exhibitors will give us a bumping entry, and test the correctness of my statement for themselves.

G. BROOME, Hon. Sec.

New Secretary for Llanelly C.B.S.

SIR,—At a meeting held at headquarters on July 24, the Llanelly C.B. Society had to face a problem of choosing another sec. in the place of our old and esteemed friend Mr. Dan John, who, I regret to say, has not been in the best of health for some considerable time. Words cannot express the esteem we have for this gentleman for the valuable services he has rendered his society in the capacity of sec. practically since its formation, and we must attribute its success mainly to his untiring efforts. The members, while deeply regretting his retirement, trust that he may long be spared to be with us, so that the society may benefit by any advice the old warrior may be pleased to give us. I have for the present agreed to take over the duties so long filled with distinction by Mr. John.

D. H. DAVIES.

24, College Hill, Llanelly.

In a letter informing us of the change, Mr. John writes:—"Am pleased to inform you that I have been relieved of the position of sec. to the Llanelly and Dist. C.B.S. by my resignation. I must congratulate the members on their selection in electing Mr. D. H. Davies to fill the vacancy, and I trust they will give him the same support which they have extended to me during the many years that I have held the position."

Catching and Feeding Softbills.

SIR,—Allow me to thank Mr. Yates for his kind appreciation of my article. It is gratifying to know I have done a little good in the Fancy. Good kinds of traps to use are advertised in CAGE BIRDS. The next question is rather a difficult one to answer, as Skylarks are protected in certain areas all the year round. The best and safest way to catch Skylarks is to get permission from some farmer in the neighbourhood to go on his fields at night time. Take a drag net and a pocket flash lamp, and you can catch as many Skylarks as you require. I always use traps for I detest bird-lime; it makes such a mess of the birds. I only use it when I see a much coveted songster sing on the same bough day after day, and when the only way to catch him is by liming the bough. I have caught birds in a trap, steadied, and shown them without moulting them. Yes, the gentles are ordinary maggots; I prefer meat-maggots myself, and find them very beneficial to the birds. I had a Jenny Wren that ate 30 per day. The flies mentioned in my article are the ordinary house-flies; of course, meat flies are good for the larger species, such as Wheatears, Wrynecks, Shrikes, etc., or any other live food obtainable may be used. I am only too pleased at any time to give any little information I can, and I would like to see the Softbill classes at our shows come up to the Hardbills.

J. W. SAYWELL.

How to Exterminate Lice in Canaries.

SIR,—I am very interested in this discussion, and I am writing to improve correspondents to stick to the subject. It is lice we are discussing now, not red mite. Many articles have appeared from time to time suggesting remedies for the latter; it is now the other gentleman's turn. The louse lives on the bird and the cages have nothing to do with his existence, although he can live 36 hours away from his feathered home. His propagation is regulated by climatic conditions, which fact is all in his favour.

Correspondence.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR,—Mr. Teschemaker's letter in last week's issue is mainly devoted to pointing out the ethical superiority of birds over man. No man in his right senses ever denied that individual birds were possessed of some degree of intelligence; but how Mr. Teschemaker reconciles his assertion that a long period of captivity tends towards reducing the natural intelligence in birds with the undoubted ability of some Parrots, Starlings, and even Canaries is beyond me. What on earth the thieving of the Magpie has to do with the five civilized nations sacking Peking I don't know. But this I do know, which may interest Mr. Teschemaker, that I am writing this where Swallows are flying about and feeding their young over my head on the rafters, and not more than ten yards away, right in the heart of a veritable bird sanctuary, is a conservatory where most of my time is spent, and where for the last 30 seasons, to my knowledge, Flycatchers have nested inside on the ledges. It would seem therefore that I may not be so green about the habits of Flycatchers as Mr. Teschemaker would have your readers think. When I was a youngster I used to read in the children's fairy tale books the stories he recounts, but I never regarded them as other than pure fairy tales—much on the lines of Jack and his Beanstalk, St. George and the Dragon, and other yarns equally impossible. If only we could separate the warp of fact from the woof of fiction!

T. JOHNSON.

SIR,—This subject is of particular interest to me because I was originally responsible for its introduction some months ago. It is, of course, absurd to deny absolutely the existence of any intelligence in any creature which is capable of voluntary action, but in my last letter I tried to show that the mere fact that birds did anything which seemed wonderful or incomprehensible to man, did not in itself constitute any evidence that the psychologic force which inspired that action could be identified as intelligence. Especially must this be admitted when we remember that insects do far more wonderful things than birds can do. One can understand intelligence born of experience; indeed, it is fairly safe to assert that if even man himself were deprived from his infancy of the companionship of his fellow men he would have little or no intelligence when he reached maturity.

When, however, one remembers that the most wonderful things birds do are things of which they can have had no previous experience whatever, it is surely safe to assert that those actions are inspired purely by instinct. What previous knowledge, for instance, has a bird when it builds its first nest? It never saw the building of the nest in which it was hatched, yet it is quite capable of building its nest, precisely as its parents did, and of rearing its young to maturity. Mr. Teschemaker, as an all-round naturalist, will know of the marvellous provision made for its larvæ

BIRD SEEDS AND PARROT FOOD
OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENG.

Did we know the exact time the nits take to hatch, we could possibly deal effectually with him; as it is, we may go on killing the insects for weeks and still leave a few nits to hatch, so I fear the case is hopeless, unless someone can suggest a preparation to apply to the bird which is harmless and yet so objectionable that the insects cannot live on him, or one that will kill the nits. Paraffin will do this, but it will also do for the bird. Some of your correspondents write gaily of how to deal with the birds, but with 50 or 60 specimens to go over, it is no easy matter to people with limited time, and whatever anyone may say to the contrary, it is impossible to localise the pest. If you have lice in your room you must treat every bird, or none. I fear the lady who says she would rather "Deal with grey lice than red mite" has never had the genuine article.

"ONE WHO HAS."

SIR,—Obtain some paraffin oil and a small camel-hair brush, and oil the under portion of the wings to their full length. Do not saturate them, but oil lightly, so that the body feathers will not look unsightly. Let this be done in the evening, and I will guarantee that not a single louse will be found next morning. Eggs will no doubt have been laid, and these will hatch out in due course, so the oiling process must be repeated, say, 3 or 4 times at intervals of 3 or 4 days to be really effective.

R. GIBBIE.

SIR,—My method is when limewashing my cages to add a little Jeyes' and put it on moderately thick. Then I keep a small jar of Stockholm tar, thinned with a little turpentine. With a small brush I go over all the outside, and occasionally when I put my birds together I take each in my hand and give a good dusting of Hellebore powder—one pennyworth will last a season. I am a believer in the old-fashioned box for nesting. When I put the hen to sit I give a good dusting of Hellebore powder, and again two or three days before they should hatch. I am never troubled with red mite.

J. BASTOCK.

SIR,—I see in this week's CAGE BIRDS a reader complains of lice in the nest. I have kept birds for fourteen years, and I find powdered sulphur is the only remedy. I take the bird out of the cage and, while gently blowing the feathers apart, spray with my bellows all among them. I have a Canary sitting and about once a fortnight I spray the nest when she comes off to feed. Please don't think I have sent this for the 2s. 6d., because I do not want it. I shall be glad in the knowledge that I have given relief to the little pets.

SIR,—This is how I got rid of lice, also red mite. I first take birds out of cages and then place a little hot fire on a dustpan, and drop fifteen drops of carbolic acid on the hot ashes. Repeat twice, and you will never see any more again; do not replace birds for two hours.

J. T. SIMS.

SIR,—Take twopennyworth of white precipitate powder, mix with a little lard, say half a teaspoonful, put the mixture in a small custard tin, and place on the hob to melt. When melted put the tin in a cool place, and it will set. Rub it round your nest box or pan, and you will see them take their last bite. This is a good remedy also for baldness in birds; rub gently on the bald place with your finger.

J. PETERS.

SIR,—One of the best cures I know for either lice or red mite is Keating's Powder, which is sold by all chemists. If the birds, nest pan and board, are well dusted with it, there will be no lice visible in two days, and it is harmless to the birds.

FANCIER.

SIR,—Five years ago I found one of my pairs of Norwich with young had somehow contracted lice. I well sprinkled nest and young with Keating's Insect Powder, also cage, and then took the parent birds in my hand and well dusted the powder under the feathers, under wings, and top of tail especially. This I did every other day for some days, then once a week for a short time. I completely cured the birds, and although I had at the time between 50 and 60 birds in my room, no other bird caught them, and I have never had another. This treatment will answer equally well for red mite. Your reader need not fear the powder hurting the birds, I always use it freely, and a year or two ago I had a Crested cock that always ate the powder directly I put it in the cage, and never took any harm.

C. TOWNEND.

(The Prize will be awarded next week.—Editor.)

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

BEDFORD AND BEDS O.S.

N.F. Show, Headquarters, July 22, Mr. A. Keech judge. Entries came up badly, but some good birds were on view. Decided to hold the annual show at Town Hall, Nov. 11, Mr. H. Norman judge. Also decided to purchase a silver-plated tea-set, for most points in novice classes at annual show. Cl. Yell. Nor.: 1, Nottley, very typical, in excellent trim; 2, Hunter, trifle longer, otherwise good; 3, Millard, lovely little hen, hard lines. Mkd.: 1, Nottley, nice size, rich qual. Cl. Nov.: 1, 2, Brewer, mkd. buff, winner excels in type; 3, 4, Simons, clears, beaten in subs. Junior: 1, 3, Coley, smart birds, on the small side; 2, Simons, bigger, but rough in plumage.—J. C. Wilmot.

BURTON-ON-TRENT C.B.S.

Annual N.F. Show, Victoria Hall, July 24. Owing to many of the members having a poor breeding season only 44 birds were staged, but quality all round was grand, some very promising youngsters being staged. Mr. F. J. Weaver, Wolverhampton, judged, and gave satisfaction. Challenge Bowl: 1, Hathaway; 2, c, Draper; 3, Ford; 4, Lee; vhc, England; hc Bond. PLYMOUTH W.C.O.S.

Third N.F. Show, Oddellows' Hall, July 21. Entries, 50, being about the same as the two previous shows, but below the average of the last five years. A number of members are serving in the Army and Navy, and in consequence the shows have suffered. Other members made a late start with the breeding season, and having missed the first show did not exhibit at the later. Yorks. may be considered to be on the up grade in the society, birds of good promise have been staged. Norwich were a bit lacking in size, otherwise good. Crests were few in numbers, and hardly up to previous years in quality. Cinnamons were also down as compared with last year, but the cup winner (Mr. Brown) exhibited one real good buff. In British classes quality was well to the fore. cups for most points in the three shows: Yorks., Craven; Nor., Ough; Crests, Bavage; Cinn., Brown; A.O.V., Rowe; Mule, Hambley; Brit., Cheney; Nov., Hambley, Hutchings. Judges were: Yorks., Mr. Cheney; Nor., Crests, and A.O.V., Mr. W. French; Mules and Brit., Mr. Pope. Yorks. Yell., ditto Buff. All to Craven; Nor. Yell.: 1, 3, Ough; 2, Brown; Buff.: 1, Brown; 2, Sleep; 3, Ough. Crests: 1, Hutchings. C.B.: 1, 2, Bavage; Cinn. Yell.: 1, Brown; Buff.: 1, Brown. Mule, Light: 1, 2, 3, Hambley. Dark: 1, 4, Hambley; 2, 3, Cheney. Gold. or Buff.: 1, 3, Cheney; 2, 4, 5, Hambley. Linnet, Etc.: 1, 2, 3, Cheney; 4, 5, Hambley. A.O.V. Seedeater: 1, 2, 3, Cheney; 4, Hambley. Small For.: 1, Cheney; 2, 3, Hutchings.—T. Pope, Hon. Sec.

ABERAMAN.

Open show held by the Aberaman C.B.F.A., Swan Hotel, July 15. Entries numbered only 80, but this may be considered a fairly good support for a first attempt, especially considering that the prize money was rather small. The show was the first to be held in the Aberdare Valley, and it is proposed to make it an annual event. Competition for cup for best bird was very keen, and it was a close thing between Mr. Hubbard's Border, Mr. Powell's Yorks., and Mr. Davies' noted Norwich, a foul green of great quality. The Border won on the day's form, the other two showing signs of the coming moult. Mr. J. Hoare judged and gave general satisfaction.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Second F.F. show, Nash's, Hayes, July 21. Unanimously admitted a success numerically and otherwise. Norwich were particularly strong, and these now seem to be taking the lead here, as Yorkshires and British have done in days gone by. We had a few of the latter, "welcome little strangers," and hope soon to see a further improvement, as there is certainly ample room in the society for a few enthusiastic Yorks. and British men. Messrs. Whetton, Maggs, and Davies judged, and their awards were well received. The prompt fixing of prize cards enabled the officials to close the show half an hour before the advertised time. The best thanks of the committee are due to Messrs. Banks, Whetton, Thomas, Smith, Brailly, Ball, Maggs, and Davies, for the splendid list of cash and other specials provided at this and the previous shows.

Nor. Cl. or Tkd. Yell.: 1, sp best Nor., Allsopp, eye tkd., lovely head and neck, short wings and tail, should moult a topper; 2, Thomas, cl., similar, but inclined to slip perch a bit; 3, 4, Rev. DONCASTER C.B.S.

Second N.F. Show, Druids' Arms, Bentley, July 17; 92 birds faced the judge and gave him plenty of work to find the winners, competition being very keen. Fine Yorks. were staged by Messrs. Truman, Blanchon, Norman, Whittington, and Hunt. Norwich were a bit low in numbers, but good birds were put down by Messrs. Flint, Evans, Truman, and Smith. British were very good, both in quality and numbers, and there was a nice show of small Foreign. Gold medal was won by Mr. Twine with a grand young C.B.; special for most points at 1st and 2nd N.F. Shows, Blanchon, 90 points; 2, Truman, 71. Mr. Barker judged, and gave general satisfaction.

WALLSEND (Mid-Tyne) C.B.S.

Show of young Canaries, Mules and British birds, July 17. Entries numbered 100, an excellent gathering considering the very poor season members are having, and showing the keenness of the fanciers. Quality was well up to the usual standard, and there was a very good attendance. Mr. Wigglewroth won challenge cup for the 2nd year in succession, with three Yorks.; Mr. R. Studholme, runner-up, medal. Nor. and Bord. were of very good quality. Mr. Rander won sp. best bird in show, with a Green Bord., and Mr. Blakey 2nd best with a very fine cl. buff Bord.; best British, Johnston, a grand Redpoll. Linnets were extra good ones, and a novice, Mr. Muse, won with a grand bird, which will be heard of later. As usual, the management was all that could be desired, coaxing of entries by the genial sec., Mr. Greenwell, helping to make show a success, while every credit is due to the show manager to Mr. Heslop and stewards, Messrs. Scott, Craig, and White, a most courteous set of fanciers. Mr. T. C. Crawhall judged, and his awards were highly satisfactory.

THE SHOWS IN AUSTRALIA.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Canary and Cages Bird Improvement Society.

8th annual show, St. George's Hall, Newtown, May 21 and 22; the show was a record, entries being about 50 more than last year, and type and quality in every section showed a marked improvement. The uniform pattern and colour of the show cages gave a very neat and attractive appearance to the show. The outstanding feature was the number of Norwich Plainheads, the classes being well supported. This variety is going very strong, and there were many birds of exceptional merit. Mr. Douglas captured most honours, also sp. for best in section. Crests and Crest-breds were well above the average, both in numbers and quality, Mr. Earle taking chief honours with a grand team. Cinnamons also were a grand lot. Mr. W. H. Taylor staging a brace of geese, new chums, we understand, from a well-known stable in England. These birds have left a winning career in England, and will no doubt bring many honours to their present owner. Mr. Meale, the hon. sec., along with the genial president, Mr. Ryder Crofts, and a hard-working committee, did their utmost to make the show a success, and it is pleasing to record that their labours were crowned with success. Judges: Scotch Fancies and Crests, and C.B., Mr. J. Currah; Nor., Mr. Miller; Yorks., Mr. Comley; remainder, Mr. Tucker. Scotch Fancy: 1, spl, 2, 3, Rae, good team, leader cl., good reach and drive, travels well, 2nd similar, not the snbs. or pos.; vhc, hc, Hall. Yorks. Cl. or Tkd. NEW SOUTH WALES O.S.

21st annual show, June 11 and 12, Daking House, Sydney. The hall is admirably suited for the purpose, being excellently lighted and free from draughts. Looking back to three or four years, one is particularly impressed with the marked improvement in the type and quality of every variety of Canary shown. The Scotch Fancies especially were a grand lot, Mr. Orr's champion tld. yell. again capturing sp. for best in section. Mr. Gordon Rao showed two grand young yellows, and won challenge trophy. Yorks. also were well above the average, both in numbers and quality, averaging 11 per class over a liberal classification of 10 classes. Mr. Coupland had out a grand team and captured a good list of honours. Mr. Day, from Brisbane, also exhibited a few good ones, and most of his winners changed hands. Norwich were a hot lot, and the quality and type of this popular variety are making marked progress, chiefly due to the enthusiasm of the members of the N.S.W. Norwich and Cinnamon C.C., who gave their patronage to this show. There were many birds of exceptional merit, Mr. L. Stone's heavily variegated buff, a grand model of the real Bullfinch type, being awarded sp. for best Norwich. Cinnamons were also a choice lot, Mr. Taylor's two yellows (new chums) attracting much attention and comment. Crests and Crest-breds were a grand show in themselves. The young clear Crest put down by Mr. Earle was a bird of great merit and captured sp. for best Crest. Mr. Trevail also put down a stormer in a young yellow varieg. C.B., which took sp. for best C.B. Mr. Saunders, hon. sec., and Messrs. Earle, Moyle, Osborne, Trevail, Beattie, and Coupland, all did their level best in striving hard to make the show the great success it deserved to be. There was a good turn up of fanciers, many coming long distances, a real gathering of the clans from near and far. Here, as at home in England, fanciers look forward with pleasure to the annual reunions at the shows. The judges were: Scotch Fancies, Nor., and Cinn., Mr. J. Currah; Yorks., Crests, and C.B., Mr. L. Stone; Native and For.: Mr. Peir.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SEED SAMPLES (T. H. H.).—Yes, both samples of seed sent—hemp and canary—are good. The quality in each case is first-class all round.

CREST AND MISS PRATT—Replied to by post.

SWOLLEN VENT (Norwich Hen).—I'm afraid I cannot be of much help to you without more definite particulars. You should have said how you have been treating her generally, and described all the symptoms more fully, the state of the droppings, and whether the hen has been used for breeding or not. You may give a morsel of bread and milk well dusted with carbonate of bismuth daily for a week, in addition to the usual seed diet, and add to the drinking water for the same time six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and four of tincture of opium each day. If not considerably better by the end of a week, write again and give the particulars mentioned above as fully as you can, when I will advise you further. Keep cage floor and perches as clean as possible.

A QUESTION OF TRAINING (Stranded).—(1) To get your Rollers to sing freely at night—by daylight, of course—you need only exercise a little judicious management during the later stages of their tuition, when they are beginning to try over their songs. At this stage you should keep the cages covered or the song boxes closed during the greater part of the day, and open them regularly after the gas is lit in the evening, leaving the tutor a fairly free licence to sing at this time until the youngsters begin to follow his example freely. Any that are slow to open out in these circumstances should be placed where some movement is going on, which will generally have the effect of encouraging them to tune up if they are kept well covered during the daytime, and only uncovered for a short time morning and noon for feeding and bathing.

(2) It is not necessary to cover up the tutor, as a rule. This is only necessary if he is decidedly too loud and wild in song, or has some pronounced fault or bad note that you wish to control. (3) In training birds for show, by which I take it you mean a singing contest, you should adopt a similar method to that for getting the young birds to sing at night, except that in this case you keep the birds covered fairly closely for a week or two prior to the event, and uncover them and encourage them to sing as much as they like for an hour or so each day at the same time as they will probably have to sing at the contest.

YOUNG DYING (J. Pawley).—There must be something wrong with your system of feeding, or, possibly, the hemp you use is not of good quality; but you give no definite clue as to what it is. If you have any more broods to separate, do not take them away from the parents altogether until you see that they are just beginning to negotiate canary seed successfully. Then when you separate them, give an unlimited supply of good sound cannery seed, and place on top of it each morning a pinch of summer rape. In addition to this give, say, for each brood of four, a heaped teaspoonful of egg food each morning, and mix it rather on the dry side. Now and again you may vary this by giving instead an equivalent quantity of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. In the afternoon remove any soft food that may remain, and give a teaspoonful of cracked hemp (see that it is of good quality), and the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts crushed dry biscuit and broken groats. When they have been separated a week or so, instead of this afternoon ration give the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts cracked hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats. You may also then begin to give a few seed heads of shepherd's purse, or plantain stalks three or four times a week. Of course, you will give pure fresh water daily from the first.

PLAGUE OF EARWIGS (H. R.).—I should suspect that you have some favourite habitat of these insects near at hand, such as a creeper or ivy-covered wall or tree, in which case the only way to exterminate the pest is to first of all remove its breeding ground. You cannot prevent them being more or less of a nuisance all through the autumn months as long as you have a favourable breeding ground close at hand, but there are several means of reducing the nuisance to a minimum.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3/4); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fairy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." mum. You may lay traps of hollow cylindrical sticks about a foot long—elder sticks, with the pith removed, answer the purpose excellently—and drop these into boiling water each morning, or well dust about the shelves, cages, and in any places where they are found to harbour, with Keating's, freshly-ground pyrethrum powder, flowers of sulphur, or naphthaline (which is also sold under the name of "carbon"), and scour the floor and shelves once a week, adding a tablespoonful of turpentine to each gallon of water. Painting round floor against the walls, round doors and window cases, and on shelves once a week with paraffin will also keep them away, and if no birds are at liberty to fly about room, covering the floor with Jeyes' Sanitary Sawdust would have the same effect. Personally, I should be more inclined to introduce a Robin, or similar soft-billed bird, to fly at liberty about the room. The earwigs would make excellent provender for it—as long as they lasted. Their presence is quite harmless to the Canaries, except that there is the slight risk that they may occasionally disturb a bird at night by creeping on to it and cause a little panic.

TO CHECK BREEDING (A. J.).—It is quite too late to allow hens to go on nesting any longer with any hopes of success, but as your hens appear to have laid another clutch already, I see no reason why you should not allow them to incubate them, as no harm will result, even if the effort proves futile. But you should remove the cocks as soon as the hens begin to sit, and do not return them again this season for any purpose. If the eggs prove unfertile, or the hens desert them before incubation is complete, or as soon as the young leave the nest, whichever the event may be, take away the nest and all nesting material, and turn the hens into a flight cage, where they will get plenty of exercise, and leave them to take their chance until the moult begins, which will effectually put a stop to their nesting desires for this season.

AN UNNATURAL PARENT (Yorkshire Hen).—Sorry, but I cannot tell you how to cure the hen of the vice of eating off the feet of her babies as soon as hatched. As you have tried her with and without the cock with similar results, I am afraid you can do nothing else. It is too late now to let her breed again this season, and she has also done more than sufficient this year. But if you wish to get young from her on account of any particular qualities, you should next season take away her eggs as laid, and give them to a foster hen to hatch out and rear. You might try the effect of fixing a morsel of raw beef or mutton on the end of a perch for her to peck at when young are hatched. This is said to have cured a hen of the habit, but hens of this kidney are rarely worth troubling with. If of no exceptional typical qualities, a long whiff of chloroform is the best thing for them.

MISSING EGG, ETC. (A.R.P.).—(1) If events do not prove that the missing egg must have been covered with nesting material, or overlooked in a corner of the nest-box, assuming boxes are used, I should say that it was dragged or thrown out of the nest and got broken, and it would very easily get overlooked when the cage was cleaned. The hen is evidently out of condition, which is partly the cause of the feet being so frequently clogged. You do not say what you use on the floor of the cage. Keep cage well strewn with clean gritty sand, and a piece of cuttlefish stuck in the wires for her to peck at any time. Each day give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, dusted with carbonate of bismuth, and for green food give a few seed heads of shepherd's purse or seedy sprays of chickweed. In the drinking water for two consecutive days, add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice, and after that six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and three of tincture of steel for a day or two. (2) I suspect the bird which does not sing is a hen. The behaviour of the Yorkshire cock towards it when you placed them together is very significant of this. Had you left them together undisturbed a while you would doubtless soon have had sufficient proof of this, but it is too late now to try the experiment this season. (3) You should begin to give the youngsters a little weak colour food every third day at once, and increase the frequency as soon as you see them showing signs of the approaching moult. As soon as you see a few stray feathers cast, give the colour daily, and gradually increase the strength until in the course of a week you are giving it the full normal strength.

CANARY AND HEMP (S.M.).—The sample of canary sent is of very fair size, clean, bright, well ripened, and quite sweet, and of good all-round quality. The hemp is a first rate sample, of very good quality.

A LATE BUILDER (A Constant Reader).—I am rather dubious of the "cock" which has built a nest and taken the trouble to sit in it at times. I should suspect it of being a little too ladylike, despite its beautiful colour and the fact that it has sung once or twice. It is too late now to hope for any further developments this season, and the best advice I can give you is to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free, and master its contents between now and next spring, when you will be able to start then with a greater chance of successful results. It is quite a matter of taste which is the best breed to start with—Yorkshire or Norwich. The latter has the richest colour, but the Yorkshire is not so very far behind in this respect, and its upstanding, slim shape gives it the most aristocratic appearance. So far as case of management and freedom of breeding is concerned, there is nothing to choose between them.

BEST FOR BREEDING (S. Pearson).—As a breed the Roller is far ahead of any other as a songster, but it is about the worst in appearance, being small and colourless. Therefore, if you want the best in song you must be a little blind to aesthetic beauty. I cannot commend your idea of keeping the bird in a hanging cage, which, I take it, is open wire all round, in front of a window. Whatever the advantage may be from an ornamental standpoint, it is about the worst possible position for the bird's long-continued health and comfort, which should certainly be the first consideration. You will doubtless find the best method of caging discussed in the Nutshell booklet you have. You should get a very nice singer suitable for your purpose for 10s. 6d., or you may go higher up to 30s., 40s., or 60s. for more highly-trained birds. In a few weeks hence you will see plenty offered in our advertisement columns. Just now moulting and training will be the order of the day. Sorry we cannot single out any individual for mention here.

THICK AND MOISH (Puzzled, Leicester).—(1) The soiling of the feathers around the beaks points to the birds having to breathe a smoky or dust-laden atmosphere. You should see that they are kept in a bright and healthy place, well aired, but free from direct-cutting draughts, and keep cages and perches as clean as possible. In addition to the staple diet of canary and rape, give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, on which you have dropped two drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and sprinkled with maw seed, to each bird daily for a fortnight. Give also every second day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats, and on the alternate days a few seed heads of shepherd's purse, or a plantain stalk. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea, for two consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of opium, and dilute sulphuric acid two days in every three for a week. (2) To help birds to break away freely with the moult, and also assist them to shed their feathers easily, you may add five drops each of syrup of saffron and sweet spirit of nitre, and 20 drops of rum or whisky to the water four days a week during the first month or so.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

REDPOLLS NESTING (E. C. W.).—If your Redpolls continue to incubate well, the eggs should hatch out on the thirteenth day, but if they do not appear then do not disturb them, as they may not have sat closely at first, so you had better allow a few days longer to make certain. Feed the birds as usual as regards seeds, and give in addition a little egg food, made by boiling a fresh egg for ten minutes. Beat a portion of it up with a fork, and add three times the quantity of crushed biscuit or stale sponge cake; also supply a little soaked seeds and plenty of wild food, such as seedling grass, chickweed, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc. This can be given in bunces, and the birds allowed to hunt it over and take what they like. Do not separate them; leave both birds together. The cock will no doubt assist in rearing the young; they are generally good parents, so your chances of success are very good.

LOSING FINCHES (J. Redmond).—You give me no information about the species of birds you are losing, nor the seeds you are feeding them on. As far as I can gather from your letter, your treatment must be at fault. Perhaps the seed is not first class. I would therefore advise you to procure some from an entirely different source, and throw the other away, also give the birds boiled water to drink. You should supply them with plenty of seedling wild food, which is plentiful everywhere just now. See that your cages and perches are kept perfectly clean.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS

should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3/4); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2, "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4, "Song Thrush, and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Tufted," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Mould British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

HOW THE LINNET MOULTS (C. Garland).—I am sorry I did not quite understand your question. Your query now is respecting the wings only. The general rule is this: One of the large primary feathers drops out and almost at the same time a corresponding feather on the other wing follows. The first to go is usual about the fourth from the outside; then the other large ones follow, and perhaps one or two of the inner feathers at the same time. There is no absolute rule or regularity about it. The only thing that Nature is careful about is that a bird of flight has sufficient feathers always in the wings to escape from its enemies and to seek its food. Some of the ducks are an exception, but these bide in the rushes and waterside plants until the feathers grow again.

THRUSH NOT SINGING (Bad Appetite).—It is getting rather late now to get much song out of a Thrush, as most of them have commenced to moult. The secret of keeping a caged bird in song is the method of feeding. If you treat him generously he will repay you with melody. I have no caged Thrushes just now, but when I had I fed them mostly on high-grade insectile food. It came a little bit expensive, but I had my reward in the healthy condition of the birds and the music they gave me. I would advise you to add a little hard-boiled egg occasionally to his food, and be pretty liberal with insects and grubs, either what you can collect, or mealworms. He will then romp through his moult and commence to sing soon afterwards. Glad to hear my previous advice was successful.

TREATING A LINNET (A Constant Reader).—Procure the Nutshell booklet on the Linnet, No. 2, post free 2d. You will then understand more about the requirements of this songster and be able to treat him properly. As he has had nothing but dry seeds he has become fat and dull, so give him at once a dose of Glauber Salts, as much as will cover a sixpence, in his drinking water, and repeat three days later. Supply him with plenty of seedling weeds, and, if necessary, take away his seeds for an hour or so, which will cause him to partake of them; they are much better for him than dried seeds. You might also occasionally supply a spoonful of soaked rape and teazle. Some birds are very obstinate about what they eat, but by a little management they can generally be led in the right direction. If he will not bathe, gently spray him early in the morning on fine bright days.

VARIOUS QUESTIONS (Novice, E. H.).—I do not suppose your Finch will sing properly again until after the moult. I would advise you to give him a course of Chemical Food. Put a small teaspoonful in his drinker, fresh daily; boil the water first or it will not mix. If he goes through the moult well he should sing properly afterwards. Very few birds sing well after being mated. (2) Yes, your Linnet will be all right to breed with next season. You should have no difficulty with him. (3) The cage you mention will do nicely. You are not obliged to have a partition; you can teach your birds to run into another cage when required. This can be managed by inserting a stick between the wires and gently driving the birds towards the door; after a time they run into the other cage directly the door is open. (4) You could mate your Linnet either with a Greenfinch or Redpoll; these are the earliest, but neither is particularly striking. Other partners to choose from are the Siskin, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch. The last-named crossing produces a very handsome Hybrid, and a good specimen is an almost certain prize winner and a valuable bird but, like all good Hybrids, rather difficult to get. Whichever you go in for you should try to procure a hand-reared hen or a young brancher—that is, a bird not yet moulted.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

PARROT WITH INDIGESTION (E. J. M.).—It is not a case of acute indigestion, though, of course, it may become so. You must watch the dietary closely. Do not give yourself, or allow others to, tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. The regular dietary should consist of: seed mixture, ripe fruit, and green food, with grit (not sand), cuttlebone, and a piece of a branch for it to exercise its mandibles upon always in the cage. Any of the following may be given as extras, not necessarily all at once, but at intervals to vary the diet: nuts, stale crusts, plain cake, biscuits, dry boiled potato, and raw carrot. For the present put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every third day, and twice a week lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food. If the voidings should become watery loose, then the magnesia must be given less frequently. Treat as above for a month at least, and then, if need be, report progress. Keep a watch on your young people and see that they do not give unwholesome tit-bits.

GREEN SINGING FINCH WEAK ON LEGS (F.K.).—It is difficult to form an opinion. It may be old age, for which there is no remedy. You are not very explicit and I am unable to fully gather your accommodation. Is your aviary merely a C.P. aviary-cage? If so, possibly they are not getting quite all they require. Your seed supplies are satisfactory, but grit (not sand) should regularly be supplied. Green food should be supplied daily. Cage the weak bird again for a time, and while it is in your hand give it two drops of castor oil direct to the beak, but let it swallow one drop before giving it the second. Also take a piece of sponge cake as large as a walnut, spot over it ten drops of cod liver oil emulsion, and then pour over it a little more boiling milk than it will absorb. A little chemical food in the drinking water will also be of benefit.

PARROT IN POOR CONDITION (C. M. Philp).—Your query is very incomplete; in fact, you give me no data whatever save the two facts that it is in poor condition and is picking at its feathers. You do not even tell me what kind of Parrot it is! If it is a Grey, you had better get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot" (2d. post free from our Manager), and diet and treat your bird as stated therein. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water daily, till the bowels become really loose, then cease for a time and only give an occasional dose to keep them properly regulated. Well spray (use a fine sprayer) twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution. You had also better seal out the cage, perches and all food vessels to make sure no parasites are harbouring therein. If you repeat query with full details, I shall be pleased to try and give you more definite help.

WEAVERS AND AVADAVATS (Kingston, Gloucester).—Weavers have an eclipse plumage, and only wear the bright nuptial plumage during the breeding season. At other times they may reasonably be compared to a Corn Bunting. When in nuptial plumage the Orange Weaver is mostly fiery orange and black. It would appear that your bird is a Red-billed Weaver, if it still retains the present hues till the moult. It is in any case a cock, as the hen birds retain their plain garb all the year round. Both species have been bred in garden aviaries. The average incubation period of Avadavats in my aviaries has been eleven days, though it is not always easy to fix the period to a day. These charming mites feed their young mostly on spray millet and such flies and blight as they can get in the aviary. I have also seen them picking out ants' eggs from the soft food dish. Flowering and seedling grass and other weeds in a similar stage are more freely taken at this period than in the usual course. In the Nutshell, pages 22-24 are comprehensive, and cover the breeding season.

MOCKING BIRD (J. Barkin).—Taking your queries in sequence. This bird belongs to the Turdidae, and is about the size of a small Thrush and is as suitable a cage bird as that species. Yes, there are other kinds, but it is mostly the American species that reaches the English market. The sexes are very similar; the hen is greyer on the underparts than the male and her throat is not so pure a white as his. A good cock is a musical treat and has a very varied song. Once established they are not difficult to keep. He requires insectile mixture containing a "dash" of grocer's currants, fruit, and insects (mealworms and almost anything you can capture, viz., earwigs, beetles, smooth caterpillars, spiders, etc.). They should have a large cage at least 24 inches long, 15in. deep, and about the same height. The cage will require constant attention to keep it sweet, but a daily clean should suffice. If you have a good covering of dry earth or sand on the cage-tray as an absorptive. They need no coddling, but must be kept out of draught. Once they are established a cold room would suffice, or any ordinary living-room, but I consider in a kitchen the temperature is too fluctuating to form good quarters for birds.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3/4); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 26 "Warblers." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

WHITE-THROATED FINCH (H. A.).—Nearly all the genus Spermophila are good songsters, but they are quarrelsome birds, and for a series in rather confined quarters I do not consider them suitable, so did not include them in the list in the reply you refer to. At various times they have been on the market in fair numbers, and only command quite a moderate price. Another reason for not including any of these small Grosbeaks in the list was that I did not think them likely to be obtainable in the present restricted state of the market. One of the patriarchs of my aviary, a little Grey Finch (Spermophila grisea), is a charming songster, and a really handsome little fellow, even though Nature has clothed him modestly.

CEYLON HANGING PARAKEET (T.W.M.).—These have appeared on the show bench on many occasions in the course of years, but they have seldom been plentiful, though I can remember at least two occasions at London shows in which several were staged; but, unless there has been quite a record influx I should say they were quite scarce at the present time, and I do not know of any being on the market. At the present time I can't give values; it would be what the vendor could induce the purchaser to pay, say, a probable minimum of 50s. to 60s. At all times this species would be likely to catch the judge's eye.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

F. E. Mather.—Young Roller died from the effects of an injury, how produced being difficult to surmise. There was extensive hæmorrhage on the left side under the skin.

E. Rosa.—Impaction of the proventriculus (true digestive stomach), with inflammation changes in its walls.

C. B. Massicks, Esq.—Death occurred from pulmonary hæmorrhage, induced by fright. The lesions about the head, in my opinion, were caused by rats, this being a favourite seat of attack, and no doubt a post-mortem occurrence.

Yorkshire Hens.—Peritonitis was cause of death, due to inertia of and subsequent infection from the oviduct. Are your birds too confined? The food would bear no relation to the disease.

H. L. Appleyard.—Pneumonia affecting both lungs, probably the result of a chill.

W. Richards.—Ptoimaine poisoning.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

P. Jacques.—According to our information, you may catch Linnets in Cumberland between Aug. 1 and Mar. 1, except on Sundays and Christmas Day. Enquiry at your local police station would confirm or correct this. Please see Rule 7 at the head of these columns, as to replies by post.

F. George.—If it is the keeping of the Grey Parrot about which you require information, you will find full details in our Nutshell No. 17, 2d. post free, from our Manager, or twopenny from your local newsagent or bird dealer. Mr. C. P. Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" gives full instructions as to the keeping of various kinds of Parrots, and we could send you this for sevenpence.

On sale at all Bookstalls and Newsagents. It is the brightest Angling Journal, and is devoted to every kind of Fishing.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

the 1915 Edition of

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

This issue has met with greater success than ever before, and

THEY ARE SELLING OUT FAST.

Be advised, and send for a copy
NOW before it is too late.

Remember!

We had to Disappoint Many

Fanciers last year, as the entire edition was sold out before they ordered their copies.

THE BIRD-KEEPER'S YEAR.

A new feature, which will remind the fancier of essential details of management, the timely attention to which goes so far to ensure success in the hobby, and which gives valuable hints month by month.

THE CANARY BREEDER'S OPPORTUNITY.

By Claude St. John. Telling of the bright future that is in store for Canary breeders, and showing how to take advantage of the existing circumstances in order eventually to profit by the increased demand which is certain to arise in the near future.

HOW TO MAKE BIRD-BREEDING PAY.

By O. E. Brooks. Demonstrating that the hobby of bird-keeping may be made profitable as well as pleasurable. Indicating the mistakes to avoid, and the proper methods to be pursued.

THE FASCINATION OF AN AVIARY OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

By W. Wallis. The delights of foreign bird-keeping are dealt with in this interesting and practical contribution. The fittings of the Aviary, the kind of birds to keep, and their requirements in the way of food and accommodation are all described, and there is an illustration of an outdoor aviary which is at once inexpensive, roomy, and adequate in every respect.

WITH THE WILD BIRDS DURING 1914.

By H. Norman. In this article our British bird expert writes in his well-known style on the birds about which he is so well qualified to write, and all lovers of birds in their natural surroundings will be interested in this feature.

HOW TO REDUCE THE FOOD BILL.

By Claude St. John. Useful hints that will help bird-keepers to economise in this time of temporary stress; showing how the expense of feeding may be reduced without any detriment whatever to the well-being of the birds.

A REVIEW OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

How the birds have fared during the year in each section. All are dealt with:—Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Greens, Cinnamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fancies, Crests, Lancashires and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

A DIRECTORY OF JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

DIARY AND CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR WITH EGG-HATCHING TABLE.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CAGE BIRD ASSOCIATIONS.

No matter what variety of birds you keep, whether novice or old hand, there is information in this bird-keeper's encyclopaedia of the greatest use to you. Each article is written by an expert, and in their experiences of failures and successes you will find the way to the top of the ladder.

WAXBILLS (Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey, and St. Helena). Than this interesting quartette, which can be purchased at from 2/6 to 7/6 a pair, there are few more charming foreigners. They can be successfully kept, too, with little difficulty if you will follow the hints given by Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., in "Nutsell No. 26," 2d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Call at any of our agents and get it for 2d. (list frequently published).

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutsell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 2d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

ROLLER CANARIES.

Season 1915-1916.

VOOGT'S STRAIN.

I left London on Wednesday, July 28th, for Rotterdam, by s.s. "Batavier V." and returned on Sunday, the 1st August, by s.s. "Mecklenburg," where I perfected arrangements for the supply of Roller Canaries, Cocks and Hens, for the coming season.

I am now enabled to state that there will be a great shortage of these birds for 1915-16 season, more particularly in first-class cocks. I have, however, arranged for weekly supplies of both cocks and hens. The young cocks will be arriving regularly some time in September; a few have arrived this week. The following figures may prove interesting to the readers of "Cage Birds." From January to July, 1915, a period of seven months, 20,188 CANARIES WERE SOLD, VALUE, £2,000.

In selling such a number there must be naturally some complaints. The Editor is at liberty to state publicly how many he has received. I believe only six in all—a truly wonderful record. Six complaints selling two thousand and pounds' worth of live birds is worth recording. Anyone doubting any of above statements can by giving £5 to any charitable institution have the above figures and facts verified by the Editor of "Cage Birds," for I will place my books at his disposal.

TERMS.—There will be no alteration. During the last seven months not a single Canary has been sent to anyone, either to dealers or to amateurs, without cash with order. Every dealer has been treated alike. The average profit is sixpence on each cock and twopence each hen, which does not allow me to take any risk whatever.

ROLLER COCKS.—A few old birds still on hand in usual song, 7/6 each, 7 for 42/-; 70 Young Cocks, first arrival, 6/- each, 7 for 35/-.

HENS.—1,000 actually in stock, 2 for 3/-, in wicker cage; 14, in 7 cages, 18/-; these can be sent in various colours, splashed, dark, or yellow.

Note.—Those who telegraph money receive birds same day.

THERE is no more lovely seed-eater than the popular Gouldian Finch, which, however, is very difficult to establish. This trouble can be overcome, and the variety kept successfully. But you must follow the hints given in "Nutsell No. 14," from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C., post free for 2d. From agents (see list frequently published).

THOUGH they can often be purchased for the modest half-crown, Pekin Nightingales are very beautiful in plumage, have a fine song, and make ideal cage or aviary birds. Some very helpful information on this variety will be found in "Nutsell No. 19," the author of which is Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S. Get it at once, 2d. post free from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 2d. from our agents (list published frequently).

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth glib).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Battye (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Moulting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kitch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/1, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; extensive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateils is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardbills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 1/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge; (associate editor, J. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write us for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates combined with first-class work. Artistic memos, with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

WIGAN.

Wigan Linnet Club, Bay Horse Hotel, Whalley, Wigan, Linnet singing contest (time and quality) will be held at above Hotel, Aug. 14, when the proprietor, Mr. Sam F. Shaw, will give prizes according to entrance. First pair of birds staged at 2.30; entrance one shilling each bird; entries taken to last bird.—A. Leyland, Sec.—(Advt.).

KIPPAX.

Annual Bank Holiday contest, July 31, Commercial Hotel; 25 birds entered for six prizes: 1, 5, Collinson; 2, Lightfoot; 3, Potter; 4, 6, Plows; 5, 7, Plows; 6, 8, Plows. The judges, W. Perkins, A. Cooper. Two well-known Linnet fanciers, H. Wigfield and Butterfield, from Leeds, judged for quality: 1, Perkins; 2, Potter; 3, Plows. The judges induced K. Plows to join their club at Clarence Hotel. Members were pleased to have the company of Messrs. Wigfield and Butterfield, and trust they will give us another visit. Some of our members decided to pay a visit to the Clarence Hotel Linnet Club and enter some of their birds at the open quality contests. Our members do not know when they have a good quality bird, and the more we intermix amongst our near neighbours the better we shall enjoy both quality and time singing.—H. Plows, Sec.

FIFE C.B.L.

Meeting at Lochgelly, July 31, Mr. R. T. Campbell, president, chair. The minutes of Dunfermline meeting were read and adopted. Owing to Mr. Cordery not seeing his way to carry on the work of secretary, I was appointed in his place for the year; agreed to pay 10s. 5s. 2s. 6d. as prize money at League Show, to be held in Melhill, Oct. 23. Entry money 1s. 6d.; sec. of each society is asked to get as many specials as possible. Delegates were instructed to put before their respective societies and report at next League meeting how many entries to make a full class. Agreed that all League meetings start a little earlier, and each society was asked to provide a lecturer or anything that would be of interest to members. Next meeting Cowdenbeath, Masonic Arms, Aug. 21, at 5.—Joe Sneddon, Sec.

BARROW C.B.S.

Meeting, July 28, Mr. A. Hudson presiding. A full account was given of the N.F. show, July 10, in aid of his Worship the Mayor's Tobacco Fund for the local Territorials at the front. It was a record show in every respect. There was a very large attendance of people at the opening by Mr. J. Fisher, in the absence of his Worship, who was detained owing to extra pressure of work. Mr. Fisher, in declaring the show open, expressed pleasure in the honour conferred on him in being asked to perform this duty. He was quite sure everyone who devoted their leisure to bird study reaped their own reward. He was pleased to learn that the society had decided not to abandon this show because other shows had been abandoned. The shows were undoubtedly educational, and people could not keep pace with them unless they were followed up. Before they were another year older he hoped they would have arrived at the end of the present titanic struggle, and that our dear ones might be home again and the country down to its normal level once more. He hoped that his two sons, like many others, might return home safe and sound. Many of those present had suffered by the loss of friends and relatives, for undoubtedly the district had fought well and had suffered. He wished the show every success and hoped the financial result might be a good one. On behalf of the society, Mr. D. McFarlane pointed out that in Mr. Fisher the society had an ideal Vice-President. He took a special interest in the welfare of the society, and was always willing to do what he could for it. As the proceeds of the show were for a patriotic object, viz., for the Mayor's fund for providing our boys with tobacco—and they remembered that Mr. Fisher had two sons serving the colours—they could not find a more suitable gentleman to open the show. As a token of the high esteem in which they held Mr. Fisher, the members of the society had arranged a little presentation, and he wished to explain that this had been subscribed, not from any funds, but by the private and voluntary subscription of the members. They had tried to secure the service of the oldest member of the society, Mr. R. Willison, the well-known Scotch Fancy breeder, to make the presentation, but had failed to do so owing to over-pressure of work at present, and in his stead he had secured the youngest member to perform this pleasing duty. This gentleman, Mr. Roberts, then handed over a gold-mounted walking stick, suitably inscribed, to Mr. Fisher, and accompanied this with complimentary remarks. In returning thanks, Mr. Fisher pointed out that the society had in Mr. McFarlane an ideal secretary. He thanked the members of the society and Mr. Roberts for the presentation, and intimated that he would treasure it. The presentation had taken him by surprise, and he valued it, not for its cost, but the kind sentiments which lay behind it. He was pleased to see so many present, and hoped the show would be highly successful. Members note.—There will be a special meeting, Aug. 11, to discuss the advisability of holding either a 40-mile radius or an open show, and other business. Secretaries of clubs who would render support, kindly correspond with secretary, also specialist clubs. The pleasing sum of £15 was handed over to the local Tobacco Fund.—D. McFarlane, Sec., 26, Lord Robert Street, Walney, Barrow-in-Furness.

Country Rambles

A DELIGHTFUL DAY AMONG THE BIRDS.

On July 13, members of the Glasgow Carlton Bird Club availed themselves of the half-holiday and of the invitation of Sir Samuel Clincher to visit his estate at Camlachie. Sir Samuel has the unique personality of being one of the most enthusiastic fanciers, and at the same time one of the least known in the West of Scotland; the latter must be attributed to his strong aversion to showing for cash prizes. His estate is a happy home of bird life, and his keepers are relentless in their pursuit and destruction of any enemy of his feathered friends, be they biped or quadruped. About twenty members availed themselves of the invitation, and a wagonette conveyed them to Sir Samuel's stately mansion, which is situated almost in the centre of a veritable forest. After partaking of the hospitality of Sir Samuel and Lady Clincher, we proceeded to explore the sylvan groves, which are literally clogged with almost every variety of British birds. Sir Samuel, who feeds his feathered friends all the year round, gave us a unique display of the friendship which exists between him and his numerous birds. It was the regular hour of feeding, and while we remained in the background Sir Samuel, with two keepers and food, went to the lawn scarcely fifty yards from the Manor House. A few blasts of a shrill metallic whistle caused great commotion among the bushes, and the air was full of birds. In a few minutes Sir Samuel was literally surrounded by them. Not satisfied with partaking of his generous hospitality, many of his older bird friends perched on his shoulders, and an extended arm contained two Starlings, a Mavis, two hen Blackbirds, seemingly fresh from the duty of incubation, and a Robin waiting for the mealworms which they knew were coming. The birds seemed absolutely indifferent to the movements of Sir Samuel, who was obliged to move cautiously lest he should tread on them. Many of the familiar ones, Sir Samuel said, had been reared in captivity and then given their liberty, which, by the way, some of them would not wholly accept.

One old cock Starling was very amusing, and carried on a continual conversation with Sir Samuel. He was called "Bill," and when he hopped on his host's shoulder, Sir Samuel said "Hello, Bill." "Hello, Sam, anything good to-day?" was the unhesitating reply, and a mealworm passed into kingdom come. A photograph of this unique spectacle was taken, but we fear the distance was too great. Should it turn out all right we will send one for reproduction. When we started on our ramble the old Starling followed up for a considerable distance, shouting "Hello, Sam," with an extraordinary human voice.

The inside of the porch at the grand entrance to this manor, which is thickly covered with ivy, contains the nests of two Mavis, one Blackbird, and several others, and although Sir Samuel, his family, servants, and many visitors pass in and out daily, the birds seem not to mind. Our ramble through the grounds, which are very extensive, brought us at almost every step to birds and nests of nearly every known British variety. One portion of the demesne, known as the White Vale, was densely populated, and nests seemed to be placed almost "hut an' ben."

Lord Provost and Lady Dunlop, together with Sir A. Scott Gibson and Lady Gibson, later on joined the party, and we spent fully four hours exploring the bird homes under the personal guidance of Sir Samuel, who seems to know every nest on the estate. Nowhere have I seen birds display such amazing confidence in the human being. If the theory of reincarnation holds good, and we are allowed any chance in our next appearance, I shall insist on coming back as a bird to Sir Samuel's estate. Needless to say, we spent the most enjoyable day of our lives, and we motored home full of gratitude to Sir Samuel and Lady Clincher.—W. Hutchieson.

Twitterings.

Mr. R. T. Lonsdale, 80, Tiverton-st., Wavertree, Liverpool, is now secretary of the Garston B.B.A. in place of Mr. A. T. Mulloch (resigned). All communications should be addressed accordingly.

Will societies in Yorkshire and Lancashire requiring the patronage of the Yorks and Lancs. British Bird and Mule Club apply as early as possible to T. H. Inman, Hon. Sec., 43, Derby Road, Thornbury, Bradford?

We are open to receive applications for patronage from societies up to Aug. 11, writes Mr. F. W. Laidlow, Sec., Northern Norwich P.H.C., 55, Colston-st., Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne, as we require two more to fill up our number.

Societies desiring to have the patronage of the Northern British, Mule and Foreign Club should apply before August 28 to Mr. W. Curry, sec., 6, Roxburgh Place, Newcastle, as patronage will be allotted on that date. The number of classes and the name of the judge must be stated.

I beg to thank you for producing on the Front Page of last week's CAGE BIRDS the photographs of my last season's winning Yellowhammer and Linnet, writes Mrs. Lillian E. T. Dalton. The picture does your artist great credit.

By an unfortunate accident the advertisement of Llannrwst show was omitted from our issue of last week, and we therefore would specially call attention to the advt. which appears on this page this week. Entries close on Aug. 10.

Mr. R. Jackson, sec. S.E. London F. and F.A., writes that the society has altered its headquarters to the North Camberwell Constitutional Club, 432, Old Kent Road, where the postponed general meeting will be held Aug. 9, at 8. Fanciers and friends invited.

We have received the Rule Book of the London C.B.A. Besides the ordinary rules of the society and the show rules the booklet contains a list of names and addresses of members. Mr. A. J. Watcham, hon. sec., 192, Mare Street, Hackney, will be pleased to forward a copy to anyone desirous of joining the Association.

A ramble of the members of the Garston B.B.A. takes place on Sunday, Aug. 8, meet at Mr. Jones's, 35, Church-rd., Garston, at 2.30. The ramble will be along the foreshore to Oglet, thence inland. Tea will be provided at Oglet for a small charge. Members and friends of other societies are cordially invited, especially a botanist to give a little advice on the numerous wild seeds growing on the banks of the foreshore.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret that I have to announce the sudden death of Mrs. W. Gledhill, wife of our oldest member, Mr. W. Gledhill, of Lockwood, writes Mr. A. Lawford, Sec., Huddersfield O.S. I am sure that every fancier will join with us in tendering to Mr. Gledhill and daughter our very deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

The leading article in the August issue of "British Birds," Messrs. Witherby, High Holborn, ls. monthly, is an account by Mr. J. H. Gurney and Miss E. L. Turner of the nesting of the Long-eared Owl on the ground, and among the usual interesting "Notes" is a record of the Tawny Owl also nesting on the ground. The article is illustrated by reproductions of some fine photographs by Miss Turner of the hen Owl on the nest.

It is with deep regret that I have to report the sad lot that has befallen T. Seddon, a former member of the Leigh C.B.S., whilst doing his duty at the Dardanelles, writes Mr. R. Charleson, sec. He has lost his left leg through shrapnel shell, and I am sure all fanciers who knew him will wish him a speedy recovery to bodily health. He was always an enthusiast in Mule breeding, and no doubt he will wish to take up the hobby again when he returns home.

The bird promised by Mr. Crawhall is for most points over this year's table shows commencing with our next show, Aug. 11, not for best bird as in my report of our meeting and table show, writes Mr. R. Tindall, Hon. Sec., Northern Yorks C.C., 6, Gill-st., Benwell, Newcastle-on-Tyne. This is an opportunity that should not be missed by our novices. Mr. Crawhall will make it either cock or hen as the winner wishes. I shall be glad to receive the names of anyone wishing to join our club, also all applications for patronage, which will be allotted shortly.

The Value of a Pet Bird.

Bills displayed in the windows of tradesmen in Streatham, London, offer a reward of £3 for the recovery of a tame Raven.

Where Parrots are Popular.

It is said that among the mining population of the Black Country and S. Staffordshire there are more Parrot owners than in any other industrial district.

Our Front Page Drawings.

The original drawings of our front page illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing in our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture will be sent on application.

From a Soldier to his Nurse.

A wounded soldier in the City of Dublin Hospital writes that his account of his birds in better times has so interested one of his nurses, especially when he told her of the effect of colour-feeding, that he is making her a present of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," so that she may gather fuller particulars on the subject.

One Nest Inside Another.

Included in a list of unusual nesting sites given in the August issue of "British Birds" is an account of the nest of a Robin, built inside the nest of a Song Thrush after the young Thrushes had flown. The Editor points out that instances have previously been recorded of Robins building in old nests of the Blackbird, Thrush, Hedge Sparrow, and Swallow.

The Cinnamon Canary.

"The Bird of Royal Blood."

A Paper read at the meeting of the Western Counties O.S., Plymouth, on June 15th, by Mr. A. B. Brown, Plymouth.

ON the other hand, the wise buyer of stock makes one purchase, the right sort, probably wins a few prizes right away, and after the show season is over, breeds some more winners which in turn bring grist to the mill, and so works his way upwards to the top of the exhibition ladder, and all because he paid a reasonable price for stock birds, which were the outcome of many years patient exercise of the other man's brain.

Thus the newcomer commences with the finished material, and it has been recorded that beginners have actually bred birds from such stock, which beat the birds bred by the original breeder who had spent years of trials in the gradual building up of this strain.

Now we know where we stand with regard to quality of stock! The next question is—how many birds do we require for successful Cinnamon breeding? The answer, I suggest, is four. Self yellow cock and self buff hen and self buff cock with self yellow hen. These should be of one breeder, and the two cocks must not be near relations. The young of the respective pairs can be worked on for years without additional introductions from outside, and the breeding of good Cinnamons is assured.

Sometimes it occurs that the fancier has bad luck; he loses the young, or one of the parents, or his birds lose in colour, size, and type, and he may be quite unable to remedy it by birds of his own stock. Whenever this happens, the best means to employ is to get the required birds from a Cinnamon breeder who has the pure bred birds which excel in the qualities desired.

It may happen they cannot be acquired, and in this case he thinks it justifiable to try an outside cross; a course which is correct, provided the fancier knows how to do it, and is perfectly acquainted with the peculiarity of Cinnamon blood. And herein lies the secret of successful Cinnamon breeding.

As already mentioned, Cinnamons can only be propagated through the males. No matter how pure the Cinnamon hen, unless she is paired with a Cinnamon bred cock, there will never be bred a Cinnamon feathered or Cinnamon ticked young. On the other hand, a Cinnamon cock paired with a hen of any variety, without a spot of Cinnamon blood in her veins, may breed self-coloured Cinnamons of rich colour, but it is absolutely certain that each of these Cinnamon feathered, or Cinnamon ticked young will be a hen, and the cocks green.

This has never been known to vary, for wherever a case has been thought to be otherwise, a search in the records of the birds' history has proved the existence of Cinnamon blood in both parents, and this, although it had lain dormant in the strain for years, had come to the surface on mixing with a stronger flow of Cinnamon blood.

If green cocks are paired to their sisters (of the cross from the Cinnamon cock and Non-Cinnamon hen) purest Cinnamon-coloured young may be got, both cocks and hens, but extreme care should be taken in the use of these Cinnamons; although they are sound in colour, they should be mated back to Cinnamons of known purity of blood.

It is just here, after showing how easy it is to get Cinnamon-coloured young, we should also show how impossible it is to get Cinnamons from a Non-Cinnamon bred cock paired with a pure bred self-Cinnamon hen; the young from this cross would be Greens, and variegated birds, but never a Cinnamon-coloured feather. Pair these young together, and clears and variegated or green will result.

Now compare the results of the respective crosses, and it will be very evident that the power of the Cinnamon character is in the males. Armed with this knowledge, it becomes easy to add another element to make up any deficiencies we may have in the Cinnamon stock. And so we set to work, with a thorough confidence of being able to improve the Cinnamon where necessary.

Bird Sentinels.

A soldier on leave from the trenches tells how birds warn the Allies of the coming of the clouds of poison gas when the Germans attempt that mode of attack at night. In the darkness the coming of the gas is unseen, but long before the smell of the fumes can be detected in the trenches there is a great clamouring of birds awakened from their night perches. The birds fly away beyond reach of the fumes, and in the meantime the British soldier is prepared.

The Old, Old Story.

"W.C.," in the "Manchester Dispatch," says that a reader has sent him an interesting experience of a few years ago, in which he recalls that for several days the Swallows and Sparrows had battled for possession of a nest. He noticed that the fight had been broken off, and on making an examination he found that the Swallows had "built in" the Sparrow, that bird being found dead in the nest. I have a recollection of having heard a similar story, says "W.C.," but this is authenticated by a reliable correspondent. I make no comment upon it, except that Mr. Sparrow did not live up to his reputation if he allowed a pair of Swallows to imprison him in a mud-coated nest under the eaves of a house.

Many Vices: One Virtue.

In an interesting article headed "Dogs With Bad Names" in the "Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News," Mr. Frank Bonnet says: "The Jackdaw, beneath a pleasing exterior hides a blackened soul. We all owe him a grudge for having practically driven from our shores that much more handsome member of the corvine race, the Cornish Chough, but, quite apart from that heinous crime, the Jackdaw is guilty of many and serious misdemeanours. He is an inveterate destroyer of game, searching most diligently for the eggs of both Pheasant and Partridge in the open, and destroying their young as well whenever opportunity offers. Young poultry he will kill in wholesale fashion; he will rob the nest of any hen that 'steals her nest' away from home; and he will plunder the pigeon lofts of eggs and young birds in the most systematic way. Because of these his many wickednesses the Jackdaw undoubtedly deserves all he gets, and it may be added, for he is an exceedingly wary bird, that he does not often get all that he deserves. All that can be said on the Jackdaw's behalf is that, in common with the Rook, he does some good, as the farmer will testify."

Where Hornets Guard Birds' Nests

Not long ago when walking over the veld, says a correspondent to "The Field," writing from N.W. Rhodesia, I noticed a bird's nest in a tree, and going up to look at it more closely in my usual inquisitive way was startled by a buzzing round my head, only to discover that I had nearly run into a hornets' nest. On looking up at the bird's nest again I saw the nest of the hornets about 1 ft. away. I did not think much of the incident at the time, but on another occasion I saw another nest made in exactly the same way on the same kind of thorn tree, known as "trachem bichee," or bitje, which in Dutch means "wait-a-bit," so called on account of its awful thorns which hold you if you get entangled. As before, I went up to look at it, and was again startled by the same angry buzzing round my head, and, to my great astonishment, on looking up I saw a nest of hornets in the same relative position to the nest as on the previous occasion. Since then in my rambles over the veld I have seen hundreds of nests of the same sort in the same kind of tree and the same little hornets' nests protecting them. Is this reasoning, or instinct? I have pointed it out to many persons, hunters, and men always on the veld, and none of them had noticed it.

WILD FOODS FOR SEED-EATING BIRDS.

By
(Ropley).

The useful greenfoods, etc., available during August are herein described. Previous articles appeared in our issues of April 10 and the first weeks of the following months, and we have, we are pleased to say, been able to arrange with the Author to contribute a continuation in the first issue of each month.

THE goodly array of autumnal weeds bequeathed, while yet undeveloped, by the departing July, are hurried along to maturity with the scorching and breathless days of August. The wild foods now are companions of the harvest, and their muster soon becomes swollen to maximum dimensions.

Plantain, one of them, familiarly known also as "ratstail," needs no detailed description. It is one of those time-honoured items of bird dietary whose association with avicultural fare is as ancient as that of groundsel. In a state of purple semi-ripeness it is regarded with some favour by Linnets, Canaries, and other seedeaters, and it is reputed, in the case of the first-named, to exercise an enhancing influence upon soundness of breast colour.

But its value can easily be overrated. It appears to impose considerable strain on the digestive powers of the birds that feed upon it. The excreta is voided with difficulty, and is whitish and odorous, and not well formed either, as the excrement of healthy assimilation invariably is. This is not good, and such a drawback cannot but modify any apparent benefit.

Many Names: Many Uses.

Knapweed, another wild food of August, on the other hand, is uniformly safe and wholesome, and has, moreover, a wider range of usefulness. Goldfinches, Linnets, Twites, Redpolls, Siskins, Greenfinches, and Canaries all eat it with infinite relish, while Bullfinches, and even Hawfinches, now and then accept it with some measure of approval. In all cases its use is attended by highly satisfactory results, and wisdom points in the direction of using it with all freedom throughout the moulting period.

This weed, also called hardheads, horse-nobs, and by other localisms, has latterly come to be very well known as a food for birds. It is widely distributed, and common enough, appearing most frequently in rough grass lands and neglected pastures, often also by the sides of little used country lanes and roads. The plant at the time of flowering is seldom less than two feet high, and generally more. The stems are tough and wiry. The blooms are numerous, and of a bluish-purple hue, and they have a counterpart, refined by cultivation, in the cornflower of the garden. The time to gather is when the petals of the flowers are dead, and just before they fall, or even just after, because the small cup-like seed-head is then packed full of ripened seeds. The flowers, although numerous, as already observed, are not all produced simultaneously, but in succession; consequently there is a correspondingly lengthy period of seeding.

The Lesser the Better.

There are two prominent wild knapweeds. One is larger and coarser than the other, and the seed-heads of this greater knapweed are more bristling and scaly, while its seeds are fitted with a small, hairy tuft. The lesser one is in every way the better. Wild Goldfinches and Linnets are often to be seen feeding upon this weed, but never on the plantain, unless I am much mistaken.

Thistle seeds are the favourite autumn food of the Goldfinch at liberty, and they should be made the special quarry of all who keep Goldfinches in confinement. The sturdy, robust specimens known as Scotch—possibly because of their dourness and ubiquity—are the Goldfinch's chosen speciality in thistles, and their prickly heads yield to his practised dexterity as tamely as the tender spring dandelion. But the more human who aspires to the joys of thistle scalping needs to proceed with some discretion, for nothing more instantaneously penetrating than the invisible bristle point of a well-matured thistle is imaginable. The prick of a needle is, by comparison, as the prod of a bludgeon.

The seeding head, however, has its vulnerable point. A firm grip of finger and thumb on the tuft of pappus at the top fixes an effectual strangle-hold. A sharp pair of scissors applied to the stalk directly below effects a bloodless capture, and the seed-head is straightway dropped into whatever receptacle the gatherer is using. An ordinary open handle-basket is an excellent vehicle. The time for performing this operation is when all purple colour has faded from the flower, and the head is turning brown.

Give Thistle-heads Intact.

The heads of thistle so secured should be handed over to the Goldfinches intact as they are gathered, or with no preparation beyond just straining them asunder with a steady pull. This feat is simplified, and the risk of "punctures" reduced, by darning the number of heads required for immediate use by means of a wet cloth, which is laid lightly over them for a few hours beforehand; overnight, for instance, for to-morrow's supply.

It is a mistake to extract the seeds yourself. This not only because of the Goldfinch's native deftness in manipulating these thorny subjects unaided, but also because he derives greater actual benefit from feeding upon thistle seeds which his own exertions have wrested from their natural stronghold than he would from the same seed threshed out and fed to him in a hopper. There may be many sound reasons for this. One suffices. That is, that the occupation undoubtedly contributes to his happiness—witness his eager gusto over it. And it may be taken as a general principle that the first thing to be observed in the tending of all classes of stock, if they are to do their best, is to make them happy; and the Goldfinch wrestling with a thistle head is a happy bird.

Thistle seed-heads will be flourishing and ripening throughout August and most of September, and measures should soon be taken to lay in a store for use during the winter. September is, for various reasons, a better time than August for doing this, and a few lines in next month's notes will be devoted to hints thereon.

Seeds With Wings.

It may be expedient to observe hereabouts that the wild seeds most usefully employed in bird-feeding can be roughly divided into two distinct groups. Group 1 embraces all the composite plants, of which the dandelion is typical, while the thistles may not improperly be described as near relations. The seeds of this group are "winged," i.e., fitted with plumes of feathery pappus whose purpose is to ensure wide distribution. They are essentially the natural food of Goldfinches, for no winged seed appears to come amiss to these birds. Siskins and Redpolls relish them equally with Goldfinches, and most of them appeal also to the Greenfinches' accommodating taste.

Group 2 comprises the crucifers, of which the wallflower is a popular floral example, and the cabbage an equally well-known vegetable representative, both being highly developed by long cultivation and selection. Charlock will serve very well as an illustration of the wild crucifer. The seeds of these cruciferous plants are produced in narrow elongated pods, and they are usually round and black, though sometimes the colour is a dark purplish-red, and occasionally yellow, as in the various rapes and mustard, which are all crucifers.

The seeds of this order of plants are preferred by Linnets, Chaffinches, and Bramblingfinches, and are also eaten to some extent by Greenfinches and Twites, but Goldfinches do not touch them. There are numerous varieties of each order—composite and cruciform—whose seeding time runs through the autumn, but limitations of space forbid detailed specification of them all, even if their individual worth warranted it, which it does not. Their use in feeding birds is covered by the application of the broad general rule outlined in the foregoing.

Other weeds of distinctly useful character that enter the seeding period in August are the wild convolvulus-like plants variously known as cornbine, bindweed, lily-bine, etc. They are ramblers in habit, sprawling untidily over the ground—unless, indeed, there is anything handy for them to climb. In a corn field, for instance, they twine themselves about the cornstalks, and cling to them like scarlet runners to a bean pole. Their seeds are three-cornered in shape—like buckwheat—and shiny-black in colour when ripe. There are two distinct varieties. One, the smaller and more favoured, has seeds about the size of winter rape, and is more an untidy litterer of the ground and less a climber than the larger, which latter bears seeds about the size of small buckwheat. Both are eaten very freely by all the seed-eaters. Even Chaffinches and Bramblingfinches, which are indifferent to so many of the wild foods that are a joy to other birds, are very fond of these wild bindweeds.

Milk Thistle Enhances Colour.

Milk-thistle—one of the composites, by-the-bye—continues to produce clusters of seed-heads throughout August, and these should be sought for now, particularly on behalf of Bullfinches and Greenfinches, because of the beneficial influence they have on the development of colour in these birds. The other Finches being well provided for in the ample number of other weeds now available, it is as well exclusively to allot to the properties of milk-thistle their most profitable use.

SOME EAST COAST BIRDS

By J. FEW (Wigan).

AS the holiday season is now with us, a few notes on the wild birds of our East Coast may be of interest, although at the mention of the East Coast one naturally thinks of the Germans and their efforts to make the world recognise their "frightfulness." It is not, however, my intention to write about the Huns and their savagery, but to say something of what I saw of the birds of the Yorkshire coast during an afternoon's walk in June.

Getting Back Its Own.

Leaving Bridlington, I proceeded northwards along the sea-cliff, which is gradually being washed away, reminding me of a similar erosion on the Lancashire coast between Blackpool and Bispham. Judging by the number of sea-shells and pebbles that studded the face of the cliff, of which I got a glimpse here and there, what is being removed was obviously deposited by the sea at some remote age.

A few yards in front of me a Pied Wagtail runs from side to side of the beaten track after flies, now and then taking a short flight and uttering the note "chissie." In passing, I may say that a hand-reared "Peggy-Dish-washer" makes a charming pet, and furnishes a little variety in an aviary by its black and white plumage, its quick-running movements, and lively motion of its tail. Moreover, its song, though short, is sweet.

On a fence, a Spotted Flycatcher is perched, whence it darts upon winged insects, returning with graceful sweep to the spot it has just quitted; and, subsisting on similar fare, a Sand Martin flits to and fro alongside the face of the cliff. From the next field a flock of garrulous Rooks rise in a body and alight on a clump of trees in the distance. Now suddenly springing out of the long grass a Skylark with rapturous song soars almost perpendicularly, higher and higher, and then

"Poised in air,
"And warbling his wild notes about the clouds,

"Almost beyond the ken of human sight,
"Clapped to his side his plumed steed, down
"Drops—instantaneous drops, the silent Lark."

—DODD.

Flying here and there over the North Sea are several Herring Gulls, and not far from shore on the brilliant blue waters a few common Guillemots, Razorbills, Puffins, and Cormorants are busily engaged diving in pursuit of their finny prey. These birds are from the world-famous sea-birds' home on the north side of the headland, an account of which appeared in CAGE BIRDS of Feb. 7, March 21, and May 2 last year.

Entering a well-wooded vale, the gaily-attired little acrobat, the Blue Tit, proclaims its presence, and a Chaffinch breathes out defiance with "pink, pink." In the trees overhead, flying from branch to branch, the plainly-clad sweet singer, the Willow-Wren, is searching the foliage for insects for its nestlings in the domed nest among the long herbage, and a Blackbird in the distance is fluting through its yellow bill.

Quitting the agreeable coolness of this sylvan retreat by a steep incline, our most popular and almost perennial songster, the Redbreast, presents itself on the top of a post, and with the usual curtsy says, "tit-it-it-it." In a meadow on the right a solitary Lapwing, in company with a small flock of Starlings, is foraging for worms and other edible creatures.

Spring's Impelling Voice.

Arriving at the village of Flamborough, several ubiquitous House Sparrows are dusting themselves in the gutter, and flying swiftly up and down the roadway the "clime-changing" Swallow is sweetly twittering. "Swallow, why homeward turned thy joyful wing?"

"In a fair land I heard the voice of spring;
"I found myself that moment on the way—
"My wings, my wings, they had not power to stay."

—MONTGOMERY.

In this neighbourhood the archaeologist finds delight from the quantities of stone axes, flint arrow-heads, and other relics of the ancient Britons which have been found. There are some curious pits or depressions, which, according to some authorities, are British pit-dwellings. The churches in the district contain a number of fine Norman fonts and interesting old bells. At Hunmanby, a British chariot, with horse trappings, was excavated in May, 1907.

Leaving the village of Flamborough, existing in almost mediæval simplicity, and proceeding northwards along the main road, the cheerful little Wren arrests attention by its welcome and varied roundelay, which it executes in brilliant fashion. From overhead comes the note "pee-ep" of the Yellow Wagtail, and hopping beside the hedgerow a Dunnock is constantly picking up the tiniest of morsels.

Don'ts for Novices.

EVERY novice has to make a beginning, and I would ask them to note the following "Don'ts."

Don't, when buying your birds, buy here, there and everywhere, as it is an uncertain way to success; better buy from a man who breeds his own winners.

Don't buy birds that are unhealthy. No matter if they be off Palace winners they are dear at a gift, and a disappointment to whoever owns them.

Don't keep unhealthy birds. If bred by yourself, better kill them off.

Don't squander your money unwisely; be sure you get full value, and if you are in doubt ask your fellow members, who will no doubt see you right.

Don't expect too much off a 10s. 6d. pair. Be prepared to pay for something decent; the best is cheapest in the end.

Don't be gulled by fanciers who "puff off" their birds; you are sure to meet such. Give them a wide berth; it will pay you.

Don't, when buying, be put off with anything. Have what you want or leave it alone. Anything bought unsuitable is so much money wasted.

Don't, when your birds are breeding, "play" with them. Also don't invite strangers into your bird-room. Many a good nest of young ones has been lost by doing these things.

Don't think anything will do to feed Canaries on. Always get the best of seed; it is the cheapest.

Don't be downhearted over failure. "If at first you don't succeed try, try again."—KITCHENER.

Societies and the War Loan.

SIR.—I was delighted to read in this week's CAGE BIRDS, that the London P.O.S. has decided to invest in the War Loan, £50 from its funds. This will undoubtedly give an impetus to other societies to do likewise. My society, the City and Suburban A.C.B., has already invested £20 in it from patriotic motives as so admirably described by Mr. Huggins in his note.

Cheltenham Will "Carry on."

SIR.—Last year, owing to the unsettled state of the country, we considered it advisable to cancel our open show. However, as we have been asked by several prominent fanciers to hold our show this year, we have decided to do so, and trust that the Fancy generally will accord us their generous support. The management will be in the same hands as in previous years, and we shall as usual provide a comprehensive classification. We are doing this solely in the interest of the Fancy, as we believe that without the shows interest would flag considerably, and we hope exhibitors will appreciate this and show it in a practical manner by sending us a record entry.

Will there be Rhea-Emu Hybrids?

SIR.—An interesting event has just occurred at our Scottish Zoo. The pair of Rheas have hatched out a nest of promising chicks. As mentioned in my article, "A Day With the Birds at the Scottish Zoo," of January last, the peculiarity of the Rhea's family affairs is that the hen merely lays the eggs (a hole scooped in the sand being all the nest she troubles to make) and leaves the incubation and feeding to the "mere male," while she remains a perfectly disinterested looker-on. Our particular Rhea, however, has found an unexpected helper in his arduous duties in the person of a hen Emu (kept in the same enclosure) which has formed an attachment for him and his chicks. She tends the latter as if they were her own. It is indeed a most interesting sight, and has attracted a lot of visitors. The Zoo officials seem to have an opportunity of producing Rhea-Emu hybrids next year.

Blaenavon and its Show.

SIR.—In reply to Mr. Broome, of Blaenavon, I was quite correct when I said Blaenavon was away up among the mountains, as Blaenavon is 1,000ft. above the sea level, Pontypool 500ft., and the distance between about five miles. You will see it is not a very gentle rise, 100ft. to the mile. I did not wish to cast any reflection on Blaenavon as regards train service, or any other service for that matter. What I wished to show was that it was out of our way as regards joining their society, for unless you are strong in wind and limb, you need some kind of conveyance to get there. If it is not among the mountains then I fail to understand what a mountain is. I was taught that a mountain is a hill one thousand feet high, and Blaenavon is among mountains much higher. My statement as to the respective altitudes of Pontypool and Blaenavon are taken from the Gazetteer of the British Isles by J. G. Bartholomew, F.R.G.S.

H. H. VAUGHAN.

P.S.—I would like to say, further, that the article containing that statement was not intended for publication and was sent separate from other intelligence published in the same issue.

The Black Mealworm Returns.

Interesting Experiments by Mr. Claude St. John.

SIR.—The majority of your readers may perhaps have forgotten the correspondence on this subject two years ago, and our old friend, Mr. C. P. Arthur, who very kindly sent me a number of the so-called "black" mealworms for observation, must long ago have lost hope of hearing of them again. The excuse for my long silence is the slow development of the mealworm. It may be remembered that I have many times contended in your columns that the cycle of the metamorphoses of the mealworm is much longer than is generally supposed, and in the last correspondence I stated my belief that this cycle occupied probably two or three years. Now I am able to say definitely that, at least when kept under normal conditions of temperature, the cycle from beetle to beetle is quite two years.

The specimens Mr. Arthur sent me became beetles in June, 1913. Eggs were secured from them, isolated, and kept under frequent observation through all the stages until the next generation of beetles began to emerge, which was not until June of the present year, when two beetles emerged, and four pupæ died, but up to the present no other worms have entered the pupal stage, although all the eggs from which they were produced were deposited about the same time. At some future time I hope to tabulate and arrange the notes I have made during this experiment, but for the present I will content myself with saying that one result is that I am sufficiently convinced that there are two distinct varieties of beetle whose larvæ we know as mealworms, and the so-called "black" mealworms belong to the variety known to entomologists as Tenebrio obscurus, the ordinary light coloured variety being known as T. molitor. The larvæ and beetles produced from the larvæ sent me by Mr. Arthur have been identified at South Kensington as T. obscurus. I say so-called "black," because it really does require some stretch of the imagination to believe them so. In reality they are of a sooty tinge, and never really black, and seem to differ as much in dullness and lack of gloss as in colour. More than this I will not say at this moment, but hope to go more fully into the question at some future date.

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

To Exterminate Lice in Canaries

SIR.—The treatment for lice on Canaries is very different to that for red mite, as the louse lives and breeds on the birds, and the red mite on the cages, etc. I have always found birds a little out of condition most subject to them, hens towards the close of the breeding season, and weakly young ones. The best remedy I know is to take two tablespoonfuls of quassia chips to one quart of boiling water, and let it stand till cool. This I put in a bottle and keep in the bird room. Give the bath daily, adding two tablespoonfuls of the extract, this will kill the nits as well as the lice and is much better than handling the birds to dust them with insect powder. It will also prevent red mite feeding on them. If the birds drink any it will act as a tonic to them.

F. G. B.

SIR.—May I venture to suggest that the correspondents on this subject should confine themselves to the various means of destroying the pest, and avoid dealing with the life history of creatures. Such details must be very obscure and exceptionally difficult for the average mind to grasp, as the effort to explain things of which one has but a very dim and imperfect knowledge can only create confusion and do harm. This suggestion is the outcome of reading a letter on the subject in your issue of July 17, in which the writer, reasoning by analogy from the human louse, says it is "killed by being deprived of its food, i.e., human blood, for about a week." When I say that the louse does not feed on blood, this writer, and also your readers who are interested in the question, will doubtless recognise the wisdom of leaving these obscure life histories alone. Mites have a sucking mouth, and feed by extracting blood from their victims, whereas lice have a gnawing mouth, and subsist on the skin, and the tissue of feather and quills, and do not extract blood in the operation.

OBSERVER.

Success after Failure.

SIR.—In CAGE BIRDS of July 31, a correspondent stated that he had had youngsters out of the nest at 15 days old. This being my first season, I started with three pairs, and like a good many more beginners had bitter disappointments. The first round came to nothing, but in the second round I succeeded in getting eight youngsters, only to lose them when about a week old. I was on the point of giving up for this season, but did not like being beaten, so I sent for Claude St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and then I saw where I had made my mistakes. I started for a third time, and followed his directions. I tried one pair of Canaries, and had three birds on the perches at 21 days' old and all doing well. I also paired a cock Linnet and hen Canary; result four eggs, but the cock broke two, so I took him away, and let the hen sit the other two. She hatched one youngster which got all her attention, and at 12 days' old it got out of the nest. I felt disappointed as I thought it was too quick, so I put it back in the nest, but it was out again in a few minutes and hopping round the cage bottom, so I left it to the hen, and on the 14th day it was on the top perches; then my spirits rose, and I felt I had succeeded at last. Has any reader ever experienced a youngster leaving the nest at 12 days' old? I had a brother fancier in to see it the other day, and he said he had never heard of such a case. The youngsters are all doing well now, thanks to Claude St. John and your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR.—I note that my critics have returned to the subject of reasoning power in birds though they previously adjured me to talk about "conscience," and solely to oblige them, I did so. This, however, is the only complaint that I have to make, for Mr. Coe writes a letter with much of which I am in accord. I did not claim the desertion of her young by the hen Flycatcher as an instance of pure reasoning, and it is quite likely that instinct had a good deal to do with it—the instinct that tells a bird which has lost its mate or its nest to seek at once another mate and make another attempt. I am also prepared to admit that the actions of insects are based on instinct rather than on intelligence, though one cannot read such a book as Lubbock's "Senses of Animals" without seeing that there is also mind and reasoning power in the insect world.

When, however, he claims that it is not possible to prove that a bird's actions, however wonderful they may seem to man, are not dictated by instinct, I join issue with him. A bird may build its first nest by instinct, or, in other words, by the inherited experience of many thousands of previous generations, but when it finds itself faced by a combination of circumstances which never have occurred before in all the previous history of the race it is quite clear that it must rely on its reasoning powers or follow blind chance. Let us take such a case and attempt to analyse the mental processes involved.

Not long since I was very much amused by a bird story which went the round of the press, because it appeared to be a combination of Irish humour and up-to-date journalism. Great was my surprise to find, on taking up a copy of "British Birds," that an ornithologist had investigated the matter on the spot and that the story was really true. Anyone who knows that severely scientific magazine, "British Birds," and its Editor, Mr. H. F. Witherby, will know that no fairy-tales are admitted there. A Thrush built its nest on the axle of a carriage of an Irish railway. Note that railway trains are a quite modern invention, and that therefore instinct could not possibly help this particular bird in dealing with this particular combination of circumstances. Note also that instinct would have counselled the bird to avoid anything strange, and to build its nest in a natural site. But this carriage was not stationary, it ran up and down daily on a short length of line. When the carriage reached its destination, the Thrush used to leave the train to have a drink and a snack of something to eat—just exactly, let us observe, what we should have done ourselves—but it always returned to the station in plenty of time to catch the train when starting on its return journey. One day, however, the time-table was altered; the train left ten minutes earlier, and the Thrush returned to the platform to find that the train had gone. Now let us note that in all the years that have elapsed since this planet made its appearance in space no Thrush had ever before presumably been in such a predicament; therefore instinct could not come to its assistance. What did it do? Did it desert its nest? No, it was an intelligent bird. It pursued the train; it caught the train (N.B., except to those who know Irish railways or who dwell near the London, Chatham, and Dover line, this may seem improbable) and, when the train reached the other terminus, this clever Thrush was peacefully incubating its eggs. Now, will any reader come forward and say that this bird did not think as we think—reason as we reason?

In the Courts.

Skylarks as a "Nuisance."

James Holder, of Ealing, was summoned at Brentford for keeping "noisy animals." Arthur Cole, the complainant, said that Holder was a lover of birds, and his principal pets were Skylarks, which he had placed in four cages outside his windows. The noise was so incessant that witness could not use his garden.

The defendant said he only kept two Skylarks, and he took every possible care of them. He contended that they were not a nuisance, and twenty-one neighbours had written to that effect. The Court, however, imposed a penalty of 5s.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1) All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2) The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3) Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4) Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5) The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6) Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7) If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8) All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9) All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

CLICKING NOISE IN THROAT (E. H. M.).—One cannot say definitely what the cause of this trouble may be without knowing something about the conditions under which the bird is kept and its general treatment. It may be bronchial trouble, or even simply overfatness. See that the bird is not exposed to direct draughts, heated and unhealthy fumes from burning lights in the evenings, sudden extremes of heat and cold, and do not hang it high up near the ceiling. In addition to the usual seed diet give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of hemp, niger, white millet, and teazle, and give a little green food daily. Every second day for a week add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give instead five drops each of oxymel of squills, tincture of lobelia and ipecacuanha wine every second day for a fortnight. If not then well, please write again and give full particulars of your management hitherto, when I will advise you further. But remember that the removal of the exciting causes is the most important part of the treatment.

MISS M. H., and J. C.—Replied to by post.

ABOUT ROLLERS (Chas. Joy).—(1) A "Pure Randall" should mean that the bird in question is directly descended from the strain of the well-known breeder and exhibitor of that name. (2) Seifert and Glucke Rollers are the same breed of Canary, but bred and trained for different types of song. The Seifert may be termed a kind of variety artiste, and the Glucke a specialist in the performances on the song four known as the "glucke." (3) Sorry, but I cannot at the moment say whether Mr. Randall specialises in both or either of this class of songster. (4) No, it is not advisable to mix well-bred and trained birds of different types of song, such as would occur by mating a Seifert cock with a Glucke hen. To keep the strain pure and efficient you should mate a Glucke cock with a Glucke hen, and similarly with other strains. (5) The secretary of the B.R.C.C. is Mr. J. W. Norris, 31, Seylla Road, Peckham Rye, S.E.

BARE AND SORE HEAD (H. C.).—Sorry, but your first query was temporarily crowded out, and a postal reply seems to have gone astray. Treat generally the same as advised in the reply which has been re-sent, and instead of the ointment you are now using dust the sore spots liberally with plain, dry boracic powder, and in the intervals when the moisture is not troublesome anoint them about every second day with Lancelin ointment. You may also add to the drinking water every second day for a week 15 drops of fluid magnesia and ten drops of lemon juice, and omit the chemical food altogether whilst you are giving this. After the first week give the chemical food as previously advised for three weeks, and you may repeat this until the end of the moult or until the sores have quite disappeared, whichever may happen first.

PLUCKING AND ACCOMMODATION (Brishwood).—(1) The constant plucking about the ears can scarcely fail to injure the bird more or less. Your best plan is to put the youngster in a nursery, or you might rig up a small open wire cage as a temporary nursery, and hang it on the front of the cock's cage, so that he could feed the youngster through the wires if so inclined. This, of course, is assuming that he is still partly feeding the youngster, but if he is not, and it is able to do without any assistance of this kind, you should remove it at once to a cage by itself for a week or two to enable it to gather a little skill in getting about the perches. Then you may place it in the aviary. It is not likely that the plucking would cease if both birds were in same cage as the hen. Considering his egg-eating proclivities, the cock would be best caged alone. Possibly, if you were to keep a dummy egg in the cage during the winter, he may tire of trying to investigate the internal economy of such trifles by next spring. (2) With proper attention to cleanliness an aviary of the size you name would accommodate 40 Canaries. This would be "a full house," and would not allow of breeding, so that I see no reason for any judicious allocation of sexual proportions. If you want to breed in it, then three cocks and 10 or 11 hens would be sufficient to begin with each season. Possibly the cock referred to in No. 1 might forego his plucking habit in the aviary, but only the actual test can prove this.

MRS. B. SIMONET and E.M.T.—Replied to by post.

REARING YORKSHIRES (W. J.).—Sorry I cannot read your pseudonym, so am replying under initials. Had you given me some particulars as to how you feed and treat the birds generally, and some idea as to the condition of health they are in, and the number of each sex and size of the aviary I might have been able to give you some definite information which would have been useful, but in the absence of any tangible clue to work on nothing short of a general resume of the management of breeding stock would be of any material use to you. Therefore, as it is also too late to continue efforts to breed any longer this season, I cannot advise you better than to get one of our handbooks on the subject, and master the contents between now and next spring, when you should, by following closely the advice thus obtained, be able to rear the young after hatching almost or quite as easily as you get them hatched. Probably, if the birds fly loose in the aviary, you have too great a proportion of cocks among them. The general management and feeding of Yorkshires for breeding does not differ in any way from any other breed of Canary. For general information about rearing young get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free; or for information on the separate breeds House's "Canary Manual," 1/2, post free, would suit you.

MOULTING BIRDS SINGLY (A. Bradshaw).—Yes, certainly; you can moult your cock birds singly, just as well as in twos or threes. The hens also, if necessary on account of plucking, may be moulted singly. The only advantage of moulted two or three should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/11); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/11); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Rousden's "Colour-feeding" (3/4); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." together is that the birds generally take the colour-feed more freely. But if the birds pluck each other, particularly in the case of Lizards, all those addicted to the practice must be moulted singly in separate cages. With Lizards it is very essential that this should be done at once immediately any signs of plucking are detected.

DEFORMED TOES (Neil Hunter).—Allow the bird to wear the one ring for a fortnight at least, and then remove it and put a similar ring on the other toe, and also put in the cage thin, and nearly round perches—about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. Allow the second ring to remain in position three weeks, then remove it, and leave the thin perches to complete the correction of the deformity in the ordinary course of nature. Keep the thin perches in use until you see that the bird has a fairly good grip of the perch with the hind toes, which may be in two or three months hence.

IN MOULT (D. McGill).—Six weeks is not an exceptionally long time for a bird to be moulting, neither is there anything at all abnormal about a bird being now in moult. Place a light cover over the cage, such as a piece of unbleached calico, and keep it in a fairly warm and well ventilated position, which will help it to complete the moult more quickly and thoroughly. Allow it to bathe daily if it will do so. In addition to the usual staple diet of canary and rape, give every second day a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, or half a teaspoonful of egg food sprinkled with maw as a variant, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats. Four times a week give also a morsel of green food, or a few wild seed heads. As soon as you notice new quills about the head you may add to the drinking water six drops of dilute sulphuric acid and a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a large hemp seed three times a week until the plumage is quite fully grown.

TOES TURNED UNDER (Novice, Kid-grove).—It needs a very intimate knowledge of the birds themselves to enable one to say with any degree of certainty what is the cause of this deformity in any given case. There can be no doubt that in some cases it is a congenital defect, though it may not show itself until the young birds leave the nest. But in the majority of cases it is probably due to straining or similar injuries to the feet, which may occur in the nest when there are only one or two youngsters in the brood and they have to make more effort to support themselves whilst being fed, or it may be due to unsuitable, badly fitting, or awkwardly placed perches. On the other hand, I have seen a bird actually bring on the defect almost instantaneously by dashing excitedly in play from perch to perch. If only the hind toes are affected, an early application of rubber bands, and treating as advised to "Neil Hunter" in this issue will remedy the defects in a great number of cases, but if all the toes on each foot are affected I am afraid you can do nothing for the bird, beyond giving it rather wide and flat perches on which it can stand, rather than perch in the usual way, and place them rather low to enable it to reach them with the minimum of effort.

STILL RATHER SQUEAKY (L. Gibson).—Glad to hear the bird has made a fairly good improvement, but from your description I fear it is beyond being quite cured. Still it may be worth trying a little longer. Make yourself quite sure that it is not exposed to any exciting causes as named before. Stop all medicine for the next fortnight, and during that time give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed every third day, and during the first week add to the drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day. At the end of the fortnight stop these extras, and begin again with the medicine previously advised, except that you should omit the spirits of nitre, and add in its place five drops of tincture of tolu and continue this every second day for two or three weeks. Remember that the fullest success may depend far more upon the elimination of the causes than upon any amount of medicinal treatment. Glad to be of assistance at any time.

TWO HENS (Alice M. Cook).—(1) If the hen is not more than two or three years old it may be quite worth while keeping her to try again next season, but if over this age I should not think it worth risking. It does not by any means follow that she will behave in the same way in nesting next season as she has done this year. The probability is that if you had given her a brood of young chicks of some kind when she had been sitting a little over a fortnight it would have roused her dormant instincts, and set matters right. (2) Keep the cage, perches and water vessels of this bird as clean as possible, and in addition to the staple of canary and rape, give every second day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut well dusted with carbonate of bismuth, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, broken groats and maw seed. In the drinking water add six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of opium for two consecutive days and then every second day until the droppings become normal.

A WHEEZY YORKSHIRE (Arch Dunn).—I'm afraid you have spoilt the chance the bird had by keeping it without treatment so long. Still, you may try what the following will do for it. See that it is kept in a comfortable temperature, not necessarily a very high one, but free from direct cold draughts, or sudden extremes of heat and cold. Do not hang it near or over a burning light in the evenings, nor in or very near a window. In addition to the staple diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana. Give a spray of watercress or two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. During the first week add to the water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day, and in the next week give instead five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and sweet spirit of nitre every second day. The latter may be continued for a fortnight if necessary. Unless the bird fully recovers you would be well advised not to breed with it again.

AN ESCAPEE (W.H.).—You cannot do better than allow the hen to remain as quiet as possible until she resumes activity of her own accord. Probably the escapee resulted in the bird being injured in some way, possibly a little crushed in catching her hurriedly, and the best you can do for this is to leave it to nature to remedy, aiding it only by rest and quietude. The most I would advise you to do is to add a small crystal of sulphate of soda to the water for two days if any aperient seems to be called for. Glad to hear the former advice was successful.

MATING ROLLERS (Balbee).—(1) I do not think there would be much likelihood of really serious results from the cock's vigorous wooing if you mated the birds and left them to take their chance until the hen had laid her clutch of eggs; then you could remove him and leave her to hatch and rear the young by herself. But if you do not care to risk this I see no reason why you should not try him with the variegated hen, and let the other cock take his place with the green hen. Better still, you might mate him with the variegated hen first, and when she has begun to sit, remove him and mate him with the green hen when she is rather forward with nesting, so that he would be with her only a few days before she laid her clutch. It would not even be essential for him to remain with her constantly if there seemed any fear of him driving the hen too fiercely. It would suffice to let him run with her for two or three hours each morning until the eggs were laid, and then keep him away altogether until the young were reared. (2) In using the mixture for soft moult you should give 20 drops in an ordinary drinking vessel, which, except some of the old-fashioned bottle fountains, usually holds a little over a fluid ounce. To be precise, add 20 drops of the mixture to each ounce, i.e., two tablespoonfuls of water.

THROWS SEED ABOUT (S. W. F.).—It is undoubtedly suffering from digestive derangements. The following should soon set matters right, but see in the first place that the bird is not exposed to direct cold draughts or extremes of temperature. As staple diet give plain canary only. Give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of dry summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle, and a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea daily for three days, and then every second day for the rest of the week. After this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

KEEPING HEN BACK (A. M. J.).—Turn the hen into a fairly large cage or flight where she can get plenty of exercise; feed on a diet of plain canary seed with just a pinch of summer rape twice a week, and a small teaspoonful of egg food once a week, and give a liberal supply of green food—watercress, chickweed, or groundsel, but not dandelion—and, if convenient, keep her out of sight and earshot of the cocks. If she appears to be getting very forward add to the drinking water for three consecutive days as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. Nothing else should be necessary. If a casual egg now and again should be deposited on the floor, throw it away; it will be of little moment, and need cause no anxiety at all. The fee you name certainly seems excessive for setting a broken leg, but I am afraid the only remedy is, if the necessity should again arise, to go elsewhere. Glad to know the other birds are now better.

TO PAIR WITH YELLOW-RUMPED FINCH (Birdie).—The most suitable variety of Canary to pair with the above would be a Hartz, but any small variety would meet the case, and a green bird would possibly be more readily accepted than a yellow or buff, but the two latter would probably throw better variegated progeny.

NOT NESTING (F. E. H.).—You have probably shortened the hen's career of usefulness as a stock bird by overtaxing her last season. Most likely she will come into breeding condition rather late this season, but may begin in earnest any time now. Her lack of condition is not the cause of the too vigorous wooing of her mate; that is more likely to be due to his own excess of vitality. Treat her as follows for a fortnight or so, leaving the wire side between them until the hen shows more pronounced signs of nesting. In addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of egg food, or its equivalent in bread and milk, every second day. On the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, millet and teazle, with half the same quantities of maw, gold of pleasure and sesame. Give also a small growing stool of fresh young dandelion daily. In the water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea and ten drops of syrup of buckthorn daily for three days, and after this give every second day for a week or ten days six drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid.

BRITISH BIRDS MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

LINNET NOT SINGING (Storey).—I am doubtful if your Linnet is quite through the moult yet; it seems much too early. It is possible that if you have patience it will be all right later on. You do not say how you are feeding him, but just now a little lightly cracked hemp of good quality would do him good. Also give him a course of chemical food; put a small teaspoonful in his drinking water (boil the water first). Supply him with plenty of wild food; it is abundant just now, and there is nothing better for them during the moult.

MIXED AVIARY (P. Wardle).—It is, of course, impossible to feed birds separately when they are all flying together in the aviary. What you must do is to feed for the most delicate of the lot, and always keep your eye on him; if you notice at any time he is not getting his share of the good things going, take him out for a week or so, and feed him separately. (2) It is quite a matter of taste about colour-feeding. I do not think it is necessary with your bird; feed him on plenty of natural food, and either let him moult in an aviary or in a large cage placed outside as much as possible. (3) Privet and bilberries are not the same. One is the fruit of the privet shrub, and the other grows on a dwarf shrub, mostly on the moors. The privet will grow almost anywhere, and is common in many hedges and borders of woods in the Southern Counties.

LARKS WITH CRAMP (L.T.).—Cramp in young Skylarks is caused through improper treatment, and of your method you give no hint, neither do you say if your birds are hand-reared or freshly-caught. If you are hand-rearing, it should be on good food, something that the birds can easily digest, such as a good brand of insectile food with a little hard-boiled egg added. If they are old enough, give them a mild aperient, such as Epsom or Glauber salts, dissolved in the drinker, and write to this office for the Nutshell booklet on the Skylark, price 2d., post free; it will give you full instructions on hand-rearing and feeding and subsequent treatment—much more fully than I can in these replies.

BULLFINCH UNWELL (No Name).—You are probably feeding your Bullfinch wrongly. I can only infer this from his symptoms, as you tell me nothing of your treatment. You had better get the Nutshell booklet No. 11, on the Bullfinch, and treat him according to the full instructions given in it. Until you get it, give the bird a cube of stale bread dipped in hot milk with just a dusting of powdered bismuth on it; this you can repeat daily until he is better. At this time of the year his chief food should consist of wild seeds, berries, and fruit; the supply should be continuous right through the autumn months.

FEEDING MULES (R. Rennie).—The book you should get is "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding," 1s. 2d. post free. It will not only interest you immensely but give you all the information you require. I gather from your letter that your Mules are feeding themselves, and that you are giving them what you call a Goldfinch mixture. It is a mistake to leave off egg food altogether; this should be given at intervals and varied with a little bread and milk. Offer soaked rape seed, and occasionally a little cracked hemp; also include a few split groats and crushed sunflower. Gather handfuls of seedling wild seeds and supply these freely—there is nothing better for young growing Mules and Hybrids, such seeds are plentiful just now (see article this week), and can be given freely. Gather, if possible, in the full sunshine, and strip off any large coarse leaves. If you keep them in separate cages the cock will soon commence to sing. (2) You could keep your hen Canary for another year if she is not an old bird. The fact that she laid a couple of soft-shelled eggs does not mean that she will always do so; it is, as a rule, a matter of health, probably she required a tonic. One of my own birds did the same, but she was all right the second nest. I gave chemical food; you should do the same, it is a safe remedy.

WHAT BIRD? (P. F. Stride).—Your bird is a cock Ortolan Bunting. He will live almost entirely on Canary seed, but should be offered a little mixed seed as well. Buy a packet of wild seed mixture and let him pick over a spoonful of it occasionally, also try him with a few split groats. Let him have a bath frequently; this will tighten up his plumage and keep him in good feather. These birds are not much of singers, their song somewhat resembles that of the Yellow Bunting, but is scarcely so continuous.

LINNETS MOPY (Linnet Lover).—If your birds have been out of sorts since Whitsun you should certainly have written before; the sooner these ailments are attended to the better. It would be as well had you sent me a sample of your screenings from the stock yard, as these frequently contain seed that are of no value to a bird in captivity. For the present let them have the stock mixture, a little soaked seeds daily, and plenty of seedling wild food. Collect shepherd's purse, chickweed, sow-thistle, seedling grass, etc., and give a daily supply, strip off all large leaves. Give 10 drops of syrup of rhubarb in the drinking water, watch their motions, and see that the medicine moves them freely. You must not expect much song just now as they will soon be going into moult if they have not already started. Anyway, if, as I expect, you see an improvement in their health, that is all you should expect now, they will go through the moult all the better.

TREATMENT OF YOUNG MULES (Jack).—The critical period with young Mules, is, as with most young stock, when they leave the old birds and commence to do for themselves. For the first week keep them supplied with egg-food, as given to the old birds when rearing. At the same time, supply split groats, cracked canary and rape, also a little hemp, but only give a small quantity of the cracked hemp at a time, just as much as they will clear up. As they begin to eat the seed, gradually leave off the egg-food giving it less frequently and not so much of it. You should also vary this with milk sop made by soaking a cube or so of stale bread in hot milk. This will regulate the bowels, especially if a dusting of brown sugar is added to it. Should any of them show signs of illness, increase the milk sop, and if necessary add a drop or two of cod liver oil to it, but not unless you think they are losing flesh. Let them bathe daily on suitable days, it strengthens them and keeps away insects. Do not give them much green-food, but the seedling tops of plants they can have pretty liberally. With this treatment they should do well.

ACCOMMODATION (Bosco, Watford).—Your cage accommodation is certainly too limited for the number of birds you have to find room for, but you might, with strict attention to cleanliness, run the risk of keeping them until the latter end of the year, when they will be well over the moult, and you will be able to make a final selection of those you wish to retain as stock for next season and dispose of the rest, which I take it is your object. Anyway, I would not advise you to keep all of them any longer than is absolutely necessary in the space now available, as they will be decidedly overcrowded. If you can make up groups for each cage without mixing up the old and young stock, at the same time keeping the sexes separate, by all means do so, but if this is not practicable, then you should give the preference to keeping the sexes separate. In the larger Crystal Palace cage keep 11, in the smaller one 7, and in each of the 4ft. flight cages 8. Remember, this is nearly double the number the cages will properly accommodate; therefore, to ensure a fair chance of keeping the birds free from the evil effects of overcrowding you should keep the cage floors well covered with sawdust or clean sand, and clean out the cages every second or third day, putting in fresh sand or sawdust each time (do not sift the floor covering and use it a second time). If small drinkers are used, cleanse and refill them every morning and night. It would be far better in such circumstances to use self-supplying fountains, to ensure a more pure supply of water, which is an important matter in such circumstances.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

RING-NECKED PARRAKEETS WITH LOOSENESS (Lawson).—Make their drinking water just saline with glauber salts for one day. Follow this by lightly colouring the drinking water with chemical food for about one month, but giving them clear water once a week. Get one quart each giant canary, white millet, and white oats, one pint each dahl, hemp and sunflower seeds, half-a-pint shelled pea nuts. Well mix and keep supply in cage. The matter of sand on cage tray is unimportant, but the birds should be given a pinch of Parrot grit daily; scatter it on whatever you use as an absorbent on cage tray. If they eat freely of fruit, greenfood is not important, but I think they would take fresh green peas. These are hard birds, but while they do not need codding, they must not be subjected to draught.

GREEN PARROT WITH COLD (Mrs. Askew).—You do not give me sufficient data to form an opinion as to what your bird is really suffering from. I do not think chill is the cause. Repeat your query next week with full details as to how you feed and treat, and how long you have had it. In the meantime make the drinking water saline with glauber salts for one day, and as it refuses its seed you had better prepare the following sop: Half a small sponge cake; spread over this half-a-teaspoonful of cod liver emulsion, one teaspoonful of condensed milk, and about half a teaspoonful of boiling water; when cool supply to the bird. Give this daily till you get our further reply. Keep it warm and supply the seed mixture regularly, and after the one dose of salts lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food daily. Grit and cuttlebone must be continually in the cage.

REARING RIBBON FINCHES (R. W. Carr).—Ribbon Finches, while ready enough to go to nest and hatch out, often prove unsatisfactory parents. Once a good feeding pair is obtained they are very prolific. In a roomy natural aviary they should catch sufficient live food to rear their young without difficulty, but I suggest that you supply live ants' eggs and gentles when the next brood hatches out, and if they will not rear them, you may as well get rid of them as being hopelessly bad feeders. Keep your series under close observation for a time, and note whether the Budgerigars are causing trouble by nibbling round the outside of the nest. Canaries, too, are intensely curious, and I have known their prying ways to cause both Foreign and British species to forsake their nests at all stages. It is always well to strive thus to ascertain the cause of failure, as the conditions of every aviary vary to some extent, and all general rules must be modified accordingly.

CHANGING PLUMAGE (Dark Feathers).—The colour of the plumage varies to some extent at different ages; again, sometimes too much hemp has a tendency to darken the plumage. I should say there was sufficient hemp in the mixture without your supplying it separately. Continue to feed on the boiled maize, but in lieu of the hemp supply the following mixture: 1 pint each giant canary, white millet, white oats, hemp and sunflower seeds,

1-pint shelled pea-nuts. Well mix and keep supply in the cage. Supply also ripe fruit (apple, banana, grapes, etc.), pieces of stale bread and biscuit. Cuttlebone must be continually in the cage. Grit must only be supplied sparingly at first. Give a small pinch occasionally and gradually increase frequency and quantity. When the bird has become accustomed to it, supply daily without limit. Till the bird is well established, keep it in quite warm yet well-ventilated quarters. It must not be subjected to draught or cold winds.

TREATMENT FOR PEACH-FACED LOVEBIRDS (P. H.).—The first thing is to secure a good sized cage, say about 20 inches square at base and two feet high. Do not have the usual straight perches, but put in a branch reaching from top to bottom, consisting of twigs both thick and thin, so that the birds can exercise their propensity for climbing to the full. Seed mixture: 1 quart each canary and white millet seed, 1 pint each oats and hemp-seed—well mix the whole together and keep a continuous supply in the cage. Also supply greenfood (such as green peas, flowering and seedling grass, lettuce, weeds, etc., according to the season); ripe fruit can be regularly given, any kind they will take. The following can be given as extras, and to vary the regular diet a little: dry crusts and biscuits, few monkey nuts and plain cake, such as sponge and Madeira, etc. Grit and cuttlebone must be kept continually in the cage—by grit I do not mean merely gritty sand, but grit; such can be obtained from many of our advertisers. Once established, these birds are not delicate, but should be carefully protected against draught. Do not allow them to become constipated, whenever the voidings are stiff and hard give a mild laxative in the drinking water as required to keep them regulated. Parakeets, to which group the Lovebirds belong, are woodcutters, therefore an all-wire cage is the best, but a light wood screen to cover up two of the sides should be provided and kept at a sufficient distance from the cage to prevent the birds exercising their beaks thereon. Water should be regularly supplied, also tufts of wet, English grass for them to roll in. A small barrel should be fixed at top of cage for nesting purposes—a useful size is 6in. diameter by 9in. deep.

AMAZON SNEEZING, ETC. (A. A. B.).—Spraying or bathing, if carefully done, should not alarm the bird or delay the taming process unduly—attendance of all kinds should be carried through quietly, and never done in a rush. Bathe or spray the nostrils with a dilute solution of glyco-thymoline daily till the running ceases. The bowels should move quite freely, but without undue looseness; put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia into the drinking water daily until this state has been reached, then only give an occasional dose to keep them properly regulated. Keep the bird strictly out of draught, and, till the trouble has passed, in fairly warm quarters. On hot days (about three weekly) you can safely give it a light spraying with a tepid quassia solution. During the present shortage of supplies watch your seed mixture—refuse any that does not smell fresh and sweet in every way; if there are any mildewed seeds among it reject the whole. You can also give dry crusts and biscuits, a little plain cake and nuts. Grit, cuttlebone, and a piece of a tree branch for it to exercise its mandibles upon must be continually supplied. Get a packet of proper Parrot-grit and scatter a pinch over cage tray daily. If the bird is at all thin give daily a little cod-liver oil emulsion thinly spread on sponge cake or anything similar that it will eat. It would also be quite safe to give a little honey and borax in the same manner as the C.L.O. emulsion. The tail movement you mention is caused at times by bowel trouble, also it is a quite natural movement with many Parrots; report progress a fortnight hence with full details.

GREY PARROT (Gun-Bexhill).—I think it will be sufficient to put this bird on a course of bino-phosphates and fluid magnesia. That is, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, and on the intermediate days put half a teaspoonful of bino-phosphates in the water. Once a week, for a month or six weeks, dissolve 3 drops of tincture of opium in a little syrup and stir this into the drinking water in lieu of the phosphates. Keep continuous supplies of grit (not sand) and cuttlebone in the cage, also a piece of wood for it to cut up. It would be well to examine its mouth and throat, and if at all slimy or furred, put a little honey and borax into the mouth daily till the mouth is quite clean. Exercise, such as a little liberty outside its cage, as opportunity occurs, will also benefit the bird. Never permit constipation. At the least signs of this give the laxative at once. The bowels should always move quite freely, at the same time there should not be chronic undue looseness.

DOUBLE-FRONTED AMAZON (A. S. S. Fleetwood).—Keep the bird warm and put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day. Foment the eyes (as the skin is evidently broken you had better only use tepid water); dry with a soft cloth and then anoint lightly the bare parts with boracic ointment. After draining all water from the boiled maize, soak into it half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, and then dust with flowers of sulphur and supply to the bird. In addition to the diet you name, supply ripe fruit daily, such as sweet apple, banana, etc. Twice or thrice weekly put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water, but not on the same days as you give the magnesia. Do not omit grit, this (Parrot grit) should be supplied regularly as part of the menu. If the bird's mouth is at all furred or slimy, put a little honey and borax therein daily, so long as any sliminess remains. Report progress in two or three weeks with fullest details.

FEATHER-PLUCKING (Miss A.M.).—Spray with a tepid quassia solution twice a week. Cease giving the table scraps, etc., which have wrought the mischief, and feed only on the normal dietary. It will be a tiresome task breaking the bird of the habit, and you may not entirely succeed. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every fourth day, continue this for some time, but if the bird should become abnormally loose, then only give the magnesia once a week. Twice a week put half a teaspoonful of syrup of phosphates in the drinking water. Confine the dietary somewhat as follows: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, greenfood, crust of stale bread, pieces of biscuit, and plain cake; this will give ample variety. Cuttlebone and grit (not sand) must be continually in the cage; also a thickish piece of a branch for the bird to exercise its mandibles upon.

OVERGROWN BEAK, ETC. (E.B.H.).—I should advise the Dinneford's Magnesia and Chemical Food for this bird, and to leave the Chemical Food alone for the time being. Lettuce is quite wholesome for birds, large and small, but the fleshy centre stem should always be cut out. Of course, whenever the beak is abnormally long it must be cut back, but not far enough to make it bleed, the Friar's Balsam is to check the bleeding when the error of cutting too far back is made. Put a little cod liver oil (not the emulsion, as he objects to that), a few drops, on the daily supply of boiled maize, and if allowed to soak in, and then the maize stirred with a fork, the bird might take it unnoticed. Give it pieces of tree branches, thick and thin, to exercise its mandibles upon, and if you have a lump or two of old mortar rubbish about he may bite at these, and thus assist in keeping his beak normal.

PIGEONS, DOVES, ETC. (Esperance).—As regards the cage for a pair of doves or pigeons, any roomy box will do, but you must make it rain and wind tight, and you must fix it on the wall well out of the reach of cats; if you nail a sheet of zinc underneath the bottom of cage, and let it extend three or four inches to the front and ends, bending the projecting portion slightly downwards, this will make it very difficult for cats to get at it except from above. It will certainly be best to keep them penned up for a bit, and this means covering up the hole they are to get in and out by. I take it that you are in the midst of a thickly populated district, therefore I think a pair of pigeons would suit you best. You should get a young pair that have not been previously let out. You must have a pair, as odd birds would seek mates and not stay with you. The only way to check breeding is to remove the eggs after the birds have incubated them about a week. You can remove while fresh if you choose, but this has a tendency to cause exhaustion from over-laying. Some maker's catalogue of pigeon cotes would help you as to design. If you will repeat your query as to local shows, and give your full name and address, the Editor will give you an answer. Questions on different subjects should not be mixed up on the same sheet of paper. Re Budgerigars, I am under the impression I have already answered your query on these. If not, if you will read replies to other correspondents, you will easily be able to apply them to meet your need. As regards the magnesia, give a dose of this sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving freely, yet without any appearance of undue looseness. Please note your query only arrived at our office on Friday morning, after Cage Birds was actually on sale! Queries received during any week are answered in the issue of the next week after.

AILING GREY PARROT (L. Hunter).—Put one teaspoonful of Fluid Magnesia in the bird's drinking water every other day, but if the voidings become watery loose, then cease giving the magnesia for a time. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and give the bird a little once or twice a day—there are several ways of doing this, and in your case I should thinly spread a little over a piece of bread, as your bird is accustomed to take pieces of bread, but if he will not so take it, then try it with the other items you give it, viz., with the rice or potato; if all these methods fail you must smear a little on the end of a small stick; you can easily tease the bird into biting the stick, and thereby getting the mixture smeared on tongue and mouth. Only a clean stick must be put into the mixture. Treat the birds so for a fortnight, and then report progress, fully describing its condition.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

"Leader."—Budgerigar died from the result of an internal growth complicating the liver. You need have no fear for your other birds, as it is not of a contagious character, and your method of dieting leaves nothing to be desired.

J. W. Dobbie.—Norwich cock died of pneumonia, a condition resulting from ptomaine poisoning. The symptoms of sleepiness you describe are ascribable to the distribution of the poison throughout the system, which brings about great nervous and circulatory depression.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

H. Wells.—The bird you describe, and which you call the Snake Bird, is the Wryneck. This bird is strictly insectivorous in its diet, and you would not be likely to succeed in keeping it satisfactorily unless you have had some experience in the treatment of the more delicate insectivorous birds. Our Nutshells, Nos. 25 and 26, post free 2d. each, from this office, would help you.

There are many sketches and a splendid coloured plate of all the best known wild plants. 1/2 post free.

A HANDY BOOK.

MULE and HYBRID BREEDERS make your 1915 breeding season a record in every way by purchasing a copy of

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

THE PRACTICAL AND COMPREHENSIVE WORK WHICH ALL HYBRID BREEDERS REQUIRE.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

This issue has met with greater success than ever before, and

THEY ARE SELLING OUT FAST.

Be advised, and send for a copy NOW before it is too late.

Remember!

We had to Disappoint Many

Fanciers last year, as the entire edition was sold out before they ordered their copies.

THE BIRD-KEEPER'S YEAR.

A new feature, which will remind the fancier of essential details of management, the timely attention to which goes so far to ensure success in the hobby, and which gives valuable hints month by month.

THE CANARY BREEDER'S OPPORTUNITY.

By Claude St. John. Telling of the bright future that is in store for Canary breeders, and showing how to take advantage of the existing circumstances in order eventually to profit by the increased demand which is certain to arise in the near future.

HOW TO MAKE BIRD-BREEDING PAY.

By O. E. Brooks. Demonstrating that the hobby of bird-keeping may be made profitable as well as pleasurable. Indicating the mistakes to avoid, and the proper methods to be pursued.

THE FASCINATION OF AN AVIARY OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

By W. Wallis. The delights of foreign bird-keeping are dealt with in this interesting and practical contribution. The fittings of the aviary, the kind of birds to keep, and their requirements in the way of food and accommodation are all described, and there is an illustration of an outdoor aviary which is at once inexpensive, roomy, and adequate in every respect.

WITH THE WILD BIRDS DURING 1914.

By H. Norman. In this article our British bird expert writes in his well-known style on the birds about which he is so well qualified to write, and all lovers of birds in their natural surroundings will be interested in this feature.

HOW TO REDUCE THE FOOD BILL.

By Claude St. John. Useful hints that will help bird-keepers to economise in this time of temporary stress; showing how the expense of feeding may be reduced without any detriment whatever to the well-being of the birds.

A REVIEW OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

How the birds have fared during the year in each section. All are dealt with:—Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Greens, Cinnamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fancies, Crests, Lancashires and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

A DIRECTORY OF JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

DIARY AND CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR WITH EGG-HATCHING TABLE, ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CAGE BIRD ASSOCIATIONS. &c., &c., &c.

No matter what variety of birds you keep, whether novice or old hand, there is information in this bird-keeper's encyclopaedia of the greatest use to you. Each article is written by an expert, and in their experiences of failures and successes you will find the way to the top of the ladder.

AIDS TO SUCCESS.

Our Books and a Common-sense Application of the Advice therein MUST bring you Profit as well as Pleasure

All the experience of years of careful study by experts is at the disposal of readers.

AVIARIES, BIRD-ROOMS, AND CAGES, 2/3 (cloth gilt).—By H. Norman. Contains ten lovely full-page photographic plates. A practical guide which deals thoroughly with the proper Building, Fitting, and Management of Aviaries and Bird-rooms, and the making of Cages.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES, 1/1.—By H. W. Batty (Past President of the Yorkshire Union). Absolutely the very best Handbook dealing with the Yorkshire and its sub-varieties. Contains complete instructions upon Pairing, Breeding, Mounting, and successful Exhibiting, also how to treat in both health and disease.

NORWICH CANARIES, 1/1.—By C. A. House. Tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal" are worth the cost of the whole book.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.—By many notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kitch, T. Smith, etc. This Handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7 inches by 5, is bristful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid Breeding. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

PARROTS FOR PLEASURE AND PROFIT, 7d.—By C. P. Arthur. A practical handbook, dealing with the keeping, feeding, and general treatment of the Grey, the Amazon, etc. It explains how to sex these birds, the treatment of newly imported specimens, and cures for their various ills.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS, 1/2.—By various leading authors. Full information on the seeds suitable for all cage birds, their food values, uses, etc., with descriptions and illustrations of the wild plants indispensable to the successful keeping of British and other birds.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL, 1/2.—By C. A. House. A thorough, practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing) Canary. An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge.

BUDGERIGARS AND COCKATELS, 6d.—By C. P. Arthur. The breeding of Budgerigars and Cockateels is recognised as one of the most profitable and pleasure-giving sides of foreign bird-keeping. This eminent authority gives full details on how to keep, feed, breed, tame, and teach them to talk.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS, 1/1.—By W. T. Page, F.Z.S., etc., Foreign Bird Expert to "Cage Birds." A highly instructive Manual. It contains a magnificent coloured plate and a number of black and white illustrations. Indispensable to all keepers of Foreign Birds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL, 2/3 (cloth bound).—By H. Norman; or may be had in two parts. Part 1: "Hardhills," and Part 2: "Softbills." Either Part, price 1/1, post free. Each part contains a beautiful and life-like coloured plate and numerous illustrations of birds and cages. Up-to-date information on the keeping of British Birds.

THE STOCK BOOK, 7d.—By G. E. Weston. Of our invaluable "Breeding Room Register" a well-known fancier has said:—"It makes bird-breeding easy." No breeder of birds can possibly afford to be without it. It simplifies the operations in the bird-room and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird, and Show Registers of simple and unique character, in addition to useful account pages.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS, 7d.—By Claude St. John. A Practical, up-to-date guide to Canary breeding, designed specially for the use of the beginner. Deals very fully with the choice, sexing, and mating of the birds, feeding for condition, the cages and their fittings, the bird-room, egg-food, nest-building, rearing and moulting the young, colour-feeding, training for show, and all the difficulties likely to confront the breeder.

CAGE-BIRD HYBRIDS.—Complete bound in cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. This great work is written by Charles Houlton, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (awarded editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House). Magnificently illustrated by that great bird artist, H. Norman. There are no less than sixteen coloured and sixteen art plates in this work. Each plate is a perfect study of an individual Hybrid.

FANCIERS' PRINTING.—Fanciers requiring business notepaper, postcards, trade envelopes, etc., should write up for a quotation. We are now in a position to supply these at specially low rates, combined with first-class work. Artistic memoranda, with block of any desired bird, and fancier's name, address, and words of description as desired, 250 5/-, 500 7/6, carriage paid.

The Editor is always glad to receive and consider suitable contributions, whether articles, sketches, or photographs. Provided an addressed envelope, sufficiently stamped, accompanies same, every effort will be made to return unaccepted contributions promptly, but he does not in any case hold himself responsible for their safety.

All matter intended for publication must be written or typed on one side of paper only, and must reach us not later than the first post on Tuesday if insertion in the next issue is desired.

Twitterings.

All our members on active service, writes Mr. J. Peacock, hon. sec., Sunderland C.B.A., will be free members so long as the war lasts.

Mr. L. Mellor, sec. Bulwell F.A., writes that the 3rd young stock show, all sections, will be held Aug. 28 at the Red Lion Hotel. The show will open to the public at 2.

Secretaries of societies desiring the patronage of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League should apply to the hon. sec., Allen Silver, 7, Bampton Road, Forest Hill, S.E., not later than Aug. 31. Classification, name of judge, and particulars of prize-money should be given.

We have received from the hon. sec., Mr. V. Wynn, the quarterly statement of accounts of the City and Suburban A.C.B. This shows the very satisfactory credit balance of £25 in bank, and £6 3s. 3d. in hand. The enthusiasm of the members is well shown by the fact that no fewer than 105 have already paid their annual subscription.

Secretaries of Midland shows desirous of receiving the patronage of the Midland Counties Y.C.C. for 1915, should apply as soon as possible to W. Wells, hon. sec., Helmside, Erdington, Birmingham.

Mr. G. Large, Barrow-in-Furness, writes that all the awards which appeared to the credit of "Forge" in our report of Barrow C.B.S. show were won by him. Throughout the report, therefore, "Forge" should read Large.

We are just now getting numerous queries as to birds which may be legally taken in various localities during the season which opened in most places on August 1. Those who are interested in the subject should refer to the answer to J. A. Scott published this week under the heading of "General" in our Queries columns.

A very useful catalogue is to hand from S. Young, of the Enterprise Appliance Works, Misterton, Crewkerne. It is difficult to say what is not included in this very exhaustive list, and there would scarcely seem to be anyone who would not find something to his taste among the thousand and one things that are offered. It is certainly a catalogue that should be in every household.

I was delighted to see the drawing of my Bullfinch in last week's CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. A. J. Rhodes; the picture does the artist great credit. He won 1st at Tonbridge, 1st Maidstone, 1st Ramsgate, 2nd in mixed class at Malling, and commended with 5s. special for best P.M. bird in a class of 29 at Brighton, only times shown. I wish CAGE BIRDS success.

OBITUARY.

It is with deepest regret, writes Mr. R. Plows, sec. Kippax Linnet Club, that I have to announce the death of Mrs. J. Liversidge, wife of one of our members, Mr. J. Liversidge, of Kippax. I am sure that every Linnet fancier in the district will join with us in tendering to Mr. Liversidge and family our very deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

MR. J. BENTICK, GREENCROFT.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. R. Peart, that I have to inform of the death of one of our most esteemed members, Mr. J. Bentic, of Greencroft, after a very short illness of typhoid. He was a well-known fancier in the North, being a keen fancier for Linnets. He was a member of the Anfield Plain C.B.S., Stanley C.B.S., and South Moor C.B.S. He leaves a widow and four children to mourn his loss, and I am sure all fanciers will join with me in expressing deepest sympathy to Mrs. Bentic and family in this their sudden and sad bereavement.

DEATH OF A PALACE SHOW NOTABILITY.MR. HARRY SMALL.

Fanciers throughout the country, writes Mr. J. W. Ramsden, will learn with regret that Harry Small, the old Palace Feeder, has passed away. He was at the Palace one day as usual, looking to his stuffed birds and animals, went home in the evening, and passed away before morning. Mr. Small had been a feeder and attendant at the National Crystal Palace shows for 45 years, and was known and respected by all exhibitors and visitors to the shows. His portrait appeared in the Special Supplement of the Jubilee Palace Show published by CAGE BIRDS, Feb. 23, 1907.

Please accept my best thanks for the honour done my Cinnamon marked Yorkshire in placing him on the front page of this week's issue of your valuable paper, among the winners at the City and Suburban Young Bird Show on July 3. I must also congratulate Mr. Norman on the excellent portrait he has made of the youngster. With best wishes for the continued success of CAGE BIRDS.—M. S. Runchman.

I am very sorry our meeting has fallen on the same date, August 14, as Chester-le-Street, as we are both in one district, writes Mr. J. Stanger, hon. sec. Pelton Fell C.B.S. Mr. Smith, of South Shields, has kindly promised to give us a lecture to help the Fancy and draw fanciers together, and I would like any fancier that is not a member to come and hear the lecture. All will be welcome. We arranged our meeting for Aug. 21st, at Pelton Colliery Inn, at 6.30.

It was with great pleasure that I saw on the front page of CAGE BIRDS my dear yellow Norwich, shown at the City and Suburban young stock show, July 3, writes Mrs. Stophor, Walworth. This was the only time it has been shown, and the bird took 1st and special for best Novice Norwich and cup for best bird shown by a lady. I have bred 30 young this season, and have already won 3 firsts, 2 seconds, 1 third, and 5 specials at three Young Stock shows. I am a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, which has provided me with a great deal of very useful information, and I wish it every success.

A TRUE STORY OF A CAT AND A PARROT.

By W. A. LOTT.

LET me begin by saying that this little story is a true one, correct in every detail, and that I had it at first hand from the owner of the pets. The family of this friend of mine had as household pets a Grey Parrot and a lovely Persian cat, tame, obedient, and no rover, in fact without a fault except occasionally a little jealousy shown towards the Parrot when the latter was receiving what Puss considered an undue amount of petting.

Every incident of home life was always noted by these two favourites of the household—master off to business, wife out to market, daughter practising the piano, the calls of the butcher, the baker, etc.—the great event of the day being the return home of the "Lord of the Castle," for they knew that this meant petting and fussing for both of them, not to mention a share of the good things on the table.

Each evening at the approach of bedtime Puss was let out into the garden, to see if any strays were contemplating a burglary into the larder, and when the door was opened for her return she was always there waiting to take up her position for the night on a cushion near the Parrot's cage.

One night, however, the cat was not at the door as usual, and calls were unanswered; neither did a search in the immediate neighbourhood disclose her whereabouts. In the meantime, Polly was showing her uneasiness in many ways; she tore the cover from her cage, and was in a very excited and unamiable mood. All efforts to recover Puss having failed, nothing remained to be done except to wait events until the morning, and Polly was left to wonder what had become of the companion from which she had never before parted.

The family were all in a more or less troubled sleep when the master fancied he heard a faint moan. Going into the garden with a lamp the pitiable cries were heard close at hand, and a search revealed the cat stretched out flat, and apparently in a dying state. Carefully lifting the animal in his arms, he concluded that by some inexplicable means the poor creature's back had been broken, and, although it was then two o'clock in the morning, the family doctor was summoned. The case was pronounced a hopeless one, and it only remained to put the cat as quickly as possible out of its misery.

Before this, of course, the whole family had become aroused, and all were lamenting the loss of the pet, loudest of all being Polly, who was continually calling "Where's Puss?" "Puss wants milk," "Puss, kiss Polly," and many other phrases of the kind.

Twenty-four hours passed, and it was noticed that Polly was neither eating nor drinking, but continually calling for Puss. Fuss and attention were lavished to no purpose, dainties of all kinds were offered and refused, and Polly showed by her listless eye and drooping body that something was seriously wrong.

The doctor was again called in, and drugs were tried without avail, and after three days' fasting and fretting for her five years' friend and companion the Parrot gave up her life and was buried in the same grave. After this, who shall say birds have no intelligence?

The August issue of the Avicultural Magazine, the journal of the Avicultural Society, opens with an article by Dr. Graham Renshaw on the Vulturine Guinea Fowl. Dr. Bernard E. Potter, who is with the Field Ambulance of our Forces, writes a most interesting account of "Birds in Flanders." Dr. E. Hopkinson continues his useful "English Names for the Parrots," and among the other articles are "Bird Notes from the Fjords," by R. Staples-Browne, and "Winter Treatment of Foreign Birds," by Gerald Rattigan.

The Bird's Legacy.

£1,000 has been left, by a lady recently deceased, upon trust to pay the income therefrom during the lives of her bird and her dog.

The Chough in Wales.

The Chough has nested, according to a Manchester gentleman who has a house in Mid-Wales, says "W. C." in the "Manchester Dispatch," not far from the source of the river Wye. It is evident, thanks to the protection afforded by bird lovers, that some of the birds that were rapidly becoming extinct are in the wilder districts still to be found.

JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS

The attention of Show Secretaries is directed to the following list of gentlemen willing to act as Judges. Terms for insertion on application.

- J. C. BARNES, 113, Northfield Road, Walkley, Sheffield. Judge of all varieties of cage birds. Long, practical experience. Terms moderate.
 THOS. BENNETT, Judge of Cage Birds; life experience; terms moderate: 14, Cumberland-rd., Lidget Green, Bradford.
 J. W. BRUCE, Coldstream. Judge of all varieties of cage birds; Border and British Bird specialist. Terms moderate.

A Royal Cockatoo.

King George, says "The Star," has always been very fond of birds, and has a venerable Cockatoo, who is no respecter of persons.

The Border F.C.C. Patronage.

"The committee meets to grant club patronage on the last Saturday of August," writes Mr. W. B. Smart, 13, High Street, Loanhead, N.B., "and secretaries should make application in time for meeting. For open shows state number of Border classes, and if equal prize money in Cage Bird section, also name of judge (who must be a member of B.F.C.C.). Confined shows must state what radius the show is open for. Fanciers wishing to join the club can do so up to the end of the month. Annual sub., 2s. 6d."

The Escapade of "Charlie."

The lecture on "Charlie," my pet Crossbill, to the members of the Clapham C.B.A., writes Madame Feist-Madewell, nearly had a tragical ending for Charlie himself. Before the lecture I took him out of his cage, as he is perfectly tame, and always returns, and he went in all right. Then I happened to say "He walks all round the table," and George drew the cage further away, just under the gas-light. Charlie, instead of trotting home, flew up and settled on the edge of the gas-globe. Finding, I suppose, it was very hot, he flew to the windows (they were all open very wide at the top). Then he flew to the wall, and fell on the floor. I thought he was lost to me for ever, as there was a trap-door a few yards from him—dark as night, but one of the committee caught him, and I got him back safely, very little the worse for his flight and fright.

SHOWS.ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Crossbill as a Pet Bird.

A Lecture before the members of the Clapham C.B.A., August 3.
by Madame Feist-Madewell.

THE Committee of this Society, the Clapham C.B.A., wish me to say a few words in a short time, I believe half an hour is the limit, about the Crossbill (Loxia curvirostra). I spell it for you that you may please not ask me to pronounce it. Now our worthy members know very well my weakness for Charlie, my Crossbill (my husband's name is George), so they knew they were pretty safe in asking me, as perhaps any other subject might have been a failure.

With this I will tell you that among the British Birds which are but infrequently seen upon the show-bench, must be numbered the Crossbill, and the reasons for this infrequency are not far to seek. Firstly, it really must be admitted that excepting from an avicultural point of view, the bird has very little to recommend its being kept in captivity, and secondly it has many properties detrimental to its possession by any ordinary cage-bird lover. Certainly an adult caught male, with its bright rose-coloured body plumage, and its blackish wings and tail, presents a certain amount of beauty, but this, its only attraction, is but like a dream or a good dinner—it passes away, and there is nothing left of it but the memory, for with a cage moult, the rose-coloured plumage entirely disappears, and is replaced by a dingy yellowish-green which is far from beautiful.

A Curious, but Useful Beak.

Then another thing, viz., the extraordinary formation of its beak, which gives the bird its name, amounts to quite a deformity in the eyes of those who, while they may have full appreciation of the wise provision of Nature, which has endowed the bird with effective means of extracting the kernels of the pine cones which abound in their homes (wherever they may be) yet would take no pleasure in the possession of a bird furnished with a beak that is totally different from any other British bird.

Further, it requires a very strong cage, and it must be a very strong cage indeed, to resist the constant endeavours of these birds to splinter every blessed piece of wood that will yield to the attacks of their powerful mandibles. Well do I know it, for certainly it is the most destructive bird possible—something after the Parrot kind, but if anything, worse.

Now when I bought Charlie in Club Row. Oh! I beg your pardon, I ought to have said Sclater Street, but please excuse me, for I am not entirely to blame. When I go to "Birdie Land," and ask the conductor very sweetly for Sclater Street, he does not seem to quite understand, and twice it has happened that they told me that they did not know where it was; so if I say Club Row, it is all right and saves bother.

Well, as I was telling you, when I bought Charlie he was a poor enough little chap; he looked as though he had passed a bad quarter of an hour, not over clean, and not over happy. I took him home and put him into a cage, not very elegant, and not very large. I gave him two nice, smooth wooden perches, but needless to say they did not remain perches long—he made them complete wrecks. Seeing this, I procured some nice smooth pieces of bamboo cane, and made him two more perches, for which, instead of being grateful, he was absolutely furious, because he could make no impression on them. Never mind, they are still in his cage (same cage) after having stood the test of his dear old beak for quite three years, if not more.

A Pretty Legend.

Now many of you perhaps have heard the beautiful legend of the Crossbill, which is that at the time of Christ's Crucifixion the Crossbills (whose beaks were straight like all the other birds at that time) came to the spot and tried to pull out the nails from His Sacred feet. Alas, the cruel executioners had done their work only too well, so that it was beyond the strength of our dear little feathered friends to extract the nails, and in their vain efforts to effect this, their beaks became crossed, and have remained so ever since as a souvenir of that act. Of course it is but a legend, but, even to those who do not believe it, does no harm. We tell fairy tales to our children (when we have any), I do not mean grown-up fairy tales; oh, no!

But I must continue, or my half-hour will be up before I have finished. Now if the Crossbill is taken from the nest and hand-reared, it will grow up quite tame and without fear of its owner, and except for its destructiveness makes a very interesting pet. But such birds (those taken from the nest and hand-reared) never come into the colour proper to an adult Crossbill—a cock Crossbill in full wild colour has a very fair chance of success on the show bench in a mixed class (but you have to get it first, do not forget that).

Some people say that excepting for exhibition purposes it is not worth the trouble of keeping. I beg to differ; for ever since I have had dear old Charlie he has been a continued source of interest and pleasure to me, which I can say with truth is now over three years.

How to Feed the Crossbill.

In captivity the Crossbill may be fed upon almost any grain—nuts, especially monkey nuts, apple cores, hawthorn berries, mountain ash, and other berries. In their free state they are partially insectivorous, and even in captivity will generally accept and enjoy an occasional mealworm. Charlie, however, does not like them, he turns them out of his cage quicker than you put them in. He is like his mistress, he has a very strong affection, a very strong antipathy to anything creepy, crawly or snakey.

If you could be fortunate enough to obtain a good supply of fir cones, it would afford them a grand occupation, and keep them "pro tem." from pecking their cage to pieces, but I find it difficult to get even one cone, let alone a good supply; if anyone present can give me a tip where to get some, I should be most grateful.

Although Crossbills are annual migrants to this country, arriving in summer and departing in spring, it appears that they are rather capricious in their coming and going, while many remain, or did remain, with us to breed. Sometimes they visit us in very large numbers, the flocks running into hundreds, while in other years (as now) they are scarcely to be seen. On the other hand, in some years they are reported as breeding in great numbers in parts of the Continent, where they have for long been unknown. Now I am speaking of before the war broke out, a few years ago this happened in Switzerland. The early time records of their remaining with us to nest were infrequent, but latterly they have been found breeding in many counties.

It appears that in 1910 they nested to quite an unusual extent in the south-eastern counties. I only wish they did it now, then perhaps I should have been able to procure a partner for Charlie, as some one said to me one day: "Madame, have you ever tried to mate your Crossbill?" Of course I said "No," but needless to tell you the question did not fall into the water. I set to and scratched my ear to find with what to marry Charlie. I had but one Crossbill, and he was a poor, lonely orphan, with not, as far as I knew, a single relative in the world, so after long and painful reflections, I thought of a sweet-tempered Snow Bunting that he seemed to have cast loving eyes upon. You must know that this Bunting lived in a cage near his own (not too near, for he had already tried his beak on it, I mean the cage).

An Unfortunate Marriage.

So one Saturday (Saturday being, up till then, my lucky day) I put lady Bunting into Charlie's cage and waited; I did not have to wait long. Alas! my dear friends, he made very short work of his marriage ceremony and rendered the poor lady Bunting like unto his first perches, that is to say, a complete wreck. I never tried marriage bliss for him again, and since then he has lived very peacefully alone with the sole consolation of monkey nuts and chillies.

Now I must not forget to tell you that the Crossbill is neither welcome nor loved by the apple-growers, for the birds destroy an enormous number of apples to get at the pip (not to get the pip, but at the pip), although it is said that they will not do this to any great extent so long as they can attain plenty of seeds of the pine, fir, or larches which are their natural food in a wild state.

The Crossbill a Nomad.

On the Continent the bird ranges (or did range) in Europe from extreme north to extreme south, and is, or rather was, found in many parts of Asia; in fact it may be said that the Crossbill is the bird that has travelled the most, being continually on the move in search of food from one country to another at random, so long as sustenance for itself and young may be found in the neighbourhood.

It appears that there are two other kinds of Crossbills, very closely allied to the Common Crossbill (little Charlie) namely the two-barred Crossbill (Loxia bifasciata) and the White-winged Crossbill (Loxia leucoptera). Not knowing anything about either of the latter, I am quite unable to tell you more about the Crossbill.

What We All Hope.

But one thing I must do before going home to bed, is to thank you all for the kind indulgence and patience you have accorded my little effort. If, dear friends, I have succeeded in amusing you, and made you forget for a short time the dark and terrible cloud hanging over us, rich and poor, then I am contented, and I most sincerely wait you to join with me and turn your thoughts to those near and dear to us in the trenches, to those whom we have seen among us here, and who are now far away fighting that we may ever be free. Do not forget—"That we may ever be free." Let us raise our hearts and thoughts to our boys; may God bless them, and give them health, strength, courage, and a safe and speedy return, with the deep and lasting satisfaction of having done their duty in helping to crush the most bitter, the most vile enemy that civilization has ever encountered. May its head be bowed low, so low that it will never, never be able to raise it again.

THE TRAVELS OF A TYNESIDER.

Mr. J. N. F. Scott, late of Newcastle, tells of his experiences in Canada and his migration to Australia, and gives some notes on Canadian Birds.

AS most Tynesiders know, I struck out for Canada and arrived at Montreal all safe. On the voyage I ran across a Border fancier, one who had been among the first to exhibit Greens, and who I believe exhibited the famous hen, "Border Queen"; we had a good few talks together. At Montreal I obtained work with an English Company, the same that I went to Newcastle to work for originally, and they sent me on to Winnipeg. Here again I ran into the Fancy, as my labourer was an old Linnet fancier from London, so we got along all right.

Always the House Sparrow.

Here I was able to look around, and first noticed the cheeky House Sparrow was, as usual, top dog on the streets. I also noticed the Swallow, but it was much heavier and more sluggish in its flight than the graceful birds we knew at home. Here also I was introduced to the American Robin, larger than our Nightingale, but built on the same racy lines. City life, however, does not give much scope for observation.

I was not many weeks here when I was ordered to Kenora, on the "Lake of the Woods," but work still demanded most of my time, and I only noticed one new bird I could not name. This bird and the House Sparrow were doing great execution among some grasshoppers that were on the wing, and they were catching dozens of them.

After another three weeks I had to move again "Westward Ho" to Saskatoon, and it was here that my letter-half and family joined me, for no one is happy without his mate. I here came in contact with the so-called Meadow Lark. I heard its call over and over again when out on the vast and apparently boundless prairie during the summer, and it beat me for some time to locate it, but at last I found it. It sits on a stone and there gives forth its call very much like "Half a pint of mild and bitter," with a monotonous regularity. As its colour closely matches the prairie grass and stones it is hard to notice until you know its habit, as one naturally looks on poles for it.

I was here during migration, and saw a few more species which I could get no names for, as no one was interested in anything unless it led up to the "Almighty Dollar." One thing, however, cheered the soul of a fancier. In that cheerless spot, 1,000 Rollers were sold in about three weeks at prices that would open the eyes of fanciers at home who get 1s. for hens and 1s. 6d. for cocks for export. Let us hope not many were disappointed in their song (?).

I spent the Canadian winter here, and when one has that experience it gives him some idea why the Creator has instilled into our feathered friends the instinct of migration. When one sees the thermometer going down, down, down, day after day, until he thinks the mercury has taken a fit till it stops way down at about 59 below zero, and sees everything frozen solid, and the snow so crisp, he realises that under such conditions bird life is impossible. Yet during summer this vast continent is a happy hunting ground, indeed a very Paradise, for insectivorous kinds especially.

Winter Joys.

To ourselves the Canadian winter is not such a fearful experience. It was to myself a pleasant one, for one feels good, and that he could eat horse nails. Any unpleasantness was offset by the sleigh rides the better-half and I enjoyed. The job finishing, however, meant another move, and marching orders came, so once more it was "Westward Ho," and we never stopped until the mighty Pacific lapping the shore cried "Halt."

In Victoria, British Columbia, we pitched our home for some eleven months. It was a big change from the frostbound prairie, still in the mighty grip of Jack Frost, to being where the flowers were blooming. There my work was laid in pleasant places, and I was in a bird sanctuary as it were. Man's rough hand was only just laying his first grip on it.

As I held the position of foreman here, I had many opportunities for observing bird life as I stood on the job, and the first thing that struck me was the number of Woodpeckers which were about. There were three species of them; a large kind, reddish brown and white, a black and grey one, with white spots, also a smaller kind, and scarcer. It was nothing to see half a dozen at once of the larger species on the old stunted tree I remember well. It seemed a trysting place every forenoon and afternoon. Often one could see a dozen or so on it, all chattering, and their bills digging. How different to the conditions at home, where one must wait days to see one Woodpecker. I have often been not thirty yards away from the birds on this tree, and from all parts of the woods around one could hear the sonorous boom reverberating through the woods as a 'Pecker way up yonder on the topmost limb of some dying monarch sent a ringing and playful "Ya, Yo."

Here also during the summer in one of the denser wooded parts I enjoyed a rare treat, that of seeing the Humming Bird in its natural state. I stood still one day as I noticed a flash of colour go, quick as a streak of light, into the bush. I watched and waited, and at last I saw a couple climbing upwards with wings beating so fast that they looked as if of gauze. They climbed some 100ft. into the air, and then came back again, and ere they reached the ground they were going so fast that the eye lost them.

Thoughts of Home.

The next outstanding feature was on going home one evening I brought my friend to a sudden standstill. Could my ears deceive me; was I wrong; could it really be a bird singing in this great songless land? No; I was right; it was an English Skylark singing. Where was he? Yes, there the little songster was, way up in the blue vault of Heaven. Nearing the end of his climb he was pouring forth his soul in a grand and melodious outburst. I dare say none heard him but ourselves, but until the songster came again to mother earth, and his last tremulous note ceased, we stood and listened, then went our way rejoicing that at least some of the importations from the homeland were doing well, and thinking of many happy boyhood days to which memory's strings pulled us back.

There were a few Hawks about who levied unremitting toll on the smaller species, and a few large Brown Owls, soft of wing. As one walked through the woods, they flitted past like ghosts of the night. During the duller days they wander abroad in the open, and it was delightful to see them zigzag over an open space in search of food and suddenly drop into the grass.

Here also for a few weeks we had some large bird of the Eagle or Vulture tribe, of the former I think, as the Rooks used to kick up no end of a racket when they noticed it on a big tree it used to frequent; they often went within ten feet or so of it. Here also were many Quail running all over the lawns in great coveys, and a good many Pheasants. No prettier sight have I seen than the view I had one morning of some fifty Quail, a dozen Pheasants, and two Jack Rabbits, all feeding within fifty yards or so. Along the shore one of course could see the usual Seagulls, and many others of the Diver and Duck kind.

The Classification of the Y.C.C. of Scotland.

SIR,—We notice in the "Twitterings" columns of CAGE BIRDS that the classification of the Y.C.C. of Scotland is to be the same as last year (no classes for novices). It is the fashion now to be "wanted," but it is to fill the classes, and ensure full prize-money for the professional "knuts," that the novices in the Y.C.C. of Scotland are wanted, or at least it seems so to Breeding Bullfinches in Captivity.

Virginian Cardinal Fosters Bullfinch.

SIR,—The following may interest some of your readers. I have an aviary in my garden in which I keep about fifty mixed birds. A pair of Bullfinches built and hatched on June 15 four eggs. When the young were a few days old, the parents for some reason deserted their young. On July 15 they built again, and hatched five eggs, but a few days later I found the nest again disturbed and four of the young dead. I left the other, as it was too young to bring up by hand. I discovered, however, this young bird lived, so I kept watch and saw it being fed by a cock Virginian Nightingale; this "foster-father" fed the young hen Bullfinch, which is now able to look after itself, and has grown into a strong, healthy bird.

LALLAN.

SIR,—In CAGE BIRDS of June 19 you published a letter of mine re breeding Bullfinches in captivity. As only two CAGE BIRDS readers replied, and their letters referred to outdoor aviaries only, I take it that my failure need have caused no surprise. At the same time, I wish to thank Messrs. Wilnot and Blake for the information given. You see, I was trying to breed them in a large cage indoors. The result was as follows: Both birds were in good condition, the cage was 4ft. x 2ft. x 2ft., carefully fitted with shrubs, etc., they paired, built, hen laid three eggs, sat three days, then quarrelled with the cock. One egg was smashed, one thrown out of nest, and the other went cold, for she absolutely refused to return to the nest. Final: Exit of both from my bird-room. Without doubt, the funny eccentricities of some birds are puzzling. As I write I have one of my Roller hens sitting on eggs by a favourite cock Linnet, house-moulded once. This particular hen would have nothing to do with any other cock, Canary or otherwise, so as she seemed bent on this Linnet I put him in to her. I was afraid he would be too big as I have never heard of Mules being bred from Rollers before; anyhow, she is a highly-trained hen, so with the combination of song, if reared successfully, they should be "some singers," as the Yankies say. Of course, they will be of no size, but that will not matter if the song is there. I should like to know if this cross has been bred before. Wishing CAGE BIRDS ever increasing success.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Alteration of Rules to Meet Altered Circumstances.

SIR,—The Committee of the N.P.C. met at Bolton on Aug. 7 to consider applications for patronage. Interest in the proceedings may be judged from the fact that there was only one absentee, and there were present Messrs. T. Dent in the chair, J. Trengrove, A. Hirst, P. Waring, S. Cook, E. Sutton, J. Spencer, J. Davies, A. F. Fildes, T. Johnson, J. Hopkins, and E. Cunliffe. Correspondence was read from societies applying for patronage, and after a lengthy discussion, in which it was pointed out that societies, owing to the present circumstances, were not in a position to open out indiscriminately, a motion was adopted which rescinded the standing rule regarding classification and judges at patronage shows.

Hitherto, the rule affecting the club's patronage was to the effect that societies must provide eight classes for champions and six for amateurs, and must also give four money prizes in each class and engage a N.P.C. judge. Now the committee have withdrawn these restrictions, and also the rule limiting the cup shows to five. It was decided to notify secretaries of societies through the advertisement columns of CAGE BIRDS (as will be seen by the advertisement under Norwich) that these restrictions had been withdrawn for the present, and to ask them to apply for patronage, stating number of classes provided, the judge elected, etc., on or before Sept. 18, when the committee will again meet to consider all applications on their merits, regardless of number of classes. The committee desire to thank those societies who have already applied, and to say that their applications will be considered at the next meeting, and in the interim, they crave the indulgence of secretaries.

It would seem from the foregoing that the N.P.C. are to move with the times, and that the interests of smaller societies are to be considered equally with those of larger ones; and having regard to the fact that there is a substantial balance in the bank, and that the prize list is likely to be augmented (and also the members) the committee hope for a considerable number of applications at their next meeting. Societies wishing for patronage, with its consequent attractiveness from a visitors' point of view, will do well to make application to the sec., Mr. F. Cunliffe, 9, Lark Street, Burnley, before Sept. 18.

Idle to Have an Open Show.

SIR,—The Idle C.B.A. have decided to hold an open show on Oct. 6. We are giving a liberal classification, catering for Yorkshire, Norwich, Borders, and British. With fancier-like generosity, Mr. C. A. House and Mr. J. Chippendale have guaranteed the society against loss. Mr. W. Mundell has been selected as judge, and the management of the show will be in the hands of Mr. C. A. House. We ask fanciers to rally round us and give this our first open show their whole-hearted support.

The Extermination of Lice in Canaries.

SIR,—With regard to "Observer's" criticism of my letter, I cannot agree that the life history of the louse is unimportant, as regards treatment, or that it would prove too much for the average mind to grasp, did we know it. There is no doubt whatever that the human louse feeds on blood, as "Observer" will see for himself if he looks up the latest works on the subject. That the bird louse does the same, and to what extent its life history is similar to the human louse, I am not in a position to state for certain, but there seem to be many analogous points. I offer the suggestion for what it is worth, and as some sort of a guide for treatment; and, as such, I contend that the treatment recommended by your experts is the best available until we know details of the life history and of the powers of resistance of the "nits." As to the louse eating the feathers, we all know that infested birds will frequently show bare areas around head and neck, but I read that this may be caused by the red-mite alone, which "Observer" himself says is a "sucker." I hope "Observer" will give us further details on this point, for I am sure there are many like myself.

INTERESTED.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR,—Mr. Teschemaker says he agrees largely with my last letter, yet that letter was written in direct opposition to the sentiments he had previously expressed. He says, moreover, that he never claimed that the desertion of her young by the Flycatcher was an instance of pure reasoning. His original letter certainly gave me the impression that such was his view, and in his letter of 24th July he actually chided a Mr. Johnson for having "a poor opinion of the Flycatcher's intelligence, and even asserted that 'she knew' (mark the knew) that it requires two active 'Catchers' to rear one baby 'Catcher.'" With regard to the latest tale of the Thrush, Mr. Teschemaker's facts are doubtless right enough, but his application of them is all wrong. Instinct is not "the inherited experience of thousands of generations." For although continual action of a certain nature for thousands of generations may produce gradually a tendency to instinctively act in the same manner, yet experience itself must be imparted if it is to be accumulated, and birds lose interest in their young long before they can learn the battle of life. As for the Thrush, at the risk of being monotonous, I must say that bees would have done the same under similar circumstances.

I still assert that birds have little or no intelligence, and to support my assertion I may as well tell a tale myself, as it seems that to attack is to secure the better strategical position. Some time ago I had a Nightingale. I kept it through the summer in lovely tame condition until the autumn came, when it developed a shocking wildness and absolutely spoilt its plumage. It had, of course, got what we call "migration fever." Now, this bird ought—if it had the reasoning intelligence that Mr. Teschemaker would claim for it—to have "known" from "experience" the futility of its efforts to migrate, instead of which we find that in actual practice the instinct which bade it migrate was stronger even than the knowledge that it was caged.

The Song Thrush-Blackbird Hybrid.

Its First Appearance on the Bench.

SIR,—At last I have got the photo of my outside garden aviary taken, and am sending this to give you a slight idea of the place. It is a clematis that covers the aviary, with roses over the bowers, and the place looks its best when the roses are in bloom. I am glad to say the Hybrids are doing well, and are now well started in the moult. I only managed to rear two of the last nest. One fell out of the nest two days before the others left it, and another got hurt by flying against the aviary wire, and died next morning. The other two are doing well.

I had the pleasure of showing one of the younger nest last week at our Darvel First Feather show, and it carried itself well, and promises to be quite steady in a show cage. I don't mean to trouble them much till they are quite clean moulted in the open flight, so that they may have the best chance. I have never been a great exhibitor of birds, but if the shows are still going this season, and the birds do well in the moult, I hope to turn some of them out a bit. With best wishes.

T. H. ANDERSON.

[The photograph received shows a really ideal home for birds. We regret, however, that it is too small to permit of a satisfactory reproduction in an ordinary issue, but we hope to be able to use it as one of the illustrations of a special number.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

Precocious Youngsters.

SIR,—I was reading in CAGE BIRDS of July 31, F. O'Sullivan's account of his young birds singing. I started breeding last year with two cocks and three hens, and I reared 9 birds out of 11 hatched. This year I went in for a better class of birds, good Rollers, two cocks and four hens, and I have finished with 24 young birds reared out of 25 hatched. I reckon to have my young birds out of the nest at between 17 and 20 days. Out of my first nest of three one was singing at a month and four days. My last nest was four young hatched July 11, and one July 12. The last bird was thrown out of the nest, but I followed "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and brought it back to life and put it back in the nest. The hen has reared them herself—she would not allow the cock to help her in any way. One of her youngsters has started to sing to-day, August 3; that is, singing in 23 days. I would give an account of my style of breeding and feeding if you care for it. It is all plain feeding, as I work 79½ hours' night, and 63 hours' day work, so I have no time for fancy feeding. I had about 20 clear eggs last year, but I have only had five this year.

J. A. SHRIVES.

[We shall be glad to receive the account of breeding and feeding kindly promised.—EDITOR, CAGE BIRDS.]

Are we Downhearted? No.

SIR,—Will you allow me, through your valuable columns, to have a word with my fellow secretaries? It is the lot of a secretary to have the guiding of the society to some extent, and at the present time we have problems facing us we never had before. However, if men at the front are not downhearted, we ought not to be, and let us see how we can help them in some way if it is only to make the lot of those who are wounded the brighter. My own society is hit hard, about 50 per cent. having joined the colours, and we who are left at our ordinary duties are very hard-worked sometimes. We have indeed a lot to be pessimistic over, but "we won't, and that's an end to it." Last year we took £3 17s. 6d. gate and ticket money, and the whole of that, without any expenses being deducted, was given to the Mayor's Fund for National Relief, the Mayor doing us the honour of presenting the prize-money, etc., on the evening of the show. It was a grand finish up, and we felt we had done a little bit to make Tommy's burden lighter. This year those of us who are left are going to put our shoulders to the wheel to try and overcome our difficulties and keep our society alive, so that our fellow fanciers in the fighting line will know on their return that we have tried to do our best to keep things together. We have already engaged the Town Hall for our annual show Nov. 11, and Mr. Norman as judge, and decided to give all our gate and ticket money to a fund in connection with the war. My own opinion about cancelling shows is that it is a fine way to kill a society. We are hoping to have even a bigger turn-out than last year seeing we are well off financially. As secretaries, let us get some optimism into our fanciers, and we shall not regret it when the war is over.

A Recipe for Egg Food.

SIR,—In the July 24th issue of CAGE BIRDS I gave some account of my hen Bullie feeding and bringing up two young Canaries. They are Yorkshires, and fine young birds now; she started sitting again on July 17 on her third egg, laying the fifth egg on the 19th. She has sat her full time again, but had three clear eggs, one added, and one good. She hatched that one on July 29, and I also put a young Green Yorkshire with the young Hybrid, as I find one young one does not often do well by itself. She is feeding both, and they are showing wings and tails now, this being their tenth day.

In reply to your request, I send you the method I adopt for making egg food. I put one tablespoonful of milk to one egg, whisk it up together in a basin until it becomes frothy, put the basin with its contents into a saucepan with water, and boil for thirty or forty minutes. I keep the cover of the saucepan over the basin for about half that time, then remove the cover and let the steam escape; this partly dries it. When done, I press it through a perforated zinc box, add 2oz. of biscuit powder or dry crust of bread powdered, also rubbed through the zinc box, and well mix with it two teaspoonfuls of white sugar. This gives 5oz. of what I think a superior food, with no disagreeable smell whatever. I have kept Canaries for about fifty-eight years, but only for the last two years have I adopted the plan I now recommend to fanciers. It was in 1858 that I started in the Fancy, and from about 1860 to 1862 I made up several breeding cages with mahogany fronts screwed on. Each year, including this, I have bred in these cages, and they will last longer than I shall, although I am still no weakling, I am thankful to say.

Tynesiders Meet in Australia Through "Cage Birds."

SIR,—I am pleased to inform you that I have been able to locate Mr. Currah through my previous letter to CAGE BIRDS, our only regret being that we are so far apart, Mr. Currah being in Sydney while I am in Melbourne. I also got in touch with another old friend who, noticing my letter, made haste to let me know that he was not far distant. Even before I had got my CAGE BIRDS or word from Mr. Currah, and when I was not even expecting anything, as no English mail was due, I got a letter which had been posted locally with my address in an unknown writing. Who could the writer be? I got a big surprise when I opened it and found it was Mr. G. Ellwood if you please, late of Tyne-side, and I must say he nearly beat the clock to let me know. But of George more anon, as I will see him ere this goes to the mail. Now Mr. Editor, it is long since you had anything from my pen, and I am sending a few brief notes on my travels, hoping they will be of interest. By the way, is Mr. Mackenzie still alive? I sent some four letters to him, and received no reply. To all old friends I send greetings, wishing them a good show season. As to Australia's birds, more anon, and if the Editor wills I may write on them. Mr. Currah reports doing well, and is in the Fancy judging shows.

J. H. F. SCOTT.

P.S.—I have seen G. Ellwood, and he is doing well in this new land, but, like myself, he misses the cages and his feathered friends. We had a long talk over old times, and our many friends on Tyne-side.

[Mr. Scott's interesting notes appear on another page, and we are sure that they will be read with pleasure, especially by his old friends in Newcastle. We shall be glad at any time to publish the further notes Mr. Scott so kindly promises.—EDITOR, "C.B."]

Club Reports.

WEST STANLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, July 24, Mr. G. F. Bates chair, and a better attendance than for a long time. Mr. R. Bewick and Mr. J. Storey were made members. Schedule was drawn up for our show; now members, turn up at our next meeting and have it adopted. Mr. J. Kisboro, Sunderland, was elected to judge annual show.—W. Cresswell, Sec.

WEST STANLEY EMPIRE F.F. AND C.B.S.

Meeting, Aug. 8, Mr. R. Peart presiding, and a good turn-up of members. Mr. Taylor gave us a reply he got from the inspector regarding showing pigeons, and pigeon members should attend next meeting, Aug. 15, to get to know what to do.—R. Hutchinson.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Meeting with a good turn-out of members. Sec. announced that Blaydon had received the following patronages: Northern Border C.C., Open Norwich Plainhead Club, and also the full cup patronage of the N.C.C. Mr. P. Lynn, Winton, was admitted a member. On the whole, our members have done fairly well in the last round of the breeding season.—G. Havver.

MIDLAND ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, July 29, Headquarters, Seven Stars, John's Lane, Wolverhampton. Mr. Willows, chair, and only a fair attendance. New member proposed, Mr. Ball. Decided to hold no meeting for August. After business we had the pleasure of listening to a few choice Rollers brought by our worthy chairman, this being very instructive to the novice members. Vote of thanks to Mr. Willows terminated an enjoyable evening.—J. W. Thomson, Hon. Sec.

ROSSENDALE C.B.S.

Meeting Aug. 2, Swan Hotel, Bacup. Mr. G. Wantling chair, and a grand turn-up of members. We were very sorry to receive the resignation of our sec., Mr. H. Wantling, on account of removing out of the district; Mr. G. Johnson was elected to fill the vacancy. It was decided to change the name of the society to Bacup Roller Canary Club, as practically all the members now are Roller fanciers. The annual singing contest Nov. 19-20 was discussed, and drawing up of the schedule was considered. The following judges were appointed: Messrs. Lyons, Masseny, and Oldroyd. Will all Roller secretaries please note date and avoid clashing of shows. Roller fanciers wishing to become members may do so by sending in their names to the secretary, or attending the meeting at the Swan Hotel, Bacup, the first Tuesday in the month at 7.30.—G. Johnson, 6, Brunswick-terrace, Stacksteads, Manchester.

NORTHERN BORDER F.C.C.

Meeting and table show, Pillar's Cafe, Pink Lane, Aug. 4, Mr. A. Affleck presiding. Applications for patronage were considered, but owing to a lack of particulars the whole of these could not be definitely dealt with. R. Thomlinson and C. Cubby, Carlisle, were elected members. The demands of the Government for munitions are having an adverse effect upon the entries at the table shows. Mr. Render being the only exhibitor in the novice section, it was arranged that he compete against the champions, and a rare sight he gave them, coming out with two 1sts, one 3rd, one 4th, and he, his Wallend cup winner being again placed 1st in the Green class. Cl. or Mkd. Yell.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Render. Buff: 1, Render; 2, Johnston; 3, Smith. Green: 1, 4, he, Render; 2, 3, Johnston; vhc, c, Smith. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. M. C. Potts, who judged.—C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH C.B.S.

Meeting, Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, Aug. 2, Mr. D. Brown, president, chair. Sec. read replies from judges: Mr. J. Adams, Dundee, for Canaries, and Mr. R. H. Gibb, Glasgow, for British, Mules, Hybrids, and Foreign, for Club Show, Nov. 13. Decided to have a washing exhibition Aug. 16, in the Stormont Arms, South Street, at 8. New members enrolled: Miss Livingston, Mr. Gillan. Meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chair.—J. L. Smith, Sec.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting Aug. 3, Headquarters, Mr. W. G. Fellows, chair. New member elected, Mr. W. G. Haydon. The suggestion from Hastings and St. Leonards re forming a Southern League, was fully discussed, but whilst the idea commended itself to most it was decided that the present time was unfavourable. The hon. sec. presented the accounts for the F.F. Show, which showed a balance of £1 1s. The chairman kindly promised another challenge cup for competition at the annual show as a points cup, details to be settled later; this makes the society's seventh cup. Members were asked to turn up in goodly numbers to Mr. Gamble's lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, Sept. 1, at 7.30.—G. J. Slade, Asst. Sec.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.

Meeting, July 31, W. Cresswell, chair. Schedule for annual show was compiled. Decided to have a new scale for payment of prize-money, viz.: 5 in a class to claim full prize-money; 4 and 3, 2nd and 3rd money; 2 and 1, 3rd money. Decided to have another guessing competition, as we did so well last year; also to distribute complimentary tickets to patrons and donors of specials. A discussion amongst the Border fanciers ended in favour of each contributing 2/6 to a fund for purchase of two trophies, one for best bird and one for runner-up, each exhibitor to nominate two birds, not necessarily one colour; these birds to be judged in two classes, yellow and buff, before being judged in the classes in which they are entered.—G. F. Bates, Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting, Aug. 3. Mr. A. Hawkins was nominated for membership. After having handed to exhibitors present prize money won at the recent young bird show, the Sec. announced that the show had resulted in a loss of 1s. 4d., and this amount was at once made up by the Chairman, Mr. W. H. Vale. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Sec., Mr. Hosc, for having so ably managed the show, and also to Mr. C. Cooper, the auditor, for having checked the accounts. Resolved to have an annual show exactly similar to the one of last year, namely, open to all exhibitors who will undertake the delivery and collection of their birds. The date is to be fixed at a later meeting, and will probably be about the middle of Oct. Resolved that in future our meetings be reported in the "Clapham Observer," in addition to CAGE BIRDS. After business a lecture was given by Madame M. A. Feist-Made-well on the Crossbill. The members were very pleased with the lecture, which, however, almost ended in a tragedy, for "Charlie," Madame Made-well's Crossbill, escaped from his cage and flew round the room, dangerously near the gas brackets, much to the alarm of his owner; but was eventually recovered, none the worse for his excursion. A vote of thanks to Madame Made-well ended the proceedings.—A. R. Coe.

The Shows.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Table show headquarters, Balmoral Hotel, Rochdale-road, Aug. 3, for young birds; 25 birds were judged by Mr. Deakin, Newton Heath. Yorks.: Howarth. Nor.: Robinson. Bords.: Colley. Brit.: Daley. Mr. Daley won special for best bird with a Bullfinch. We have arranged our annual show for Nov. 27. Mr. Beswick, Stockport, judge.—A. Colley, Sec.

TONG C.B.S.

Show, Aug. 7, Dudley Hill; 63 birds were judged by Mr. T. Bennett, Bedford. Champ.—Class 1 (5): 1, Hodgson, sen.; 2, 4, Gledhill; 3, Casey. Class 2 (9): 1, Casey; 2, Baker Bros.; 3, 4, Padgett. Class 3 (8): 1, 4, Padgett; 2, Casey; 3, Gledhill. Class 4: 1, Baker Bros. Nov.—Class 5 (13): 1, 3, Raper; 2, Crahtree; 4, Parker. Class 6 (11): 1, Naylor; 2, Wardman; 3, Dockerill; 4, Parker. Class 7 (12): 1, Raper; 2, 4, Dockerill; 3, Crahtree. Class 8 (4): 1, Parker; 2, Wardman; 3, 4, Naylor.—W. Walker, Sec.

EAST ARDSLEY C.B.S.

Table show, Aug. 7, Black Swan, with not a very large entry, but quality of the best. Mr. W. Waind, Leeds, judged and gave every satisfaction. After the judging Mr. Waind officiated as chairman for the meeting that was held, and after business was finished kept the company alive with a few of his anecdotes on birds and other matters in his well-known inimitable style. Linnets: 1, Burnell; 2, Walton; 3, D. Bedford. Redpoll, &c.: 1, Burnell; 2, 3, vhc, R. Bedford. A.O.V.: 1, 2, Burnell; 3, D. Bedford; vhc, Humberstone; he, c, Walton.—A. Walton, Sec.

REDGAR C.B.S.

2nd N.F. show, Ship Inn, Marske, July 31. Owing to the majority of the members' birds being well advanced into the moult there was not a very large entry, but we are looking forward to a good young stock show. Mr. T. Thompson, New Marske, judged, and seemed to give general satisfaction. The principal prize-winners were:—Champ. Yorks. Yell.: Clarke, Bray, Dixon. Buff: Dixon, Bray. Nov. Yorks. Yell.: Dunn, Green, Walton. Buff: Close, Bell, Dunn. Linnets: Walton, Clarke, Dixon. Goldf. and Bullf.: Bray, Boagey. A.O.V. Brit.: Clarke, Boagey, Bray. For.: Boagey.—W. Boagey, Hon. Sec.

NEWTON-LE-WILLOWS C.B.S.

Young stock show, Pied Bull Hotel, July 31. Several very nice Yorkshires were shown, notably the buff which won for Mr. Waddington, a very slim typical bird which should moult out well. The exhibits were nicely staged and well looked after by the committee. Mr. Waddington made a courteous and efficient sec. The show was visited by a goodly concourse of visitors. Mr. C. House judged. Yorks. (10): 1, 4, Waddington, smart cl. buff, slim and straight; 2, 3, vhc, he, Bray, nice team, hardly so tight; c, Newport. Heavily Mkd. (3): 1, 3, Bray, smart yell., nice shape and style; 2, Newport, almost a green, and a good one. Brit. (2): 1, 2, Sharp, nice coloured Goldf. leading.

GUISELEY, YEADON C.B.S.

F.F. show, Regent Hotel, Guiseley; 54 birds faced the judge, Mr. P. Mason, Shipley, who gave entire satisfaction. J. Andrews won sp. most points and W. H. Dibb sp. for 2nd most points. Class 1: 1, Long; 2, Dibb; 3, Andrews; vhc, Hardaker. Class 2: 1, Long; 2, Dibb; 3, vhc, Andrews; he, Mountain; c, Brown. Class 3: 1, Fawcett; 2, Andrews; 3, Scott; vhc, Dibb; he, Boulton. Class 4: 1, Brown; 2, Dibb; 3, Mountain; vhc, he, Hardaker; c, Andrews. Class 5: 1, vhc, Andrews; 2, Scott; 3, Fawcett; he, Hardaker; c, Brown. Class 6: 1, Webster; 2, 3, Andrews; vhc, Mountain. Points for cup: Champ.: Andrews 18, Dibb 17, Hardaker 10, Fawcett 9, Brown 8. Nov.: Long 13, Scott 8, Mountain 7, Webster 4, Boulton 1.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

F.F. show, July 31, Graham's Road. Entries were fair, the total being 39 birds, and some very good ones among them. Mr. J. Jeans judged. Nor. Yell.: 1, 3, Smart; 2, Marshall. Buff: 1, sp. Hunter; 2, Smart; 3, sp. Leishman. Bord. Yell.: 1, McDougall; 2, Reid. Buff: 1, sp. 2, Reid; 3, McDougall. Crest: 1, sp. Whytock; 2, Burnett; 3, Smart. C.B.: 1, Whytock; 2, Smart. Finch: 1, Penman; 2, Burnett; 3, McDougall. A.O.V. Brit.: 1, sp. Richardson; 2, Penman; 3, Burnett. Decided to hold annual show Dec. 11; settled on one judge meantime till the September meeting; will see by that time if we require another. Cup placed the same as last year for points specials to count where there is competition. Next meeting August 28, Temporary Hall; intending members come forward at 7.30.—W. Clarkson, Sec.

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES CLUB.

Young bird show Aug. 7, headquarters. Entries showed a marked improvement on former years, while quality was all that could be desired. Mr. Jas. Findlay won special for best Canary with a cl. yell. Nor., and Mr. S. Mallon sp. best Mule or Hyb. with a very promising Goldf. Bullf. The show was well patronised by visitors, and a good many well-known faces were seen. Mr. Jas. Downie judged.

Cl. or Tkd. Yell. Nor. (5): 1, 2, sp., Findlay; 2, Bannerman; 3, 4, Whitelaw; 5, sp., Hamilton. Buff (7): 1, Bannerman; 2, 4, 6, Findlay; 3, Cross; 5, 7, Whitelaw. Var. Yell. Country Rambles

GARSTON B.B.A.

Owing to the inclement weather on Aug. 8 the prospects of a ramble of the members were not very bright; but as the weather cleared up towards the appointed time, 14 members sallied out to face the elements, and were well rewarded for their keen interest in birds and bird life. Leaving Garston at 3 o'clock, we made for the shore, which, after the heavy rains, was a bit heavy for walking; but as numerous discussions arose as to the different varieties of wild seed, which was in abundance, the time and walk passed off well. Reaching Oglet at 5.30, we went on to Mr. W. Leadbetter's house, and sat down to a substantial tea, ably provided by his parents. All the members appreciated the way they were generously catered for. During the repast the rain again started and put a damper on any further rambling, and after it ceased we made back towards home along the lanes and bye-roads, arriving Garston at 9. It has been decided to hold another ramble, Aug. 28, from where we finished, when we trust to be favoured with better weather and a larger muster of members and friends. Needless to say, bird life was a bit scarce; but with a fine day next time we trust to have plenty to occupy our time.—R. T. Lonsdale, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The Bank Holiday ramble of the Sheffield O.S. was held on Aug. 1. On the morning the clouds appeared very low and heavy, giving us a feeling of disappointment as we had all been looking forward to old Sol shining as he had never shone before. A generous announcement was made by our genial treasurer, Dr. Craig, who promised to pay for teas (ham and egg) to all members exhibiting at the N.F. show; this proves the interest the doctor takes in the society and its members. About 36 assembled at the Midland Station to journey by train to Grindleford, and then to ramble through the woods to the Chequer's Inn at Frog-gat Edge for tea. Mr. Towers, of Keighley, was again one of the party, and we were jolly glad to see him and enjoy his company. The main body arrived at Grindleford, but on leaving good old Yorkshire, Derbyshire looked very black and continued to do so, so we all made up our minds for a downpour. Just on the very moment of entering the wood down came the rain, but it proved only a shower, and was over when we commenced our ramble through the woods. The birds were fairly numerous, and after one of the most enjoyable rambles we arrived at our rendezvous for tea. After tea we had a few minutes' chat, which eventually drifted into a meeting in connection with our great All England show. So enthusiastic was every one that all took tickets and guaranteed to sell them; in fact, some members paid for them then. After the meeting Grindleford Station was reached in good time, and on arriving in Sheffield every one was of the opinion that the ramble was the nicest we ever had.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Corres.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for expense must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

WHAT IS THE CAUSE? (Canary).—There are quite a number of different causes which would account for the young dying after the hen had been feeding them for seven days, or even for a longer period; but to form any reasonably correct idea as to which it is in any particular case, one needs a fairly good idea as to the way the birds have been treated and the conditions under which they are kept, and your query sadly lacks all such details. It would be the merest haphazard guesswork to attempt to advise you without much more knowledge of the conditions, and as it is now quite too late to encourage further breeding, the best advice you can have is to separate the birds now and devote your attention to getting them through a quick and healthy moult, to have them in good trim for beginning the season next year. Meantime, get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d., post free, and thoroughly digest its contents between now and next spring, and be guided then by the information you will have gleaned from its pages, which should enable you either to avoid this trouble altogether, or to deal with it effectually if it crops up.

RAPE AND MOULTING (Crest).—(1) Glad to hear that the bird is improving so well. Continue the treatment a little longer, and substitute good summer rape for that which you are now using, as advised in No. 2, and the hen will soon be quite well again. (2) The sample of seed sent consists very largely, if not wholly, of charlock, sometimes called winter rape. It doubtless increases the tendency of the birds to diarrhoea. A pinch in a seed mixture is beneficial, but as part of the staple diet get a sample of summer rape, which has a mild nutty flavour when a little is chewed in the mouth. (3) Keep the bird quite on the warm side, with a light cover over the cage, and every second day add to the drinking water five drops each of syrup of saffron and sweet spirit of nitre, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece. On the alternate days give a morsel of bread and milk dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar. After a week or ten days of this treatment, if no signs of moulting are present, stop the drugs for the time being and place the cage and bird, still covered, in a quite cool place for a week or so. This should suffice to set the moult going freely.

BUILDING A STRAIN (W. J., Sheffield).—As you have already acquired some experience by breeding the commoner varieties of Canaries, it depends largely upon the amount of space you can devote to the birds, and the depth of your pocket, how many birds you should begin with next year to build up a strain of your own in Yorkshires. It is, however, just as well to begin in a moderate way and let your breeding stock increase, as it were, with your experience. Three pairs of birds, or two trios—each of one cock and two hens, the cock to be run with the two hens consecutively during the breeding season—would be quite sufficient for a start. If you have three pairs, none of them should be closely related, and if two trios, each trio should be as distantly related as is consistent with them being of the same strain. This will be best assured by getting the birds of a good breeder who runs a fairly large stock, and leaving the selection with him. If you get two trios, you may get them from two different breeders, provided that you assure yourself first that the strains will mix, as by so doing you will be able to go on much longer without introducing fresh blood. You omit to say what class of marking you wish to aim at particularly, or whether you wish to go in for green or cinnamon-marked, so I'm afraid I cannot tell you what colour birds you should procure, beyond saying that yellow and buff should figure in each pair or trio. On the whole, you would be well advised to confide in a reliable breeder and leave the initial selection of the stock to him. Then, for future guidance, get the handbook, "Yorkshire Canaries," 1s. 1d., post free, from our Manager, which will give you much fuller details than it is possible to do in this column.

DROPPING FEATHERS (E. Linsell).—I do not quite understand the point of your query as to whether you should keep the bird a little longer or return it now. It is because you think the dropping of the feathers unnatural, or in what other way do you think it not suitable for you? It is quite natural for a young bird to be moulting, and consequently dropping feathers, at this time of year, and it is also natural for it not to slug much whilst this process is going on. Keep it in a comfortably warm place, not overheated, but free from direct chilly draughts. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, linseed, and broken groats every third day. On the intervening days give first half-a-teaspoonful of egg food, or its equivalent in bread and milk well sprinkled with maw seed, and next a spray of seedly green food, which you may vary almost at pleasure just now. In the drinking water you may add 20 drops of whisky and five of syrup of saffron two days in every three for a week to get the moult going freely. Offer a bath daily, except when weather is really chilly.

A WHEEZER (Nor-West).—I very much doubt the wisdom of using this bird for breeding, even though it is the best you have. First of all make yourself quite sure that the exciting causes of the condition, which I am constantly reiterating in this column, are eliminated. Then, if the bird is in good plump condition, treat as follows for a fortnight. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give separately a third of a teaspoonful of maw seed, and on the alternate days a fairly liberal supply of green food in variety. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day. If the bird is not in plump condition, give this dietary and treatment for two consecutive days only, and then, in either case, go on to the following treatment. In addition to the above staple diet, give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, linseed and broken groats twice a week; on two other days a similar quantity of egg food or a morsel of bread and milk, either well sprinkled with maw seed, and on each of the remaining days give a morsel of green food or wild seed heads. Every second day for a fortnight add to the drinking water five drops each of syrup of saffron, sweet spirit of nitre, ipecacuanha wine, and tincture of lobelia; then miss a week and give it again for another fortnight. The wheeziness will probably last more or less until after the moult is quite finished, so do not give up hope too quickly. Keep bird on the warm side, and do not give the bath except on quite warm days, say, about twice a week.

CANARY QUERISTS

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (12); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3d.); "Sweets and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

BREEDING YORKSHIRES (R. B.).—Yes, most certainly it is possible to breed and rear Yorkshires in a large attic, facing south, even though it is not possible to use artificial heat of any kind. It is not only possible, but, if the attic is free from damp and cold cutting draughts, it will make a most excellent breeding-room, which could only be improved upon by having a prospect facing south-east or south-west, instead of direct south. But this is quite a minor consideration. The absence of artificial heat is more an advantage than otherwise if you start with a robust class of birds, which have been bred and reared under normal conditions of temperature. It may interest you to know that many of the most aristocratic Yorkshires on the show bench are bred, reared, and kept under conditions similar to those your birds would be kept under. Get the handbook on "Yorkshire Canaries," by Battye, which our Manager will send you post free for 1s. 2d., and go in and win.

ROLLER QUERIES (H.A.).—You may give the green hen a diet of plain canary seed only, supplemented with a fairly liberal supply of green food in variety daily for a week or two, and every second day for one week add to the drinking water as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice. Beyond this I do not think you need trouble about her continually calling to the cocks, as the moult will soon stop that now. It depends upon the age of the birds whether it is worth keeping them to try again next season. If they have large coarse scales on the legs and feet, and thick overgrown claws, indicating that youth has been left in the rear, you would do well to discard them at once, but if these points are the reverse of above, they may be well worth trying again. If you wish to discard them, and do not want to keep them on a superannuation list, a whiff of chloroform is the most humane means of dispatch. If at all "nervy" about it, take the birds to a chemist and ask him to do the job for you, which he should do for a very few pence.

OBSTINATE DIARRHOEA (Thirst).—The wet cage floor is due to excessive diarrhoea, the great thirst being an effect rather than the cause of the trouble. Treat as follows until the droppings become quite normal. Keep cage floor and perches as clean as possible, which can be more easily attained by keeping the cage floor well strewn with clean sawdust for the time being. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape seed, and see that the latter is of a mild nutty flavour. In addition, give separately every second day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut well dusted with carbonate of bismuth, and a third of a tablespoonful of maw seed. On the alternate days give half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, and crushed arrowroot biscuit. Give no green food for the present, but you may give as a substitute a small teaspoonful of well-boiled summer rape two or three times a week. In the drinking water add five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of opium, and dilute sulphuric acid for three consecutive days, and every second day afterwards until the droppings are quite normal.

AN IMPROVEMENT (E. M. T.).—Glad to know you have so far stemmed the tide of mortality and got the birds on the way to recovery; but if, as you fear, the deaths recur when the birds get on to seed, I still think you would be well advised to get a post-mortem on one of the bodies, and thus ascertain what is the exciting cause of the inflammation, which is of more importance than the mere fact of knowing it is inflammation with which they suffer. There certainly seems to be something unusual in the condition of these birds. You should not quite suspend the use of soft food for them for some time after they are on a seed diet. Continue to give a little—say, a teaspoonful, between two or three birds—daily for a week or two after they are well on seed, and vary the bread and milk with crushed sponge cake or broken groats. Do not give any very succulent green food for a few weeks, but such things as seed heads of shepherd's purse, mouse ear, or plantain stalks on which the seeds are in the milky stage, should do no harm in small quantities twice or three times a week.

CANARIES VOMITING (Bowling, Burnley).—I am afraid I cannot give you "a speedy remedy" for this complaint without some more definite information to form some opinion as to what is really wrong with the bird. Vomiting is not usual in Canaries, neither can it be described as a disease in itself, but rather a symptom of many disorders, and you give absolutely no clue as to the general condition of the bird's health. Is it in good health to all external appearances, and fairly active? On the whole, I think you had better write again and give full particulars of the bird's condition, and describe any other symptoms as closely as you can, and also say when and how often the vomiting occurs. You might also describe the act of vomiting. Then I may be able to help you. Meantime, you may give a small piece of bread and milk dusted with carbonate of bismuth daily for a week, and every second day add to the drinking water a crystal of sulphate of soda as large as a small pea.

BREATHES QUICK AND HEAVILY (Panting, Norwich).—I do not think there is much wrong with this bird. Possibly he is not quite recuperated after the moult. It would help much to pull him together if you could remove him to a comfortable temperature for a week or two, until he has resumed normal activity. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary, and on the alternate days give a morsel of banana. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for three consecutive days, and after this give instead 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and six of glycerine every second day for a week.

CLOGGED FEET (Hopeful).—It is probably nothing more than a dirty habit of the bird to always have the feet clogged with filth from the floor of the cage. Some birds are much more slovenly than others, and yours is doubtless one of this type. It is sometimes caused by an abnormal glairy and viscid nature of the droppings, but if this was the cause in the case of your bird, some of the others occupying the same cage must have been troubled in the same way. Keep the floor of this cage well strewn with clean, dry sawdust for a time. Give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a morsel of banana. Stop all other kinds of soft food for the time being. In the water add a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, and ten drops of lemon juice for three or four days. After this give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week or so. Wash the feet clean with warm water, in which you have dissolved a little boracic acid, twice or three times a week, and after drying them, rub gently all over a little spermaceti ointment, but do not leave any surplus grease about them to attract the dirt.

ROLLER HEN INACTIVE (Aldridge).—You do not say how old the hen is, and it may be that the inactivity at this season is merely the natural result of having left her youth a little too far behind. Try the following treatment for a fortnight, and if not well in that time write again, and I will advise you further if necessary. In addition to the staple seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day. On the alternate days give a morsel of banana and a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle. In the drinking water add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice daily until the droppings are quite free, but not watery. Then stop it and give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight.

CAKED VENTS (Will Pill).—Separately cage the birds so affected. Give plain canary seed only as staple diet, and in addition give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, millet, and teazle. Once a week on the alternating days give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on each of the remaining days give a small spray of watercress, if available fit to use, or as a substitute a morsel of sweet apple. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and afterwards give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tinct. of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. It will be quite safe to offer the bath twice a week to all birds in a normal state of health. If any appear unduly susceptible to chill after it, it may be withheld from such specimens with advantage.

EYELID HALF CLOSED (W. H.).—Catch the bird and closely examine it to see if one or more of the very minute feathers around the edge of the eyelid are turned underneath and, if so, carefully return it to its normal position. You may also bathe the eye once a day for a few days with a solution of boracic acid, then absorb the surplus moisture with a piece of soft linen, and place a tiny scrap of spermaceti ointment on the eye, and hold the bird for a few moments whilst it melts, and help it to work its way around the eyelid.

TEMPERATURE AND COLOUR FEEDING (Care-taker).—(1) Any Canaries in a normal condition of health which have been bred in a garden aviary, even though not fully exposed to all conditions of weather, and now kept in a cold room indoors may be quite safely trusted to withstand any degree of cold we are likely to get in this climate as far south as London. Should we get an exceptionally severe winter, a little extra heat-forming foods would be all that is really necessary to ensure their well-being. You may safely take the appearance of the birds as a guide. As long as they appear bright and active there will be no necessity whatever to increase temperature. But if any considerable proportion of them should appear to get miserable and lethargic during any period of unusual severity, it would be as well, having the radiator available, to utilise it to maintain a temperature somewhere between forty and forty-five degrees until the normal temperature resumed this height. This amount of heat would be ample under the circumstances. (2) No, it would be quite useless giving colour food to birds nearly through the moult. To do so would at best only make the plumage patchy in colour, which is a greater drawback than a level colour of a pale natural tint.

THREE IN ONE (J.W.).—(1) The principle of mating buffs together is certainly very common in the Crest fancy, much more so than it need be, or ought to be, as it is responsible for much of the coarse rough plumage we get in that breed, as well as the washed-out colour. Size is certainly not lacking, but with it there is far too much coarseness and untidiness of plumage. Good yellows are undoubtedly scarce, but the colour is very far from being so rare as you suggest, and more use ought to be made of it. If the pair of birds you refer to are not both very far removed from yellow blood, I see no reason why you should not mate them, but I certainly do not advise you to eliminate yellow blood from your stock, or you will rue it in other ways. Something more than mere size and feather is required to make a good specimen you know. (2) Yes, there is a reason why you should remove the cock from the second hen when running him with two hens. If not removed when the hen is beginning to sit, the latter in many cases will be found to brook no separation afterwards, so that if you wanted to return him to the first hen before the brood of the second was safely reared you cannot rely always upon being able to do so. It is much better to keep him caged alone during the intervals. The extra attention he requires is certainly not much. (3) You would find the chapters on the Crest in Parts XII. and XIII. of "Our Canaries," and Parts IV. and V. contain the chapter on Exhibiting, in which you would find information about preparing birds.

YOUNG WITH DIARRHOEA (Nor-West).—Possibly you are a little too liberal with the green food, or give it of a too succulent nature, perhaps freed in growth. When the young are getting ready to leave the nest, or you may give too much at a time, so that the youngsters are able to get nibbling at stale portions of it. If you attend well to this matter, see that your hemp is quite sound in the kernel, and that your rape is a well-matured sample of summer rape, I do not think you will find any trouble with the young leaving the nest with diarrhoea. If you do, then a few days before they are ready to leave the nest decrease the proportion of bread in the egg food by one-half, and make up the same bulk with crushed arrowroot biscuit. If the looseness develops very soon after they have left the nest and they appear to sit sipping at the drinking water most of the time, add four drops of dilute sulphuric acid to it to render it slightly acid and prevent them toying with it all the time.

MATE FOR CINNAMON (D. G.).—You do not mention the breed of the bird, nor whether you have any particular desire in the way of colour of young produced. The green cock from which this young bird was bred undoubtedly had some cinnamon blood in his veins, so that this cock mated with a self cinnamon would in turn breed cinnamons, self and broken. It could, however, also be used to improve the colour and depth of tone in yellows of the green type. For the latter purpose mate it with a clear yellow hen of good type, and close and boxy in feather. This should produce some young of excellent quality of plumage, and deep, rich tone, and the ticked and clear young mated the following season with other typical birds of the green type will give a combination of type and quality in a high degree, which should make a distinct advance in these qualities in your stock. No fee is required for replies given in these columns. Always pleased to help.

A NERVOUS SUBJECT (C. M. D.).—Possibly the noise the bird makes is merely the outcome of its nervousness, and of no material importance. Still, you may give it half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days during the first week add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea to the drinking water. In the second week add to the water instead of the above five drops each of tincture of lobelia, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day. You can do nothing at all for the nervous condition beyond treating it with the greatest care and gentleness, and trying to gain its confidence. Keep it where it will always see someone about, but not where it will be subjected to sudden movements or noises, and frequently offer it some tit-bit and devote a few minutes each time to "talking" or "weeting" to it until you have so far gained its confidence that it shows no fear at your presence, or when attending to its wants. Once its reserve is overcome, such a bird frequently becomes most tame and familiar, but until the ice is broken they need very gentle handling to avert a sudden demise from sheer fright.

OVER-EATING (A.M.J., Cricklewood).—Glad to know that most of the birds are better. Continue the same method of feeding and limiting the supply of the two that have not made so much progress as the others, as advised in last reply. Continue it until the birds seem to be quite well. Also add to the water of these birds six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda as large as a small pea daily for three days, and after this give instead a crystal of soda as above, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week. Then stop all drugs and rely upon the system of feeding to complete the cure. It would be beneficial to give all the other birds the soda and rhubarb mixture as above for two consecutive days now. If you only gave the birds pure tasteless peppers, either with or without a moderate proportion of Nutral, it would have nothing at all to do with the birds' present condition.

NOT PERCHING, ETC. (W. Stone).—(1) It is probably only an idiosyncrasy of the bird to try to find a cosy spot to perch in out of the chilly, raw atmosphere we have had this season. Quite a large number of birds seem to have the same way out of an unpleasant situation this season. You may try bathing its feet once in a warm solution of boracic acid for a few minutes, then dry, and gently rub on a little carbolised vaseline, but do not leave on any surplus grease to attract the dirt from the cage floor. Also give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a week, and on the alternate days add to the water six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid. It would help the bird considerably if you could keep it in a little warmer place for a week or two, but do not overdo the heat. (2) You cannot depend upon more than one pair breeding successfully in the aviary you name. If you introduce more than one pair they will be almost certain to make a hash of things by interfering with each others arrangements. A cock and two hens might possibly succeed if you happened to get birds of just the right temperament, but you cannot rely upon doing so. The only other way by which you could make it do for more than one hen is to place a partition across the middle and divide it into two equal parts. Then you could keep a hen in each division and run one cock with them alternately.

CAGES FROM BOXES (Cannabina).—(1) With a little ingenuity you can make quite decent cages out of a variety of trade packing cases. The size you name, 14ins. by 12ins. by 7ins., would do nicely for stock cages to keep single birds or couples in, but would not be large enough for breeding. But you must strictly avoid those with rough coarse surface. The rough wood may not harm the birds, but affords such harbour for red mites as to cause endless trouble and work to keep them free from this pest. Smooth down any rough surfaces with coarse sandpaper, if you cannot plane them smooth. You would also be well advised to do the insides with white sanitary distemper in preference to whitening and paste, and the outsides with Brunswick Black. The extra cost would be very small, and the effect considerably better. You should also endeavour to make your fronts to fit the stock sizes of punched bar fronts you see advertised. This is easily done by regulating the width of the front pieces you will put in over the turn-rail. I have not seen any of the fronts at the price you name, so cannot say whether they are quite good or not. (2) Some rollers become corrupted in song much quicker than others. I have one myself at the present time, which, a twelvemonth ago, was a highly-trained bird, and a fine singer, and now sings a perfect Linnet song, some coarse Norwich jargon, and scarcely a note of anything worthy of a Roller. On the other hand, I had one nine years in constant company of mixed birds, which deteriorated exceedingly little. Try a staple of three parts canary to one part cole for this bird. If it refuses that, give plain canary, and offer a little scalded rape occasionally.

COLOUR OF CAGES (F. R. S.).—The colour of the dressings of breeding and flight cages, both inside and out, is a matter of individual fancy. There is no "correct" or compulsory colour for these cages, as there is for show cages. In small or badly-lit rooms, white for the insides is certainly the best, as affording the maximum of light available, but in larger rooms and large cages a light bluish-green, or a bluish-grey looks more cosy. Light autumn-green and electric-green are very nice colours for the insides of cages. Outside mahogany colour suits any colour inside. Your cages will do very nicely as they are, and there is no real necessity to alter the colour at all. By the way, your single breeders are very low. You should have made them at least 14 ins. high.

LUXURIOUS FARE (F. C.).—Neither linseed nor hemp should form any material portion of the regular dietary of Canaries. These seeds are not necessarily injurious if used with discretion and in limited quantities. A good mixture for occasional use as a luxury is composed of two parts each, by measure, hemp, niger and white millet, one part each teazle, black rape, or cole and broken groats, a quarter part each of maw and gold of pleasure, and just a slight sprinkling of linseed and mustard seed.

SLEEPY NORWICH HEN (A. J. E.).—Frankly, I should discard her as a breeding unit. You may try what the following treatment will do for her. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every third day, and on the intervening days give first half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and teazle, and next a good-sized spray of watercress or a morsel of banana. In the drinking water add as much Epsom salts as will lie on a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice every second day for a week, and after this give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day for another fortnight or so. If not well in the course of a month write again, and give more particulars about her.

TO GET THE BEST (Novice, E.R.H.).—You will doubtless get out the best that is in him in song when he is in good sound health and quite free from moulting, but you can only get the best in colour by feeding him at the proper time, viz., when he is about to commence moulting. About August you will find full details of this process in our columns. It is useless to attempt it now. As regards the loss of feathers, I should suspect that, if the bird is really free from exposure to draughts, the room must get very chilly at night. Does the cage stand near a window? If so, remove it further into the room, and see that it is in a place where the temperature will keep fairly equable at night.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

REARING HYBRIDS (R. Downing).—I am pleased to hear of your success in hatching Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids. I presume you are giving some kind of soft food for the old bird to rear them on, but you do not say what it is. Anyway, the following mixture answers the purpose, and many fine birds have been reared on it. Boil a fresh egg for ten minutes, and when cold break up as finely as possible, and add to it double the quantity of powdered Osborne biscuit and best quality insectile food, making the whole crumbly moist. Many birds have been reared on ordinary egg and biscuit, and one brood I know of was brought up on insectile food, but, whatever is used, care should be taken to see that the old birds will feed on it, and for this reason it is a good plan to get them accustomed to it before the young arrive. Give also ordinary seeds, including a little cracked hemp, and sunflower, groats, and soaked seeds. Do not give all these things at once; giving them separately induces the hen to feed. She should also be supplied with seedling wild food, shepherd's purse, chickweed, sow-thistle, etc., particularly any weeds that have greenly on them. A cube of bread soaked in hot milk can be offered occasionally for a change. Do not discontinue the use of egg food too suddenly when the young can feed themselves, or they will not thrive. (2) I should think your rearing 25 Mules from one cock Linnet almost a record.

BIRDS IN THE AVIARY (W. J. Delves).—The time that you turned your birds into the aviary had nothing to do with your non-success, although if I read your letter correctly your hens did not lay all unfertile eggs, but you do not say what proportion. These unfertile eggs are not at all uncommon, particularly where the parents are of different species. All those birds that are moulting well I would advise you to leave where they are, but if the others do not soon make a start you had better catch them up and cage them indoors; the change is almost certain to have the desired effect. You should feed them rather generously. Supply the birds in the aviary with their usual food and a little extra hemp, sunflower, and maw seed, also bundles of seedling wild plants.

TAMING A CHAFFINCH (British Bird).—A cage 12ins. long, 7ins. wide, and 9ins. or 10ins. high, would do nicely. It should have a rather deep front bar to it, and the perches placed on a level with this. You can fix a net top to it if you think it desirable, but if the cage is built low this will hardly be necessary. In the Nutshell booklet on the Chaffinch you will find an illustration of this cage, but the sizes given there are larger and suitable for a stock cage, the smaller size is very useful to keep a wild bird in for a time.

BIRDS FOR AN AVIARY (Aviary).—The following birds, all cocks, would suit you: Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Greenfinch, Siskin, Linnet, Twite, Redpoll, Yellow Bunting, and Gilt or Reed Bunting. These would give you a nice variety of song, and look well, as most of them are of good colour. Do not overcrowd them; six or eight would be quite enough, the birds keep cleaner and look much better when they have plenty of room.

VARIEGATED MULE (Happy).—If your bird is large enough to exhibit he certainly should be coloured. You should commence to give it at once, and not wait until he begins to drop his feathers. As regards value, so much depends upon his size and shape. They are useful birds in club shows, and at the large exhibitions there is usually a class for variegated specimens. I would advise you to moulit him out, and see what he is like. These birds as a rule make up a lot between the moults, so that you should not be in a hurry to part with him.

EXHIBITING BLACKBIRDS (J. McCorrysen, jun.).—Some judges would disqualify your Blackbird with the light feathers, as they would consider it to be a rare feathered specimen. Perhaps he will moult out quite black this time. If the other bird has not been deformed too long it is possible to cure it. Get a small elastic band and fasten the hind claw back to the leg. If you keep it like this for a few days he will be able to grip the perch when it is released. A piece of court plaster, wetted and bound round the toe and leg, answers the same purpose. The Thrush should have had a little colour-foot before he commenced to moult, but if you give the Blackbird some now it will be in time, as it is the beak and eye area that are mostly improved, and this takes place when the head moults. Buy a pound of colour-foot and mix a little of it in the soft food, until they get used to it, when the strength can be increased. There would be no harm in giving the Thrush some as well, even if he has dropped a few feathers. Wasp grubs are capital food for soft-bills, and certain birds will kill the insects, but I have never used them myself for captive birds. I like them best when they are a long way off.

A MIXED AVIARY (Likamixture).—Your assortment of birds is so varied that they will consume almost all the seeds used for caged birds. I would advise you to manage them in the following manner: one seed hopper to contain nothing but canary, another with a mixture of 3 parts teazle and 1 part summer rape. A portion of sunflower seed to be given daily; most of the birds will eat it, but it will be given principally for the Hawfinch and Bullfinch. Make a mixture of hemp, niger, and maw, and allow half a spoonful to each bird 3 times a week. On other days a spoonful of wild seed mixture to each bird. Millet should be supplied for the benefit of the foreign Finches, and this should be given separately if possible. The softbills will require feeding according to the species, but whatever mixture of birds you have you must always feed for the especial benefit of the tenderest subject, as you cannot expect a delicate Warbler to thrive on food suitable for a Blackbird, but the Blackbirds will keep lusty on the Warbler's diet. I think you would be more successful if you only turned in the hardiest species.

FEEDING A CUCKOO (Cuckoo).—The Cuckoo is not by any means a desirable cage bird, and, although I have had several, I have never cared to keep them for any length of time. They get dirty and untidy-looking, no matter how clean one keeps the cage. You are fortunate in getting your bird to feed himself; this is as a rule the last thing a young Cuckoo thinks he ought to do. They are not particular as regards food, and, like chicken, will eat almost anything they can gulp down, but if you intend to try and keep your bird for any length of time he should be fed on a good brand of insectile mixture; make it crumbly moist with scraped raw carrot or a little new milk, and occasionally chop up a little green-food with it. Sometimes you can add a spoonful of hard-boiled egg to his soft food. Also supply beetles, caterpillars, mealworms, etc., and just a morsel of shredded lean meat. Give bananas, ripe pears or other soft fruit. Keep the cage floor covered with sifted peat moss or coarse sawdust, and clean out daily. (2) I have never yet seen one at a show, the difficulty is to keep the bird in good plumage. It would be shown with the "Any other species of Soft-bills," that is, birds for which there is no special class.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

AVIARY QUERIES (A. C. W.).—(1) I should supply the following mixtures, viz., canary, white and Indian millet in equal parts, also a combined Bullfinch, Goldfinch, and Siskin mixture. (2) I rather like a suspended wooden tray, say, 21ins. long, 12ins. wide, by 4ins. deep. Nail a lilt along the two inside ends 14ins. from top, and on this rest a board 8ins. wide, into which you cut three or four circular holes to receive either glass dishes or glazed earthenware saucers, which will rest upon their rims. The tray catches husks and scattered seed, and it both makes for tidiness and prevents waste. (3) In such an aviary it would be better not to allow them access to open flight during the winter; with such as Bullies, Goldies, etc., mixed among your foreigners you would get no plant life at all if you let them use it all the year round. As regards values, demand exceeds supply at the present time of the species you enquire about, and you may take it that you will be asked at least double what they commanded before the war broke out. You will have to watch our advert. page and secure them as you are able, but unless you buy direct from an outdoor aviary you must not put the foreign Finches out of doors now, or if you do you must bring them in in mid-October, and not put them out again till Spring. Of course, most British seed-eaters can be put out now and left out, but queries regarding these must be referred to our Mr. Norman.

SAMPLE OF SUMMER RAPE (L. Smith).—Very few kinds of seeds are obtainable in such quality as before the war broke out. The sample sent is uneven, some grains have the appearance of being old; it was, however, sweet and seemed fairly well cleaned, but I could not form a definite opinion, as the small envelope had burst in the post. I thoroughly tested the seeds by taste, and found this reasonably satisfactory, and such as I should not hesitate to put into my aviary; considering the times, it is what I should call a fair sample. It would be well now to sift all seed before use, as I have found many samples of seed of all kinds and from many sources less clean than during peacetimes.

SEPARATING A SERIES (Lallan).—(1) Budgerigars, Saffron Finches, two pairs Zebra Finches, Lavender-headed Lovebirds, White Java Sparrows, Bullfinches, Virginian Nightingale. (2) Four pairs Zebra Finches, one pair each Saffron Finches, Bronze-winged Mannikins, White Java Sparrows, Chaffinches, Redpolls, Green Singing Finches, Cuckoos, and St. Helena Seed-eater. In so separate.

ing them I am assuming that the prospective aviary will be of a similar size to the existing one. Of course, for series 1 it is no use planting the aviary, you'll have to be content with ground herbage and tree branches. The aviary for series 2 should be wild and natural, a tangle of undergrowth and bushes, in which evergreens should have a prominent place, and a rambling rose to climb up the standards, as regards wild plants, bramble, honeysuckle, dock, mallow, cow parsley, dandelion, thistle, and the other weeds usually used as greenfood should all have a place.

PARROT IN POOR CONDITION (C. M. P.).—It is an Alexandrine. Prepare the following mixture: One quart each giant canary, white millet, and best white oats; one pint each hemp and sunflower seeds; half-pint each shelled pea nuts and small maize; well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also procure a packet of Parrot grit and scatter a pinch over sand-tray daily. Also supply ripe fruit (any kind it will eat according to season), and keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage. It can also have dry crusts, plain biscuit and plain cake. Put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking-water daily, till the bowels have been well moved; then only give it sufficiently often to keep them moving quite freely, but not in a state of chronic watery-looseness. On the days you are not supplying the laxative lightly colour the drinking-water with chemical food. Spray it twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution, and it would be well to treat the cage as advised in our previous reply. Report progress a month hence.

SMALL AVIARY FOR BUDGERIGARS (Esperance).—Your description reads satisfactory; my only objection is, that having a wood floor, it would be more satisfactory if the whole of the top was covered in, or the general state of wetness will soon spread over the whole floor. As regards the box, you can either sow canary and millet, or keep it planted with growing grass; whichever you have it will be better to take the box outside, well water it, allow the water to drain from the soil, and then put it in the aviary; such procedure will keep undue moisture from the structural parts of the aviary. By lining back and ends with twigg branches I mean fastening such all round these parts in a perpendicular position; small screw-eyes or staples can be put in the back, etc., of aviary, and the branches (pea sticks) fastened to these with a little binding wire. Use three parts each of canary and white millet to one each of oats and paddy rice. By grit I mean grit (you can buy it in packets) as distinct from gritty sand—it consists of flint and shell, you are supposed to use both, sand as an absorbent and the grit for them to pick up; dry earth can be used instead of sand. Hang the husks under the roof of both shelter and flight, with their openings towards the light.

PARROT VOMITING (E. S.).—If you can get this bird to eat sufficient dry seed, fruit, crusts, biscuit, etc., do not give any more sap at any rate, only supply the latter in small quantities and wean it from it entirely as soon as possible. Read our reply to "C. M. P." in this issue, and treat your bird on similar lines as to medicines and seed mixture, the only exception being leave out the maize from the mixture. The bird has got into a bad condition, and you will have to persevere with the treatment, as it usually takes considerable time to undo mischief of this kind. It is largely correcting the trouble by cleansing out impurities and getting the bird settled on a wholesome dietary. It would, however, be well to get a box of honey and horax from your chemist, and give it a little daily, either by spreading on a piece of bread or anything similar it will eat, or from the end of a piece of stick, but only a clean stick or other utensil must be put into the mixture. Report progress again at the end of the month, but you must repeat query in full, as I do not keep queries by me.

A WEAKLING (If. C.).—It is quite possible for the breeding of the bird to be the real cause of the bare and sore heads, in which case no treatment is likely to be very effectual except as a temporary relief of the symptoms. In any case, your only course is to build up the system and strengthen the bird as much as you can, and trust to nature to remedy the defects at the proper moulting season. Treat as follows, and you will probably find the bird get through the moult in a considerably improved form. Every second morning, in addition to the staple diet of plain canary seed, give a small teaspoonful of egg food, mixed rather on the dry side, and on the alternate mornings give a similar quantity of boiled summer rape. Now and again you may vary the egg food by giving an equivalent quantity of bread and milk instead. Each afternoon throw out any soft food that may be left, wash out vessel, and give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give a plain salt stalk, or a few seed heads of shepherd's purse about every second day. In the drinking water add 20 drops of Chemical Food three times a week. Well dust the bare places with boracic acid, when moisture appears. Allow bird to bathe freely if it is fairly active afterwards.

DIET FOR RING-NECKED PARAKEET, ETC. (Novice, T.S.).—Get one quart each of giant canary seed, white millet and best white oats, also one pint each hemp and sunflower seed, and shelled monkey nuts; well mix the whole and keep supply in cage. You can also supply pieces of stale bread, biscuit, plain cake, ripe fruit, and green food (flowering and seeding grass, groundsel, lettuce, etc.). Grit (not sand), cuttlebone and water must be continually in the cage. Keep the bird at all times out of draught, and till it is established keep it in a fairly warm, even temperature. As regards the Java Sparrows, white millet and canary will suffice, but they are usually fond of crushed oats, and I am of the opinion that if you continue to offer greenfood, such as lettuce, seeding and flowering grass, seeding chickweed, etc., they will ultimately take to it, and the sooner this occurs the better for the birds. Do not forget to supply grit and gritty sand on cage tray; keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and give a daily bath.

BLUE-FRONT ILL (Miss B.).—If you can induce the bird to eat it, give a little milk soap daily, prepared so: half a dozen pieces of sponge cake about size of walnuts, half a teaspoonful of cod-liver oil emulsion, one teaspoonful of condensed milk, and sufficient boiling water to make a sloppy soup. Give this till the bird recovers strength, then gradually wean it from the sop to the ordinary diet. Put three drops of whisky in the drinking water daily, and spread a little honey and borax on anything suitable that the bird will eat, while the contents of a small box last. Keep it warm, and bathe the affected eye with a tepid rose-water and zinc solution, dabbing the surrounding plumage dry with a soft cloth afterwards. If there is any running at the nostrils, bathe or spray these with dilute glycerine till the trouble ceases. The main cause of the trouble has been the difficulty of voiding the egg, and during the exhaustion following she has evidently caught a chill—a heavy strain on an aged bird, but I think there is a good prospect of her pulling through with careful nursing in really warm quarters. In addition to what is stated above, supply the normal dietary for the bird to help itself to as inclined. Report progress about fourteen days hence; if the bird should become suddenly worse, write again at once.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

J. H. Askew.—Septic fever, a highly infectious and fatal disease.

W. H. Jones.—The bird was in a bad state of decomposition on arrival, so it was impossible to make a thorough examination.

A Derbyshire.—Disease of the liver. This organ was abnormally large, and of a hard fibrous texture. The disease had been maturing some time.

J. H. Anderson.—The bird examined died of ptomaine poisoning due to impurities partaken of in the food. The bowels were in a state of inflammation, and the lungs were affected with pneumonia. I could not detect anything wrong with the seed.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

British Bird.—According to our information the Goldfinch is protected all the year round in the county of Glamorgan, but the Bullfinch, Chaffinch, Greenfinch, Linnet and Redpoll are not in the schedule of protected birds in the Wild Birds Act of 1880; neither are they mentioned in the special order, dated 1909, which sets forth certain additions to the 1880 Act to apply to the county of Glamorgan. On the promissory known as Worms Head, however, wild birds and their eggs appear to be protected during the whole of the year, and in certain districts all birds are protected on Sundays. Your local police authorities would inform you exactly how the matter stands in your own district. (2) It is not proposed to republish in book form the articles you mention. We could send you the back numbers containing them if these are all still in print.

J. A. Scott.—It would be much too tall an order to explain in our columns "The Law Regarding the Wild Birds Protection Act," as you desire. We would advise you to get the "Bird Dealers' and Catchers' Guide," published at sixpence by Messrs. Trower and Co., Caledonian Road, London, N. This handy little guide gives the full schedule of birds protected by the Wild Birds Act of 1880. It endeavours to explain the meanings of the various Acts on the subject, and the variations as to different localities. Besides this, Messrs. Wyman and Sons, Retter Lane, London, E.C., publish, at one penny each, pamphlets giving extra "Statutory Rules and Orders," made since 1880, and applying to individual districts. The pamphlet referring to Surrey, I.I., your own county, has additions to the 1880 Act which would take columns of our journal to set forth fully.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

This issue has met with greater success than ever before, and

THEY ARE SELLING OUT FAST.

Be advised, and send for a copy
NOW before it is too late.

Remember!

We had to Disappoint Many

Fanciers last year, as the entire edition was sold out before they ordered their copies.

These are some of the Contents:

THE BIRD-KEEPER'S YEAR.

A new feature, which will remind the fancier of essential details of management, the timely attention to which goes so far to ensure success in the hobby, and which gives valuable hints month by month.

THE CANARY BREEDER'S OPPORTUNITY.

By Claude St. John. Telling of the bright future that is in store for Canary breeders, and showing how to take advantage of the existing circumstances in order eventually to profit by the increased demand which is certain to arise in the near future.

HOW TO MAKE BIRD-BREEDING PAY.

By O. E. Brooks. Demonstrating that the hobby of bird-keeping may be made profitable as well as pleasurable. Indicating the mistakes to avoid, and the proper methods to be pursued.

THE FASCINATION OF AN AVIARY OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

By W. Wallis. The delights of foreign bird-keeping are dealt with in this interesting and practical contribution. The fittings of the aviary, the kind of birds to keep, and their requirements in the way of food and accommodation are all described, and there is an illustration of an outdoor aviary which is at once inexpensive, roomy, and adequate in every respect.

WITH THE WILD BIRDS DURING 1914.

By H. Norman. In this article our British bird expert writes in his well-known style on the birds about which he is so well qualified to write, and all lovers of birds in their natural surroundings will be interested in this feature.

HOW TO REDUCE THE FOOD BILL.

By Claude St. John. Useful hints that will help bird-keepers to economise in this time of temporary stress; showing how the expense of feeding may be reduced without any detriment whatever to the well-being of the birds.

A REVIEW OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

How the birds have fared during the year in each section. All are dealt with:—Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Greens, Cinnamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fancies, Crests, Lancashires and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

A DIRECTORY OF JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

DIARY AND CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR WITH EGG-HATCHING TABLE.
ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CAGE BIRD ASSOCIATIONS.
&c., &c., &c.

No matter what variety of birds you keep, whether novice or old hand, there is information in this bird-keeper's encyclopaedia of the greatest use to you. Each article is written by an expert, and in their experiences of failures and successes you will find the way to the top of the ladder.

GENTLEMEN, if you want a good singing Linnet have one taught under my undefeated champion cup winner of England; they run their notes like a good roller and cost no more keeping than a waster. I refused £10 for my champion after he won 1st at Leeds. I have sold some of his pupils at 10/-, 20/-, 30/-, and up to £5 10s. each; my customers are delighted and are winning everywhere. They make the proudest ever carried to a contest. Prices only 1/-, 1/6, 2/-, 2/6, and a few toppers 3/- each. I have also a few old champions for sale at 20/- each. As an advertisement I am giving every customer this week one singing Linnet free. I want every fancier to hear my strain. Try my Book of Secrets, 6d. post free. I have a nice lot of extra giant cock Linnets to make winners at shows, 2/6 each; cock Siskins, 5/6; gem Redpolls, 2/6; giant Greenfinches, 2/-; all on approval; cash or deposit. Newcastle open show will be held on Oct. 23 in the Co-operative Hall, Benwell, writes Mr. J. W. Reed, sec.

Islington and Wood Green Inter-club Show will be held at headquarters, Walters Road, Holloway, Aug. 21, from 2 till 9. Mr. F. Laccohee will judge the cage birds.

Owing to unforeseen circumstances, writes Mr. J. Sneddon, Mr. Baxter, sec. of Cowdenbeath C.B.S., has resigned, but we are still to go on with our show, as Mr. Robertson, our late sec., has undertaken the work of secretary.

Madame Feist Madewell, in her lecture on the Crossbill, reported in our issue of Aug. 14, expressed her wish to know where to get fir cones for her bird, and Mr. W. C. Dicks, of Newcastle Emlyn, has kindly offered to send her a supply without charge.

A good attendance, writes Mr. S. Midgley, Hon. Sec., is desired at the meeting of the Bradford National Show Committee, to be held Aug. 25, at the Cinderella Rooms, Lee Street, Thornton Road, to consider the Lord Mayor's note re our next show.

Please note that we have altered the date of our open show to Oct. 30, writes Mr. V. G. F. Zimmerman, hon. sec. York C.B.S. We have secured the use of a large well-lighted room, and a good, hard-working committee has been appointed. Our prospects for the open show are splendid.

Besides 3rd prize at the Welsh National, the wing-marked Linnet-Canary belonging to Mr. G. Lawrence, of Coventry (not Lawrence, as printed), and whose portrait appeared on our front page last week, has won 1sts at Coventry and Oxford, 2nd at Leicester, and 3rd at the Horticultural Hall.

Those interested in the delightful hobby of foreign bird-keeping and exhibiting should write to the hon. sec. of the Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League, Mr. Allen Silver, F.Z.S., The Laurels, 7, Bampton Road, Forest Hill, London, S.E., for a copy of the rule book of the society. This little pamphlet, which has just been issued, contains the general rules and the show rules of the society, a list of the officials, and the names and addresses of members.

OBITUARY.

MR. C. MACROBBIE, PARTICK.

Fanciers in Scotland, as well as Yorkshire fanciers in England, writes Mr. J. F. Park, Sec. Partick C.B.C., will learn with deep regret of the death of Mr. George MacRobbie, of Partick, which occurred last week at Scotstown, to which place the family had recently removed in the hope that the fresh country air might improve his health, for he had been laid aside from business through illness for over two years. Of an ever cheerful and kindly disposition, even through his long illness, he was pleased to have his friends in the Fancy around him, and he never lost his interest in the birds, although he had disposed of his stock some time ago. The Yorkshire Canary was his favourite, and he was among the first to bring that variety into prominence in Scotland. He was a successful exhibitor for many years at all the principal shows. Since his illness his presence and help has been much missed by the members of the Partick Club, as well as the Y.C.C. of Scotland. He leaves a widow and two daughters, and our sympathy goes out to them in their sad bereavement.

MR. WALTER CONNELL, BELFAST.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. J. Stewart, that I have to inform the Fancy through CAGE BIRDS of the death, on Aug. 5, of Mr. Walter Connell, of Belfast, for many years the respected treasurer of the Belfast Norwich, Crest, and Y.C.C. The Norwich Plainhead was his particular fancy, and he was fairly successful at all our local shows. He won outright the Plainhead cup for best hen (three wins), and also captured the gold medal last year for best young cock. As a club member he spared neither time nor money to keep the club in a flourishing state. He was also a good supporter of the various shows around the town. He will be greatly missed, and the deepest sympathy of the Fancy is extended to his widow and family. He was well known to many English fanciers, being a native of Hull, to which town his remains were removed for interment on Aug. 6, a large cortege following them to the boat. A beautiful wreath was sent by the club as a mark of respect, and a vote of condolence was passed to the widow and family in their sad bereavement.

The Nesting of the Hawfinch.

In "Nature Notes" in "The Scotsman," W.W.M. writes of a fledgling Hawfinch which was found injured in a public road near Jedburgh, Roxburghshire, and says: "So far as I am aware, there is no record of the Hawfinch having previously nested in Roxburghshire." Cases have been recorded of the breeding of the Hawfinch in the neighbouring county of Dumfries, in East Lothian, and East Fife, but we also think there is no previous record for Roxburghshire.

The Cuckoo and the Wagtails.

"About June 10," writes Mrs. Norman, Steyning, "we heard a Cuckoo on our lawn at daybreak, very near the house, two mornings in succession. A few days after we noticed two little Water Wagtails very busy indeed, going in and out of a nest on the house-side of an old arch covered with ivy, and on looking in we found a young Cuckoo. The fosterparents continued to feed it until it grew a very fine bird, also very saucy. About three weeks after it flew away, and with it the Wagtails. The nest is still to be seen."

Tea Free for Exhibitors.

Dr. Craig, the hon. treas. of the Sheffield O.S., has offered to disburse the expenses of a ham and egg tea for all exhibitors at the next feather show of the society.

Our Front Page Drawings.

A Sixteen Years Old Greenfinch Dead.

A correspondent to the "Manchester City News" tells of the death on July 14 last of a Greenfinch which had been kept in captivity since the commencement of the Boer war (in 1899).

How "Cage Birds" Helps.

In sending for a copy of House's Canary Manual, the Rev. C. R. Appleton writes: "May I take this opportunity of saying how very helpful I find your grand paper, CAGE BIRDS. This is my first season as a Canary fancier, and I have succeeded in breeding eight young birds from one pair of Rollers, which is fairly good for a novice, I think. My success is due to the advice I have got from reading CAGE BIRDS and I wish your journal every success."

Why the Blackbird is Black.

How the Blackbird came by his inky cloak is accounted for by a classical legend. Having learnt of the immense riches which lay concealed in the depths of the earth he was on his way to ask permission of the Prince of Riches to bring some away with him. Passing through a cave of gold he was tempted to steal a beakful, when a demon appeared in fire and smoke. The smoke enveloped the bird, leaving an indelible stain, and on his beak he still bears the trace of his ill-gotten gain.—"Yorkshire Post."

The Destructive Sparrow.

At a low estimate of two-thirds of a pint of corn per annum for each bird, which is far below that given by several investigators, says the London "Standard," we find that 100 Sparrows consume each year something over a bushel of corn between them. A million Sparrows—and there are many millions in this country—consume therefore in the year 10,000 bushels of corn, and, taking wheat at its present price of about 50s., this means that every million Sparrows are wasting the nation's food at the present time to the tune of £3,125 per annum!

Mr. R. Downing, of Middlesbrough, writes as follows: "I noticed on the front page of the May 29 issue of CAGE BIRDS a picture of two Hybrids bred by Mr. Parlett, and entitled: 'Two Successful Hybrids.' I was induced by reading the inscription recording their several wins to try to breed Canary-Bullfinch Hybrids, and I am pleased to say that I have been successful at the first attempt. My birds were hatched on August 4 from a Yorkshire cock and a Bullfinch hen, and seem to be healthy youngsters. I might here state that we have been particularly successful this year with Linnet Mules. We have had 25 from one cock Linnet."

Hawfinches and Peas.

Gardeners are again complaining that their peas are being stolen by the Hawfinch, but they seldom manage to get in sight of the culprit, says the "Yorkshire Observer," for of all British perching birds the Hawfinch is the most unobtrusive. At this time of the year a brood of Hawfinches, with their parents, will take up a position in some suburban area and make foraging forays in the gardens soon after sunrise. It is no joke to have these unbidden guests in a garden among the growing peas. When the pea-pods are well filled a Hawfinch can easily split them open with its powerful beak and extract all the contents. They have been known to split open scores, if not hundreds, of pods in the course of a busy morning or two.

A Rare Visitor.

Large numbers of the rare Alpine Swift have been recently seen near the Kentish coast-line. These birds may be readily picked out from the common Swifts by their white throats and stomachs, and by the fact that they are considerably larger. This Swift was first noticed in Britain in 1829, when a specimen was shot off the coast of Ireland. Since then a score or two of examples have been made known by observers in these islands, but none, I believe, so far north as Scotland. The Alpine Swift nests freely in mountainous parts of the Continent, and is well known in Switzerland, Savoy, the Vosges, the Jura, Burgundy, and other localities. In winter it migrates to Africa, and Asia as far east as India. One wonders if these numbers of Alpine Swifts—as many as a hundred have been seen in Kent in one day recently—have been driven from their usual continental haunts by the incessant firing of heavy guns!—"Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News."

Some Notable Additions to Aviculture.

Rare Birds from India and E. Africa.

ALL those who know Mr. E. W. Harper will be glad to hear that he is again in London, and has once more brought to England birds that are new to the London Zoo. Among those landed safely were: Himalayan Red Sunbirds, Purple Sunbirds, Green Fruit Pigeons, Giant Parrot, Golden Oriole, Lanceolated Jay, Coral-billed Bulbul, Himalayan Streaked Laughing Thrush, Yellow-throated Sparrows, Finch-Larks, Pied Bush-Chats, See-See Partridge, Himalayan Green-backed Tit, Himalayan Black and White Tit. The species new to the London Zoo were a small brownish Babbler, not yet identified, Green Iora, Rufous-backed Shrike, and a Rosy Minivet. He also brought some Brown-headed Firefinches from British East Africa.

The Iora, of which we believe there are three species, is particularly interesting; it belongs to a group of birds in the Bulbul Family. This species in colouration resembles our Willow Wren, but in demeanour it is not unlike birds of the Fruit-sucker type, to which group it is scientifically related. Those who know anything of "E. H. A." who wrote that delightful little book, "The Tribes on My Frontier," will remember that he refers to the Common Iora (A. tiphia) not the Green species, in this way: "A little bird, like a Tomtit, in black and yellow, followed by its mate in green and yellow; can be nothing else than the Iora."

The Cinnamon Canary.

"The Bird of Royal Blood."

A Paper read at the meeting of the Western Counties O.S., Plymouth, June 15th, by Mr. A. B. Brown, Plymouth.

It may occur that our Cinnamons are getting dull in colour, so our thoughts naturally go to the beautiful orange plumage of the Norwich Plainhead. It is no use thinking about the Norwich cock for the purpose of improving colour, as we know the cross would simply mean breeding greens and variegated birds, so we turn our attention to the use of the Norwich hen.

The principle of breeding Cinnamons of colour is the same as employed for breeding Norwich of colour, with this difference: whilst the Norwich breeder uses the green, and gradually works towards the clear, the Cinnamon breeder makes use of the clear bright yellow of the Norwich, and works his Cinnamon stock on to the yellow, to the green, and so on to the bright coppery tint of the Cinnamon show bird. With this cross, colour, size and type may be obtained sufficient to last many years without further trouble.

The Importance of the Male Bird.

The first care, in entering on experiments of this kind, is with the Cinnamon cock to be used. He must be a pure self Cinnamon, bred from pure self Cinnamons which themselves were from self Cinnamons. Let him be the brightest-coloured yellow you have got, with a short beak, nice wide entrance, big round head, full eye, full neck and chest, and size well maintained. If you can get a big bird with all these points so much the better, but whatever may be at your service, it is well to remember, no good use is served by experiment without progress.

The next thing is the choice of a hen. If the Cinnamon stock sports white feathers, the green hen is the best medium, as with the green there is less risk of the Cinnamon progeny throwing light throats, thighs, or vents, but there is not the same bright transparency got by the use of the green as is obtained by the brighter colour of the yellow. In any case, I should use the brightest yellow hen possible, and as big in head properties as can be got, not forgetting size and type; she must also be short in wings and tail. A two-year-old hen is the best, as a better idea of the length in future stock is formed from seeing the prospective parents at their maturity, and a stronger strain more likely to result from such birds.

It must be remembered that the future stock depends on the judgment displayed, and not only will colour be affected, but type and size. Another great thing to remember is that double-yellowing is bound to affect the size of the head, making it appear narrow in the skull; also it is liable to make the progeny run small in the waist.

How to Use the Young Hens.

From this cross some of the young may be self Cinnamons of great purity of colour, and these will all be hens, if the Norwich hen was non-Cinnamon bred. It is the young hens we want; choose only such as come up to the standard expected, and mate them back to pure self Cinnamons which are known to be pure Cinnamon bred for two generations; from this later cross, show birds and stock birds of the finest quality will be the result.

The cocks from the first cross will be green Cinnamons; they are not of much use for Cinnamon breeding, but are very useful to the Norwich breeder whose stock is short of colour and poor in quality, as it will be found the Cinnamon green is full of both colour and quality. The greens of the second Cinnamon cross—if any—should not be disposed of before testing, as many of the brightest-coloured greens carry 75 per cent. of Cinnamon blood, or more, and will breed exceptional coloured Cinnamons when paired back to good Cinnamons.

Sometimes it is not a case of losing colour which makes the necessity for an outside cross, it may be weakness in head, neck, and general loss in size and type. Whatever the cause, the remedy is always at hand—simply the adopting of the aforementioned process, substituting either buff cock for yellow cock, or buff hen for yellow hen.

For loss in head property, use a buff Cinnamon cock and yellow Norwich hen of the desired proportions, or a yellow cock with buff hen. I prefer pairing a buff cock to a yellow variegated hen, and have used the buff Cinnamon cock with a buff variegated Norwich hen. In the latter case good colour was got, and perfect type with size.

Some extraordinary results are obtained from the breeding of Cinnamons, and many lessons learnt thereby. In speaking of the self-coloured Cinnamon cock we generally accept it as meaning the pure-bred Cinnamon; this is not always the case. I have bred Norwich Cinnamon even-marks from a yellow self Cinnamon cock and a buff heavily Cinnamon-marked hen known to be bred from a buff Cinnamon cock of great purity. The next year I paired the same marked hen to another self Cinnamon yellow cock, known to be pure Cinnamon bred for two generations. The result was pleasing—five self Cinnamons, cocks and hens, and one Cinnamon marked yellow cock. From this it will be seen that insufficient Cinnamon blood was the cause of the disappointing results got from the first self Cinnamon yellow cock.

Further Interesting Experiments.

In the case of another experiment with a self Cinnamon yellow cock, I mated it with a self green Cinnamon bred buff hen, known to possess 75 per cent. of Cinnamon blood. Result, all high-coloured greens, yellow and buff cocks, which must have had nearly the maximum amount of Cinnamon blood in them. On the other hand, I got good results from a foul Cinnamon buff green cock known to have only 50 per cent. of Cinnamon blood in him.

I paired him to a self Cinnamon yellow hen known to be pure-bred for three generations, and from this pair I had one bright-coloured self Cinnamon yellow cock, one self Cinnamon yellow hen of exceptional quality, and one foul yellow Cinnamon green hen, also of exceptional colour and quality. The second nest was rather a surprise, three buff green hens, and one buff green cock.

The next year I mated this foul buff Cinnamon

SOME REMINISCENCES OF AN OLD FANCIER.

By E. HURDLEY (Madeley).

I started in the bird line as hundreds of boys do, that is, by birds' nesting; and I am sorry to say some of these rambles used to take place when my parents thought me at church or Sunday school. My pal, who is now a captain in the merchant service, was in a position to put up some good sport; his grandfather being a gamekeeper, and our "enemy," it was as well to know his whereabouts, as he usually carried a dog-whip in his pocket, and it was not always the dogs who received all the punishment from this, for he invariably used it if he found any boys on the sacred preserves.

The first exciting trip that I remember was enjoyed one summer's evening about August; I believe it was after taking a wasps' nest to get the grubs for birds, etc. I was standing under an old cherry tree watching for other wasps to carry their building material to their nests, this being the way we used to trace them, when I heard a noise as if a lot of mice were squeaking. We hunted high and low, but could not detect whence the noise came. In a short time we were joined by some more of our chums who had been having a look at any birds or eggs that were to be found.

A Bag of 108 Bats.

The noise still continued, and at last one decided to climb and explore the tree. He had not far to climb before he came to a hollow place in the tree; he pushed his hand in the hole, and this was no sooner done than he shouted out, and withdrew his hand with something hanging to his fingers, which we found to be a bat. He tried again and again, until we had all caps and handkerchiefs full, not to say anything about our pockets; and when we counted up we had 108 bats in all. Eight of this number escaped. The others we examined, and showed to our friends, and then took them to the side of the River Severn, where we liberated them one by one.

My next adventure, of any note was the finding a young Cuckoo. This came about while we were watching a pair of Pied Wagtails taking food, which I knew was for young somewhere. I followed them by stages, having to wait for the birds to go several times in search of food before being able to locate their home, which I found in a heap mon green to another yellow hen of pure Cinnamon breed. I only got one nest from this pair, and again the result was a mixture. There were six young—one foul tailed Cinnamon buff cock, one self Cinnamon yellow hen, two self green buff cocks, one self green buff hen, and one self green yellow hen.

Results Explained.

Although the Cinnamon blood gives such unexpected results, it is easier to understand it when compared the opposite way to the working of the Norwich. For instance, a variegated or marked yellow Norwich cock paired to a variegated or marked Norwich hen will throw greens, variegated, heavily marked, ticked, and clears, all depending on how much green blood the parents have in them. The same applies to the Cinnamon, only, instead of the amount of dark or green blood being responsible for the greens, and fouls, or variegated Cinnamons, it is the excess of rich warm Norwich blood which these birds possess, there not being a full percentage of the Cinnamon blood in the parents to impregnate the young as Cinnamons. This also explains why so many foul-feathered Cinnamons are so rich in colour, and also why, in the case of these foul Cinnamon cocks, such poor results are got when they are paired to Cinnamon hens possessing a low percentage of Cinnamon blood.

I do not think the introduction of either the Crest-bred or the Lancashire Plainhead an improvement to the Cinnamon Norwich type, but whatever variety is used to gain size, it is certain the Norwich Plainhead is the only bird possessing the necessary colour and type; and in that case, it is simply a waste of time to use any other, especially as there are many present-day Norwich hens larger than either the Crest-bred or the Cinnamon, and quite the equal of the Lancashire, and their superior in colour, which we must make use of to dilute the dark blood of the Cinnamon, lifting it up from its dullness to a bright golden radiance, and making it a creature of beauty to gladden the eye of the judge when it is placed on the exhibition bench, and even more so its breeder when he sees the outcome of his own patient enterprise marked "First and special."

DURING the fall came many birds on their way to warmer lands, and a few stayed with us. The foremost of those to stay and feed among the oaks was that watchful sentry for all birds, the Blue Jay (not the same as at home). Ever chatting and scolding, as he played with the acorns, his shrill alarm sounded forth loud and clear as soon as one came his way. He was a beauty, modelled as if in polished steel; his coat reflected the sunlight always.

The Dainty Blue Bird.

Then came the Blue Bird, my favourite. He was a beauty, which a judge dare hardly pass, in his splendid blue coat sparkling in the sun. He was of the shape and style of a stoutish Jaunt Border (perhaps this explains the liking), and always in the pink. Lastly came the "Tow Hee"; he was of the Bullie kind, a good big one (British), with the same ruddy breast, and black head. He loved and had many of a certain white berry which grew in abundance, and he was not afraid; one could easily get within ten feet or so of him. There were many of the Wren species, and during the summer dainty Waxbills frequented a pile of timber, there were dozens of them in it. There was also a so-called Canary, much like a Siskin, bred on the estate.

Finishing work again, a short move to Vancouver, and I was in a city again, and the most I saw of birds were roast wild Mallard on the table, done to a turn by my better-half. Out on the Gulf of Georgia I saw Duck of the Buller Ball, Pin Tail, Teal, Widgeon, and Mallard kinds, also thousands of Brent Geese and a good many Snipe and a species of Water Hen.

Pineapple in Excelsis.

Then once more came orders "Westward Ho," and we faced the mighty Pacific. Off Cape Flattery he gave us a mighty shaking which laid us low, but soon we were all on deck and enjoying it. Honolulu, that "Pearl of the Pacific," was called at, but only for four hours; we scarcely had time to swallow an ice cream to cool our fevered throats, but we made sure of some pineapple. You never know what pineapple is until you have been sick on ship's food for over a week, then watch the sunrise on deck between five and six, and have a big slice of pineapple before you start, let me warn you your sleeves must be over your elbows, and you must have left etiquette down below. When the juice runs down your arms and off your chin end, you will say life is worth living, and ever more will you wish for a return trip from anywhere via Honolulu. Here also the natives were experts at swimming and diving for silver, which we threw over; of course the more the better they like it.

Then it was over "the Line," and the only thing to do was to keep cool, a mighty job that beat the most of us. We arrived at Auckland at night, and in "the wee sma' hours ayont the twal" my wife and I strolled up the main street and we found it a beautiful place. But the boat sailed early, so we saw no more of it. Out on the Tasman Sea old Neptune took his last toll of us, and sent a rolling sea astern that gave some of us fits and sent a "Sea Pigeon" aboard, tired out so much that it landed on the rail, and a seaman put his hand on it. We fed it, and it rested all day, and as evening drew near it flew away to renew its fight with Nature. Landing in Sydney we saw many new and strange things, but these will keep.

other in some nettles close to a White-throat's (empty) nest, but whether this one had been reared by Whitethroats I am unable to say, and as I am speaking of 32 or 33 years ago. I had no readers of CAGE BIRDS to go to for information as to whether this would be likely or not. Since then, however, I have read arguments as to the possibility of the Cuckoo's laying its egg on the ground and picking it up with its beak and putting it in the nest of the birds which it knows will bring up the young Cuckoo. This I believe to be the case, as I am certain that in the above-mentioned case it was impossible for the Cuckoo to have entered through the hole that led to the Wagtail's nest and lay the egg in the usual manner.

I often have a peep into a Wagtail's nest now if I get a chance, to see if I can meet with another Cuckoo, but I have not found another. I saw a Pied Wagtail, however, feeding one for many mornings this last summer on the fence of the London and N.W.R. by the side of the line when on my way to work at 4 a.m. (a 6-mile walk before 6 o'clock on a summer morning makes one glad to be alive, as then the birds are busy singing, building, feeding their young, etc.).

Buff British Birds and Hybrid Breeding.

SIR,—I should be pleased if, for the benefit of myself and others who are in doubt, you would allow me a small space in which to ask about a theory I have heard propounded on the breeding of Hybrids between a British Bird and a non-Canary. In the first place I have heard that it is not possible to breed a yellow Mule with a buff British Bird mated to a yellow hen Canary. On the other hand, another experienced fancier informs me that by using a buff British cock I am following the correct method for obtaining size in the Hybrids. Which is the correct theory? I may say that I have this season been successful in breeding Canary Mules from a buff British mated to a double yellow Norwich hen, and my fancier friends who have seen the young birds maintain that they are unmistakably yellow. Would the double yellow in the hen counteract the buffing in the British Bird? I should be pleased if some of our experienced Mule breeders could give us a lead.

INTERESTED.

Precocious Youngsters.

SIR,—I happened to be at a Linnet singing contest at Leigh a fortnight ago, and saw and heard a young Mule at nine weeks, belonging to Mr. Dick Statlam. It was in the window, and was singing at a Linnet with its wings down in vigour. I would like to know if any breeder of Mules has ever experienced such a thing. I have never seen anything like it in my life, though I have been a birdy man for over twenty years, mostly in Linnets and Mules. The owner's brother, Mr. T. Statlam, had the best Mule I ever heard, and it lived to be fourteen years old. It was mentioned in CAGE BIRDS when it died, and was known all over Lancashire and Yorkshire. The young bird I have mentioned can be seen and heard at any time at the Globe Inn, where the Leigh Linnet Club is held.

J. W. JONES.

SIR,—As promised, I now give my style of breeding and feeding. I pair my birds about the middle of March. I am not particular about keeping them separately, so long as they do not fight. I give them a small quantity of egg and bread mixed, and three or four leaves of dandelion daily, and leave them to it until I see them building. Then I remove the dandelion altogether, and do not use it any more throughout the season. When the first egg is laid I remove it and stop the egg food; I take the first three eggs away, and return them on the fourth night. I take the cock away, give him three days' rest, and then put him with another hen. I take the ordinary seed away from the hen and give her plain canary, because my opinion is, the hen relishes her food when she finishes sitting better than when her ordinary food is left with her all the time. I never touch her eggs till the twelfth day, then I test them; any clears I find I take away, and give her the good ones back again. I offer the hen a bath, and if she will not bathe, I give her eggs a soaking for about a minute in water that I can bear my little finger in. I give her egg food, and her ordinary seed, on the twelfth day. On the thirteenth day I give her just the yolk of egg; she will generally come off the nest, and I take a glance, and if any young are out I leave her to it. I do not interfere with her any more. I keep the yolk of egg going for three days, and I then begin to add bread to it. At five days I begin to give the green food, and keep it going all the time. I give them chickweed and no other, as I think it is the mildest of all green foods. Some people say, don't give green food till they are out of the nest, but if you break them into the green food when they are young they will not feel the effect later. At ten days I give a quarter-spoonful of crushed hemp; I think this helps to build them up. When about eighteen days old the young make a shape to leave the nest, and I put the cock back with the hen, if I can spare him. I do not put the young in a nursery cage; I leave them in the cage for the cock to feed, and until the hen has been sitting ten days. Then I think they can shift for themselves, and I put them into a 6ft. flight cage and give them egg food and ordinary seed. As soon as I find any singing I cage them off separately. I never crush any seed except enough hemp to last them for two days. I always use new-laid egg, and bread. If I can get home-made bread, all the better. My egg food is made at five o'clock every morning, and contains one egg, three or four times the amount of bread; a pinch of salt, one spoonful of fine sugar, and a spoonful of maw seed; that does them all day. What is left over is thrown away and fresh is made for the next day.

To Exterminate Lice in Canaries.

SIR,—Following is a perfect cure for grey-lice on birds. Boil two handfuls of fresh bay-leaves in a quart of water for two hours, and when nearly cold add one pennyworth of oil of lavender. Use lightly, and apply to underparts of bird's plumage with a small brush (avoiding the eyes). This kills the lice instantly if properly done, also the nits. The nest and cage should be dusted with powdered camphor and sulphur (mixed), previous to returning the patient. If cage is washed with the fluid on the outside, and then dried, the vermin should be "non-est."

[The prize for the best letter on "How to Exterminate Lice in Canaries" is awarded to Mr. O. C. Smith, 73, Audley Street, Reading, for his letter published in our issue of July 24.]

How to Breed Winning Hybrids.

SIR,—In an otherwise sane article on the Greenfinch, by "H.B." in the "Scottish Field," the writer makes an amazing statement. Notwithstanding the reporting from time to time of exceptions which go to prove the rule, some of which, may I add, are not so indubitably authenticated as to be without suspicion of mistake, it has always been understood that hybrids between distinctly different species are infertile. Of course, we know that hybrids between different kinds of Ducks, of Pheasants, etc., are frequently fertile, but when the parents are really of different natural species, not varieties, fertile hybrids, if they are ever produced at all, are certainly very infrequent. Yet "H.B." in the article referred to says:—"Larks, Thrushes, and Greenfinches on toast are part of the regular menu of some foreign restaurants in London. A better use for Greenfinches is to pair them with degenerate Canaries, just as Goldfinches and Siskins are used for pairing. The first result of the Greenfinch-Canary is, likely enough, unremunerative and ugly Mules; but by pairing these with other Canaries certain taints are said to be removed, and the stamina improved."

What do our enthusiastic hybrid breeders say to the statement that the first-cross between a Greenfinch and a Canary is an unremunerative and ugly Mule? And what does any hybrid breeder say to the allegation that such Mules are paired again with Canaries either for the removal of "certain taints," the improving of the stamina, or for any other purpose?

HYBRID BREEDER.

[We could, of course, fill our columns easily if we were to note all the extraordinary ideas about birds and bird-keeping which appear in the lay papers, but the above is such a fine example that we think it worthy of record.—ED. CAGE BIRDS.]

"Tortured Prisoners."

An Extraordinary Letter by the Hon. Sec. of the National Equine Defence League.

SIR,—In the course of a letter which would appear to have been sent broadcast to the press, for it has been published either in part or as a whole in several London and provincial papers, Mr. F. A. Cox makes some statements which, though they expose his lack of knowledge of the subject about which he writes, are calculated to be taken at their face value by those who are equally uninformed. He says:

"Thousands of innocent wild birds, practically for six months in every year, are allowed by a benign Legislature to be meanly trapped and condemned, not only to an existence the negation of every instinct of their nature, but positively of deliberate and calculated cruelty. In the rural districts around large towns it is almost impossible to go for a walk—especially on Sunday mornings—without seeing ruffians furtively lurking behind and about hedges, engaged in the first steps of this tragedy. Its final stage also may be seen as companions loosely and carelessly dangle little oblong bundles, each 6 inches by 4, cages containing a wild song bird. These birds are often kept in perpetual darkness, in order that they may trill the better at singing matches. Consider, it is accepted and tolerated that an inoffending bird whose song may delight us all in our rambles, may be snared by any particular person who chooses to inflict the wrong on both it and ourselves, and, maybe, injured for the remainder of its sacrificed existence in darkness; never to see a green field or the sunlight indeed, never to see again, except the glare of a bar-shop bar and the faces of the men who regard it as a medium for providing them with extra drinks. . . . These birds are never expected nor allowed, to sing except in the very congenial parlours of beer-shops. How long is this infamy to continue? I believe a rescript from the Home Secretary would stop it at once. The law prohibits gambling in public-houses, and so safeguards the interests of the unthinking human fool. Cannot it be made to prohibit the immolation of thousands of helpless, innocent, and delightful songsters?"

One would think that such hysterics would mislead no one, but the mischief is that they do mislead others who are no better informed than those who disseminate them. In proof of this we have only to refer to a further letter by the celebrated novelist, Jerome K. Jerome, written in support of the effusion of Mr. Cox. Mr. Cox has evidently been told that in some districts what are called "singing contests" are held in public houses. Whether he knows, or does not know, that the birds which sing at these contests are almost invariably Linnets, in a very few cases Skylarks, occasionally Chaffinches, but never Thrushes or any other British bird, he classes them all as "birds" in his letter, and Mr. Jerome reads "birds" as meaning Skylarks and Thrushes, for he says "the thought of brave little Thrushes condemned to beat out their gallant hearts, to pour forth their song of courage for the pleasure and profit of a pack of ruffians maddens me."

I hope you will allow me space to say that the Linnets used by working men as singers at these contests are cherished by their owners as pet birds. They are kept at the highest possible standard of health or they would never sing as these Linnets sing. They live a long and happy life in their cages, many of them retaining all their vigour until they die of sheer old age. A Skylark in a cage will live for any period up to twenty-two years—from ten to twenty years being quite a common age—and the Thrush who, according to Mr. Jerome, is engaged in beating out its gallant heart, gets on so well at the avocation that his life in a cage is anything from fifteen to twenty years. These dry facts are surely a sufficient answer to the allegation that birds suffer when kept properly in captivity. As for the classification of bird owners as "packs of ruffians," this is on a par with the other absurdities. The man who owns and cherishes a singing Linnet, Chaffinch, or Skylark is generally a better man all round than his fellow worker who has no such hobby. The pity is that people who would never venture without proper justification to take up a position of authority upon any other subject hesitate never a moment where bird-keeping is concerned, and when one gives a lead others follow like a flock of sheep.

BIRD-KEEPER.

A Forgiving Starling.

SIR,—The following incident may not be an argument, either for or against the intelligence versus instinct discussion which is being so ably carried on in your columns, but to those who study the habits of their pets, it may be interesting. At the same time I think that a kind captivity would tend to increase any intelligence that a bird had rather than deaden it.

In my small collection I have three Soft-bills, a Mexican Thrush, and two Starlings; all cocks, caged separately, and as tame as cats. They get a bath regularly outside their cages only, not at the same time, as "Jimmy" (the Thrush) holds strong views on the subject of his own importance, and allows no bird near his bath or his cage. The Starlings get many a hard peck if they dare alight upon his cage front while flying round after their bath. One of the Starlings he specially objects to, and thereby hangs the point of my story.

"Jimmy" loves his bath, but hates returning to his cage. One day lately he simply would not go into it of his own accord, and got very hungry in consequence as the day wore on. The food and water vessels of all my cages are covered, and my birds must go inside to get anything to eat or drink, for they cannot steal anything from their neighbours, as "Jimmy" found to his disgust. Afternoon came, and "Jimmy" at last humbled himself enough to sit on that particular Starling's cage, and say "I'm sorry," at least I suppose that's what he said. Apparently the Starling accepted the apology for past bullying, as he went down to his food tin, filled his beak, and by stretching up from the top perch, and "Jimmy," stretching down, the latter got fed through the wires! This was done several times, to our delight and surprise.

Both birds being cocks, and in the moult, one cannot credit a sexual instinct with this unlooked for kindness, and it seemed to me to be worth telling. In conclusion, I may say the Starling got an extra supply of juicy currants (the favourite tit-bit of my Softbills) as a reward, while "Jimmy" was ignominiously caught in a towel and "con-fined to barracks."

DAN McARTHUR.

The Foreign Bird Exhibits in 1914.

By ALLEN SILVER, F.Z.S.

THE disturbed state of the country prevented exhibitions from coming up to their usual excellence in many cases, particularly in the foreign section, chiefly because practically no consignments of note came into the dealers' hands. Catalogues of country shows do not point to the fact that anything of great rarity appeared in such places. Watford seems to have been fortunate in getting very fair support, and birds of pretty high quality, but the show of the year was that held at the Horticultural Hall in November.

Although for many reasons there were not quite so many birds sent as the year before, the entry was a large one, and the quality and rarity as good. In fact, the first appearance of Humming Birds on the show bench, in the shape of two delightful species shown by Mr. Alfred Ezra, F.Z.S., was in itself a feature sufficient to cause a sensation. The Foreign Bird Exhibitors' League provided a large classification again, so that birds belonging to many groups, both rare and common, competed on pretty reasonable grounds.

Among the new species to appear were birds such as Hahn's Macaw, Short-tailed Parrot, Brown-eared Conures, Aztec Conure, Speckled Conure, Crimson-winged Whydah, Japanese Hawfinch (E. personata), Red-headed Bullfinches, Humming Birds (2) (Garnet-throated Carib and Ricordi's Hummer), Greater Double-collared Sunbird, Bullock's, Wagler's, and Violaceous Hangnests, Chinese Starlings, Blue-headed Tanager, Blue and White Flycatchers, Black-gorgeted Laughing Thrushes, Wedge-tailed Glossy Starling, Tawny Thrush, and some interesting Hybrids, such as those between Red-eared and Red-vented Bulbul, Greenfinch and Himalayan Siskin, Spicfinch and Bibfinch, Magpie Mannikin, and Bengalee, and so forth. The names of the owners and exhibitors of these birds have already been published in CAGE BIRDS as winners of the F.B.E.L. diplomas.

Among new exhibitors, Dr. L. Lovell-Keays came to the fore with some very excellent birds, put down in much better order than is usually the case in first attempts. Mr. W. Shore Baily exhibited several interesting hybrids bred by himself, and the usual well-known names of Miss Clare, Misses Smyth, Messrs. Frostick, Ezra, Howe, Shipton, Buckingham, Rev. Raynor, Thynne, Frost, Maxwell, Wade, the Hon. Mrs. McLaren Morrison, Hon. Mrs. Bourke, Lady Kathleen Pilkington, Miss Bousfield, Messrs. Simpson, Row, Longden, Yealland, Madam Feist Madewell, Dewhurst, etc., were conspicuous throughout the show. As far as I remember I sent 57 entries myself. Another feature of this exhibition was the appearance of Mr. R. J. Watts as a judge. He undertook the classes of birds belonging to species commonly imported, and exhibitors had the satisfaction of knowing that the birds were judged by one who had intimate knowledge of the "donkey work" attached to the preparation and selection of birds of the kind.

Allowing for the war, one could not grumble at the quality and number of the exhibits benched during the season, and there is every reason to believe that there is a future in store for foreign bird exhibiting. It will, I am afraid, never be possible to get a really large show outside London, because these birds cannot be subjected to exactly the same treatment as Canaries and well-steadied British seedeaters and Finch Hybrids. Yet under conditions where birds can be properly packed and railed, there is not the risk attached to sending properly steadied birds about that is generally believed. The fact that many fairly delicate birds have been exhibited season after season, is sufficient proof of this. In fact, exhibitors' birds that have been to several shows during a season have often outlived birds that have never been shifted at all.

Club Reports.

EASTLEIGH C.B.S.

Owing to the difficulty of getting all our members together to discuss the schedule of our annual show, proposed for Nov. 23, 25, I have forwarded a copy of proposed schedule to all members for perusal, and I hope this will meet with approval. Members wishing to propose any alteration in same and being unable to attend meeting, should send proposals not later than Aug. 22, for meeting on Aug. 23. It is hoped that all members available will attend this meeting.—J. Alderslade, Sec.

LOCHGELLY C.B.S.

Meeting, Aug. 7. Delegates gave report of Fife League meeting. Schedule was gone over and classification received consideration. In Norwich we have added two each, Green and Cinnamon classes, and a Yellowhammer class to British. We hope the fancy will appreciate this step, and that some of the champions may be on view in these particular sections. Membership (open) has been extended to Aug. 31. Those desirous of joining should do so now.—R. Muir, Sec., Anderson's Cottages, Station Rd.

PORTH AND RHONDDA VALLEY C.B.S.

General meeting, Porth Hotel, Aug. 11. Decided to have a show in December. It was not decided whether it be radius or open show. I hope all members will turn up at next meeting to draw up classification, so as to avoid alteration afterwards. I appeal to members who do not attend any meetings to muster up a little, as it does not give any encouragement to those who attend and do all the work. Try next time.—J. H. Bevan, Sec.

SHEFFIELD COMBINED SHOW COMMITTEE.

Meeting, held July 21, and well represented by all delegates; Mr. Jones presided. The classification was verified by the various delegates. The team trophy to be a rose bowl, to become the property of society that wins it. Rotherham Soc. promised 10s. towards same. Will delegates come with rules for the trophy competition next meeting. Specials were generously promised, £12s. 6d. being quickly procured. Next meeting, Sept. 1st. All delegates are earnestly requested to attend as a great quantity of business is on hand.—C. Tomlinson, Press Corres.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, Headquarters, July 11, Mr. T. Ridal, chair. The principal business was a lecture on colour-feeding by Mr. T. Ridal, who thoroughly explained his method, also a method by which the colour-food could be made without eggs. A letter was read from Sapper A. Simpson, one of our members, who had been severely wounded at the Dardanelles, and it was decided that a whip-round be taken and some cigarettes be sent him. Table show.—Nov. Yell. Yorks.: 1, 3, Fretwell; 2, Bagshaw. Buff: 1, 2, Bagshaw; 3, Fretwell. Mkd.: 1, 3, Fretwell; 2, Bagshaw. Nor. Yell.: 1, Everard; 2, 3, Gears. Buff: 1, 2, 3, Gears. Mkd.: 1, Goodison; 2, 3, Everard.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKS C.C.

Meeting and table show, Aug. 11; Mr. Crawhall presided over a good attendance. Messrs. R. Studholme and Wm. Dinning were elected members. Decided to hold a members' show, as in previous year, date, etc., to be decided at next meeting, Aug. 16. The names of several prominent Yorkshire exhibitors were submitted to act as judge, and sec., was instructed to write for terms to those selected. Table show awards: Champ. Cl.: 1, 2, Tindale; 3, 4, Crawhall. Marks: 1, 2, Crawhall; 3, Tindale; Nov. Cl.: 1, 3, vhe, he Gregory; 2, 4, Fullerton; e, Leach. Marks: 1, Havis; 2, Gregory; 3, 4, Leach. Mr. F. Johnson judged and gave every satisfaction.—R. Tindale, Hon. Sec.

GODNOR PARK AND EASTWOOD C.B.S.

Meeting, Aug. 14, Three Tuns, Eastwood, with a splendid attendance, the business being election of officers for the coming season and fixing date for open show. Decided to hold our annual open show as usual on Nov. 20. Business was got through in fine style, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The society is in a flourishing condition, with a good number of members and a nice balance in hand. The society is open to receive new members, the sub. being 2/6. Next meeting Sept. 11, at Three Tuns, Eastwood, at 7, when fanciers will receive a hearty welcome. The president, Mr. J. Taylor, has promised to provide another silver challenge cup to replace the one won outright by Mr. J. Adnitt last year.—Smith and Lees, Secs.

GLASGOW AND WESTERN COUNTIES CLUB.

Meetings, Headquarters, Aug. 7 and 14; Mr. Peter Pettigrew presided over a good attendance. Mr. Wm. Brown, Cambuslang, was admitted a member. Specials won at young bird show were paid over to winners present. Classification was gone into of annual show, Jan. 22, and many new classes were added. Decided to have an all day ramble on Trades' Holiday, Aug. 25, to Strathaven, train leaving Central Station at 9.35 a.m.; meet at corner of Hope and Gordon Streets at 9.20. It is expected that quite a number will leave by the 5.55 a.m. train to enable them to do some bird-watching previous to the arrival of the second contingent. Business being over, Mr. Pettigrew submitted a large selection of wild plants and seeds, and briefly described their uses and abuses, and many good wrinkles were gathered by the younger members on moulting the various Finches. Next meeting, Sept. 4, at 7.—J. H. Adam, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting, Headquarters, July 26, Mr. H. Norman, chair, and a fair number present. Decided to limit the number of patronage to six, and the voting resulted as follows: Plymouth, Oct. 10-11; Cheltenham, Nov. 3 and 4; Chester, Nov. 13; Redhill, Nov. 24; L.C.B.A., Dec. 10-13; Llanelly, Jan. 11. The question of specials was left over to the August meeting, and although we do not think it advisable to offer such a large list of specials as in other years, our list will compare favourably with that of any other specialist club. The specials fund is now open, and among those who have subscribed are Messrs. Pratt, Madagan, Humphries, Last, Newick, and Burton Bros. I shall be glad to hear from any other member who wishes to send a special along. To save expense there will be no manuals issued this year, so members should watch this column closely for club happenings. I have a few of last year's manuals, and I shall be pleased to send to any member requiring one. Members should send in their subs. at once, or it will be too late to compete for the specials offered. Next meeting, Headquarters, Aug. 23.—Geo. Burton, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE C.B.S.

General meeting, Aug. 5, Mr. W. Kople chair. Mr. M. Nattrass, Bishop Auckland, elected a member. Decided to take Co-operative Hall, Benwell, for open show, Oct. 23. Classification: Norwich 7 classes, Yorkshires 7, Borders 8, Crests 4, Scotch Fancy 2, Mules 3, British and Foreign 2. Decided to apply for patronage of Northern Specialist Societies. The following gentlemen were nominated as judges: Messrs. T. Robson, T. C. Crawhall, Tomlinson, and Nicholson (Stockton), C. Farrer and C. Waters. Entrance fee 1/6 per cage; members 1/-. Prize money, 10/-, 5/-, 2/6. Members please note: Subscriptions overdue.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

In the Courts.

Dealing in Stolen Birds.

At Brentford police court George Varney, animal dealer, of Cambridge-parade, Twickenham, and two school boys, of Morley-road, Twickenham, were charged with being concerned in stealing and receiving, between 21st and 22nd July, three Canaries and a Parakeet, value £1 5/-, the property of Mr. F. Brereton, of Meadowbank, Cambridge Park, Twickenham.

The evidence given was to the effect that nine valuable birds had been stolen from the aviaries, and that two of the Canaries were offered in Varney's shop window for sale. These were recognised by Mr. Brereton's gardener, J. Lanaway, who entered the shop and enquired as to their price. Varney asked 10/- for one of the Canaries. To a detective who was with Mr. Lanaway Varney said he had bought three Canaries and a Parakeet for 3s. 6d. from a lad.

The two lads admitted the theft, but Varney said he did not know that the birds were stolen. Nothing was known against Varney, but the chairman said he was guilty at any rate, of great carelessness, because the facility for selling things like this made the thefts more common. He would be fined 20s. or fourteen days. The boys were severely cautioned by the chairman and bound over under the Probation Act.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

A SLUGGISH HEN (G. V. U.).—I am afraid the bird is not kept under healthful conditions. See that it is in a comfortable place, not necessarily overheated, and free from direct cold draughts, fumes of burning lights in the evenings, or extremes of heat and cold. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and in addition give separately half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with maw seed every third day, and on the intervening days give first a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, niger, teazle and broken groats, and next a good-sized spray of watercress, or a morsel of sweet fruit when greenstuff cannot be obtained in a fit condition to use. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn for three consecutive days, and after this give instead 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a month or so. Continue this treatment for a month.

MATE FOR GREEN HEN (Novice).—It depends upon what you wish to breed for. If you want Greens the most suitable mate would be a self-green cock—a yellow-green if your hen is a buff, and vice versa. If you mated her with a clear buff you would probably get little else but ticked and variegated young, and the result from a ticked cock would be similar, except that the young would show still more variegation, and you may get some broken greens, or an occasional self. Of course, in either case the birds should match each other in other respects—size, type, etc.

DOES NOT SING (Pit Laddie).—Your feeding is certainly at fault, and the black mark above the beak is very suggestive of the bird having to breathe a dusty atmosphere in the kitchen. Keep it in a bright and comfortable place, but not too near a window, nor near or over a burning light in the evenings. As staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Give a spray of watercress each day. In the water add ten drops of lemon juice and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every third day. Limit it strictly to this for a fortnight. Then give separately half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle and maw twice a week, and on two other days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw, or as a change a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. After the first fortnight give in the water six drops of tincture of gentian, and four of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. After this stop all drugs and go on with the above method of feeding.

INSECTS (Pete).—If the insects are upon the bird constantly they are probably grey lice, but your description seems to apply better to red mites. The latter insect is shorter, more round in shape, and dark crimson, with a minute grey mark on the back, and it lives in the crevices of the cage, only going on the bird to feed at night, as a rule. To get rid of red mites you must thoroughly overhaul the cage and fittings, not overlooking the nail or hook on which it hangs. Clean thoroughly, probing, if necessary, any cracks or open joints with a pin on to a sheet of white paper, and immediately burn the debris. Then saturate the cage with turpentine, using a small brush to work it into any small cracks, and in an hour or so wash it well with a solution of Jeyes' or Santal—a teaspoonful of the fluid in each half pint of water, and finally rub it up afresh when dry, and return the bird. Repeat the operation once a week for a month, and during the time give bird a bath twice a week, in which you have mixed a few drops of quassia essence. For grey lice hand-washing is the quickest remedy, using a teaspoonful of Creolin in each pint of the first and second waters used in the process. If you cannot manage this, offer the bird a bath as above every second day for a month or so, and wash out the cage in the same way as you would for dealing with red mites once each week.

SINGING HEN, ETC. (Workman's Hobby).—(1) Certainly it would be right to pair up a singing hen if in good health and condition, as I suspect she is, or she would not be singing. There is no reason whatever why a singing hen should not breed successfully. (2) Yes, it would be quite possible for clutches of eggs to be laid without the presence of a male bird. Elaborate seed mixtures are better reserved as luxuries for occasional use than given as staple diet. A plainer staple diet is much better for the birds, and also saves much waste. You should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners" and follow advice therein generally. Then you could not go far wrong.

BREEDING QUERIES (C. A. B.).—(1) Judging from your letter, I am afraid you are inclined to be just a little too inquisitive concerning the bird's domestic arrangements. Take this hint and let them manage their own affairs as much as possible, avoiding any interference that is not absolutely unavoidable. Assuming the hen does not begin nesting again before the first brood are ready to be separated, you may remove the nest pan a day or two after the young have left it altogether, and give a clean pan, or the old one thoroughly cleaned and with a new lining put in, when she is ready to start again. Should she start again before they are quite out of the nest you may put in a second pan to provide a site for the second nest. The preparations for the second nest are practically a repetition of those for the first. (2) A staple of plain canary, with a pinch of rape separately, is quite sufficient whilst sitting. You may give just a morsel of soft food once a week, though it is not absolutely essential. (3) If the weather is quite warm, or dry, it will be an advantage to offer the bath daily after the ninth or tenth day of incubation. If weather is damp and cold, no harm will be done by withholding it altogether. (4) Only the actual test will prove whether it would make any difference to leave the cock with the hen permanently. Some hens will rear the young best by themselves, and others vice versa. (5) I should term the simple you sent a substitute rather than an egg food, as I imagine the proportion of egg in it is exceedingly small. But as you say the birds are very fond of it and eat it freely, that is the main point, and I see no reason why it should not suffice to rear young from the nest perfectly. It certainly contains a fair quantity of oatmeal, so I should advise you to be a trifle liberal with green food whilst the young are being reared. (6) The fact that the hen sat on the first egg for an hour or two before you removed it will not affect its hatching in the least.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SOFT MOULT (Mrs. T. B. Cooper).—Make yourself quite sure that the bird is not exposed to direct draughts, nor to extreme and rapid fluctuations of heat and cold, such as might occur in the vicinity of burning lights in the evenings. Then, every second day, in addition to its staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it, and on the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet and broken groats, and a morsel of banana. Give also a few dandelion seed heads daily. In the drinking water every second day, dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Should any undue constipation occur, add a pinch of Epsom salts to the water on the days when you omit the iron, until corrected, or give a little more succulent green food. Continue this treatment until Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

PONTEFRAC.

Open Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Horsefair, Aug. 14. 14 entered for three good prizes; 4 minutes' time singing: 1, Beard, 54; 2, Pugh, 50; 3, Scottson, 24. Open sing, Aug. 15; 18 entered for three good prizes; 3 minutes' time singing: 1, T. Jones, 29; 2, Beard, 26; 3, Pugh, 25.—J. Beard, Asst. Sec.

KIPPAK.

Members' sing, Aug. 14, Commercial Hotel, when only a moderate entry was staged: 1, Collinson; 2, Flows; 3, Cooper. Timekeepers, J. Cooper, R. Collinson; Tappers, J. Wallis, A. Cooper. We have a visit of friends on, and am informed by Mr. Lipham, the Clarence Hotel, Leeds, that about a score of them will visit Kippak. The contest will be for quality and time, so as to give the Kippak fanciers an idea on quality singing.—R. Flows, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A., Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Road, open contest for quality Linnet singing, Aug. 14; 14 sang for three prizes: 1, T. Johnson; 2, Condliffe; 3, Chippindale. Judges, Jennings and Harcastle. Aug. 15, 19 sang for three prizes: 1, J. Parker; 2, Condliffe; 3, Chippindale. Judges, Harcastle and Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, Aug. 14, Clarence Hotel, Skinner Lane; 12 birds faced the judges, and some good singing was heard: 1, Ward; 2, Wigfield; 3, Playforth. Judges, P. Bryan and T. Summers. Also a special contest between H. Wigfield and J. Hirst, Mr. W. Crowther adding a prize. Wigfield won; judge, T. Summers. Aug. 15, 12 birds entered: 1, Ward; 2, 3, G. Hirst; judges, C. Biss and T. Summers.—W. Lipman, Hon. Sec.

a short time after the feathers have ceased dropping.

TOO LATE (E. H. M.).—Sorry the last advice came too late to be of service for the bird originally enquired about, but hope it may be of some benefit for the new invalid, with which you will do no harm in trying it for two or three weeks. Then write again and report result, repeating particulars, and I will advise you further if necessary. Probably your birds are in a highly-strung nervous condition, and the immediate cause of death in the last case was due to nervous shock on being caught in the hand. Therefore, you should deal as gently and methodically as possible with your stock, in order to gain their confidence and remove any fear of your presence.

AVIARY AND ROLLERS (Novice, Glasgow).—(1) You give no idea which of your measurements refer to the height of the cage. If it is 3ft. high, its full capacity to commence is seven birds—five hens and two cocks; if the height is 4ft., four hens and one cock would be sufficient. In either case put up seven or eight nesting sites, and do not place one very much higher than the rest, or there will be endless squabbles for the possession of it. You would not, of course, put in the birds for breeding, nor the nesting sites before next spring. (2) Healthy, robust, young birds of the type you mention would do very well to work on to gain experience. But it is probably a mistake to regard these birds as the pure strain of any one individual breeder, or even trainer. (3) For the staple diet give a mixture of two parts good sound canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give separately a pinch of mixed seeds as advised to "Amateur" in this issue about every third day, once or twice a week a little egg food, or bread and milk as a substitute, and four or five times a week a spray of any green salad that is in season. Offer the bath daily in summer and autumn, and twice a week in mild weather during the winter. For fuller details of feeding you should get our Nutsell Booklet No. 10, on the Roller, and for guidance during next season's breeding operations you would do well to equip yourself with "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager would send you for 7d., post free.

A GREAT TOPER (J. T.).—The excessive thirst is merely an effect, not a cause, of the obstinate diarrhoea. The following treatment should put her quite right in the course of two or three weeks. If not well in that time, please write again and repeat particulars, when I will advise you further. Keep cage floor and perches scrupulously clean, and to assist towards this end it would be best to keep the floor well strewn with clean pine sawdust for the time being. Give a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part sweet nutty summer rape. In addition, give separately every second day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut well dusted with carbonate of bismuth and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts good sound hemp, niger, teazle, and broken groats or crushed arrowroot biscuit. Give no succulent greenstuff at present, but a few seed heads of shepherd's purse or half-ripe plantain stalks two or three times a week will do no harm. In the drinking water add for one day only six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give instead five drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of opium, and dilute sulphuric acid for three consecutive days, and every second day after until the droppings become quite normal.

ALL IN A HEAP (S. W.).—It would have been helpful had you described the symptoms a little more fully, and mentioned the condition of the droppings. The bird may simply be starting to moult. Anyway, treat as follows for a fortnight, and if not considerably better, write again and give all particulars of the symptoms. If bird has made a good improvement in the time named, you may go on with the same treatment for a week or two longer. In addition to the staple seed diet, give every second day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and well sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days half a teaspoonful of well-boiled summer rape. Four times a week you may give a half-ripe plantain stalk, or a few seed heads of shepherd's purse. In the drinking water, for three consecutive days, add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice, and after this four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a fortnight. See that it is kept free from direct draughts, and if it begins to shed feathers, keep it in a fairly warm and equable temperature to hasten on the moult.

IS IT POSSIBLE? (Inquirer).—I take your question to mean simply is it possible for pure Mules and pure Canaries to be bred from the same clutch of eggs? If this is what you mean, then the answer is that it is quite possible, but highly improbable, and in every such case part of the ova forming that clutch would have been impregnated by a union of a prior mating with some other male. If what you wish to know is whether it is possible for one or more young birds in a clutch fertilised by a Finch to revert on the principle known as atavism to a former mate of the hen, in such a manner as to be pure Canaries, the answer is that such a thing is not possible. None of the ova impregnated by the Finch could produce pure Canaries, however close the resemblance may be externally.

CONTINUALLY MOULTING (O. H. J.).—(1) Keep the bird on the warm side and throw a light cover over its cage until it has done shedding feathers, and when you notice new quills appearing on the head, begin to add a crystal of sulphate of iron to the water three times a week until the plumage is quite full grown. This should check the continual loss of feathers in future. (2) It is not very likely that you will quite stop the wheezing now until the end of the moult. Every second day for a week give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and sweet spirit of nitre. Give this for a week, then miss a week, and continue in this way until the end of the moult. (3) Yes, the specimen enclosed is shepherd's purse.

A LONG SILENCE (A. S. H.).—Possibly the bird needed only the stimulation of hearing another singer for a short time at the end of its last moult; assuming it has been in good health and condition there is little else to account for its long silence. It will not sing now until this moult is quite finished, but if you follow this treatment he should begin soon afterwards. If he does not, then try to get him the company of a singer for a week or two to encourage him to begin. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape and as staple diet. In addition give half a teaspoonful of egg-food well sprinkled with maw seed twice a week; on two other days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, millet, teazle, gold of pleasure, and broken groats. Give a small spray of some green salad, or seed heads of shepherd's purse, or half-ripe plantain stalk daily. When the moult is nearly finished, which you will know by the new quills appearing about the head, add a crystal of sulphate of iron and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid to the water twice a week until the plumage is fully grown. After that add to the water every third day for a fortnight ten drops each of glycerine and lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence.

STANDS WITH MOUTH OPEN (M. Dubury).—(1) See that both the birds are kept under bright and healthful conditions, and free from direct cold draughts. Then, for three consecutive days, add to the water of this bird with the squeaky voice six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and after this give instead four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight. You may also add to the diet every second day during the first week a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it. (2) I'm afraid this bird is a weakling, and too much of a week to be more than temporarily relieved. Give the rhubarb aperient advised for No. 1 every second day for a week. Follow this up by giving the squills mixture two days in every three for a week, and afterwards every second day for another three weeks. Instead of the bread and milk make a paste by mixing on a hot plate a teaspoonful of pure honey, ditto of cod liver oil emulsion, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a shilling, and the same quantity of powdered grain of paradise. Add whilst mixing a sufficient quantity of finely-powdered biscuit to make the mass the consistency of soft cheese. When cold it may be cut into cubes, one of which keep in the wires of the cage for the bird to peck at when it likes. It will benefit this bird to add 20 drops each of chemical food to its drinking water three times a week for a month after the moult is quite finished.

ANOTHER WHEEZER (E. M. T.).—See reply to "M. Dubury (2)" in this issue, which will apply to your case. See that the bird is kept under healthful conditions and in a fairly equable temperature and free from direct draughts, and treat it as advised in that reply for a month, and if not then well, please write again and I will advise you further. You will not need to give the course of chemical food after the end of the moult. Also you must not expect too rapid progress from the wheeziness whilst the bird is moulting.

SEEDS AND SEX (Amateur).—(1) The following seed mixture, which you may make up yourself in any quantity by adhering to these proportions, is as good as any for occasional use as an extra. Two parts each (by measure) hemp, niger, and white millet, one part each teazle, black rape, or cole, and broken groats, a half part of maw, and a quarter part each of gold of pleasure and linseed. The latter item is optional, and is just as well left out for a few weeks at a time now and again. (2) Only experience and close observation will enable you to tell with any degree of certainty the sexes of the young birds, for the differences are all comparative and often slight. In a general way the cocks are more bold and pushful, have a more defiant and domineering mien, a richer colour on the wing butts, rump, and at base of lower mandible, a bolder, or what is sometimes termed a bolting, eye, the head and neck are rather thicker and fuller, and there is a more graceful sweep of outline from the abdomen on to the under tail coverts, due to more fully developed coverts. The voice and call is more clear and liquid, and when any attempts are made at singing the throat swells and palpitates perceptibly. Most young cocks will begin to warble a little as soon as they are out of the nest, or even before they leave it they may be noticed trying to warble.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (J. Hughes).—Please see reply under "British Birds."

BORDERS GETTING THIN (Borders).—(1) Judging from your successes hitherto, I am inclined to think there is really nothing materially wrong with the style of your birds, and that what you take for wasting is merely a natural tightening up of the plumage after the moult. I rather doubt the wisdom of tailing the birds, or, indeed, of any interference. Still, if you want to give them more waist, a month or so of the following feeding should do it for you. For staple diet, give plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of scalded rape seed and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a piece of bread the size of a walnut, soaked in cold milk, drained, four drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, broken groats and chopped sunflower seed. Give a spray of watercress sufficiently often to prevent the birds becoming constipated. The quantities named are what you should give each bird that is to be treated. The sample of seed you sent is a very useful mixture for occasional use, but such elaborate mixtures are not to be commended for a regular staple diet. (2) If the tail feathers were pulled, it would be six weeks before they were full grown again, though they would be showing well through in half that time.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

STOCKING AN AVIARY (H. A. Tutt).—You propose to put far too many birds in your 4-ft. aviary. They might do in it for a time if they were all of one sex, but to expect any success in breeding is quite out of the question. If you seriously want to rear Mules in it you had better turn in one cock bird with your three hens. In that case I would advise you to use the Goldie. The Bullfinch are not certain breeders, and a Linnet would probably mate with one hen and no more, although to this rule there are exceptions. (2) Your stock mixture will be made up to suit the birds you decide to have; if you select the Goldie, he will require something different to what you would give a Linnet. I shall be pleased to assist you when you have selected your stock.

BREEDING MEALWORMS (J. Hughes).—This question has been answered so many times in these columns that I must ask you to kindly look up back numbers, or send for Nutsell Booklet No. 26, price 2d., post free, in which you will find full instructions.

FINCHES DYING IN AVIARY (Tennil).—I fear your method of feeding is to blame. I do not think the fact of the birds nibbling the twigs had anything to do with their death, although I notice you do not say what the tree is. Wild birds, as a rule, will not eat injurious vegetation, they are not quite so reckless as Canaries. The great mistake you make is in feeding all your birds on the same seed; a Goldfinch, for instance, will starve on the diet that will fatten a Greenfinch. I would advise you to get the Nutsell Booklets on the different birds you intend keeping; they give you full information as to management. If you buy any more you had better keep them in cages for a time, and if any of them look a bit thick give a little Epsom salts in the water, and a spoonful of soaked seeds. The sample of seed you sent is not a suitable mixture; it contains too much rape; a Greenfinch might do on it, but I fear your Goldie had a bad time.

CANARIES OR MULES (F. C.).—You failed to send your address, which is contrary to rules, perhaps you will let us have it on a post card. I have read your letter carefully, and I am inclined to think you have been fortunate enough to breed a couple of light Mules, although I have known of cases similar to yours, and have personally experienced one, in which Canaries were hatched after the pair had been parted quite a long, and the hen mated to a Finch. The style of the young birds and the shape of the head and beak should help you to decide what they are, and if they are Mules, you will find the body feather much shorter than that of Canaries. I would advise you to keep them until they are fully moulted, and, if Mules, let them fly in a large cage for another year before doing anything with them.

TRYING FOR A RARE CROSS (Jay Bee).—Both Jays and Magpies are most difficult birds to sex, and I do not know of any reliable method. If you have two or three nestlings it is possible to detect slight differences in size, brightness of chestnut, and wing bars in the case of the Jay, and size, with a somewhat snaky appearance about the head, in the Magpie, and some lack of sheen on the plumage. As regards the cross, I think your difficulty would be in getting the birds to incubate the eggs if they laid. I would rather lay long odds on their eating them than hatching them, but still, such curious things happen with birds that I would by no means discourage anyone who intends trying for hitherto unknown crosses; they would certainly create a sensation if bred and exhibited. Your aviary should be a large one, and the birds put in it at once. I do not think it would make much difference which way you mated them, although I should feel inclined to have a hen Jay, if you have a choice, as she would find a nesting site far easier than a Magpie would.

FEEDING LINNET MULE (Laintre).—The questions you ask you would find answered much more fully in "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding," post free 1s. 2d., than I am able to do in these columns. A good stock mixture would be 3 parts canary, 2 parts teazle, 1 part rape, 4 part linseed; also make up another mixture of gold of pleasure, niger, and maw, and give a spoonful twice a week, and just a little cracked hemp and sunflower; occasionally supply seeding wild plants, grass seed, sow thistle, dandelion, plantain, etc. Keep in a box cage about 16 inches long, and let him bathe frequently. He should have colour food at once if you want him to moult out a good colour. "How to Mould British Birds," 2d. post free, would help you considerably, for although it deals with British birds, the same methods would be useful in moulting out Hybrids; but if you colour feed you would have to keep the bird indoors. (2) You will find the best natural food for improving the colour of the Bullfinch is the privet berry. This can be gathered in bunches as soon as ripe, and may be kept some time in water or damp sand, and a spray given daily. The berries you mention are more suitable for the larger softbills.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

AMAZON WITH SWOLLEN FOOT (Grieve).—Unless the bird is a tame one, and will let you handle it, I am afraid you cannot give it much relief. The leg should be bathed with water as hot as you can bear your hand in without acute discomfort; dry with a soft cloth and then paint with proof whisky—so treat it several times a week, daily would be better, but the demeanour of the bird must be the governing factor as to this. It will also be well to keep its bowels properly regulated; the bowels should move freely, but must not be allowed to remain watery-loose. To this end give one teaspoonful of Dinnford's Magnesia in the drinking water as often as may be required. Also give daily one-third of a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion, either on boiled maize, crust of bread, biscuit, or plain cake, whichever the bird most favours. The bird would be better with a seed mixture of hemp, oats, wheat, dani, sunflower and shelled pea-nuts; equal quantities of each by measure—the whole to be well mixed. It can also have ripe fruit, other nuts, bread, biscuit, plain cake, and green-food. Cattlebone, grit, also a piece of a branch (for it to exercise its mandibles upon), should be continually in the cage. After the bathing of the leg and foot has been going forward for a time, if there appears any sign of pus under the skin, it must be carefully lanced and the pus exuded by gentle pressure and the part thoroughly cleansed with warm water, dried, and lightly anointed with boracic ointment. Report progress in about a month with full details.

CAPE SPARROW-CANARY CROSS (G. and R.).—While there is nothing as to manner of feeding, etc., in the two species to interfere with their successful crossing, yet when one considers the general characteristics and demeanour of the respective species, such success strikes one as improbable, yet not impossible; and, if such success has been attained, a description of the coloration of the hybrids after the moult would be of great interest. So far as I know there is no record of such a cross having been successfully effected in Great Britain or elsewhere. Many readers of "C.B." will be interested in reading the details of your success, and may I suggest that not only should a description of the main features of the plumage of the male parent be given, but the variety of the Canary he stated also. Such precaution would prevent error in the description of any cross, as popular and vernacular names are often a most unsafe guide, and the term "Sparrow," etc., is often very loosely used. The Cape Canary has frequently been crossed with the Canary (domestic var.), and with several other species of Serinus, too.

AMAZON PARROTS SNEEZING (Lincoln Imp).—Spray the nostrils well with a dilute tepid solution of glyco-thymoline daily till the running ceases; operate gently so as not to unduly alarm them; it will do no harm if a little of the solution is swallowed. For three consecutive days put one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water, then only give it as required to keep the bowels moving quite freely but not watery-loose. Give a little honey and borax daily, spread this on a piece of bread, biscuit, or plain cake, whichever the bird takes most readily, and in the same manner give a little cod liver oil emulsion till the birds are built up and established. Also get a packet of "Parrot grit," and give a pinch of this daily, only a small pinch at first (you can put it on top of the seed), increasing the quantity as they become accustomed to it. Cattlebone should be continually hanging in the cage, and they should also have a piece of a stout branch to exercise their mandibles upon. Report progress a month hence.

BREEDING CALIFORNIAN QUAIL (G. R. A.).—Broadly speaking, Californian Quail chicks are not much more difficult to rear than ordinary chicks, but in their early stages should have a plentiful supply of live insects (live ants' eggs, gentles, etc.), but they soon begin to pick up small seeds. The general method is to put them under Bantams or Sikies, so as to get as many reared in the course of the season as possible; a single hen has produced over eighty eggs in a single season in my aviary, but she only incubated one clutch of twenty-one eggs. Of these seventeen hatched out, sixteen of which reached maturity, that is, to moult into adult plumage, when I parted with the whole family. In the above instance I did not coop them up at all; they had the run of a naturally planted aviary (30ft. by 30ft.), and were left entirely to the care of their mother. As regards food, insectile mixture and ants' eggs and gentles were supplied for the first week, and they never looked back—when about ten days old they began to pick up seed and grew as rapidly as ordinary chicks. Ample green-food was growing in the aviary, but where such is not the case it must be supplied freely, such as tufts of grass pulled up by the root, chickweed, and any non-poisonous weed, minced lettuce, and spring onions, according to the season. Some give custard, a hard-boiled yolk of egg (finely minced) but I have never used either, and I have successfully bred several species, including the small species as well as the more robust Californian, etc. Personally, I take no interest in rearing them by incubator or foster-parents, and always leave my Quail to breed in a natural way, and most species do so readily, though my experience is that under these conditions they only bring up one brood annually, usually refusing to sit on the first clutch, rear the second, and fail to incubate either the third or fourth clutches.

BAD PARENTS (E. Simpson).—Some pairs of Cockatiels are very prolific, nearly all are quite ready to go to nest, but many pairs are bad parents and act much as your pair are doing. The only thing to do is to change till you get a breeding pair, and then stick to them as long as they continue productive. It is probable that the near relationship of your pair is largely responsible for the trouble. I certainly suggest your exchanging one of the birds, it does not matter which, but I should keep the younger of the two—whatever the cause of the trouble, such a course should improve matters and enable you to get some results. Sometimes by watching adverts, you can secure a good breeding pair, and if you are able to do so perhaps it would be your best course. If your aviary is roomy they would agree all right with your present pair, and probably stimulate (educate) the latter in parental duties. With two breeding pairs you would be in a position to supply unrelated pairs of young when disposing of surplus stock, and thus greatly enhance your chances of getting rid of them.

There are many sketches and a splendid coloured plate of all the best known wild plants. 1/2 post free.

A HANDY BOOK.

MULE and HYBRID BREEDERS make your 1915 breeding season a record in every way by purchasing a copy of

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth. 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

THE PRACTICAL AND COMPREHENSIVE WORK WHICH ALL HYBRID BREEDERS REQUIRE.

A VANISHING BRITISH BIRD.

The Cornish Chough is year by year becoming scarcer in the county of England which gives it its name. In the South-west of Ireland, where at one time it was frequently to be seen, it is also getting more and more rare, this being mainly due to the avidity with which its eggs are sought by collectors. Forty-four clutches of eggs, numbering nearly 200, have been offered at a single auction sale, all stated to have been taken in county Kerry.

The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing his receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

Be advised, and send for a copy NOW before it is too late.

Remember!

We had to Disappoint Many

Fanciers last year, as the entire edition was sold out before they ordered their copies.

These are some of the Contents:

THE BIRD-KEEPER'S YEAR.

A new feature, which will remind the fancier of essential details of management, the timely attention to which goes so far to ensure success in the hobby, and which gives valuable hints month by month.

THE CANARY BREEDER'S OPPORTUNITY.

By Claude St. John. Telling of the bright future that is in store for Canary breeders, and showing how to take advantage of the existing circumstances in order eventually to profit by the increased demand which is certain to arise in the near future.

HOW TO MAKE BIRD-BREEDING PAY.

By O. E. Brooks. Demonstrating that the hobby of bird-keeping may be made profitable as well as pleasurable. Indicating the mistakes to avoid, and the proper methods to be pursued.

THE FASCINATION OF AN AVIARY OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

By W. Wallis. The delights of foreign bird-keeping are dealt with in this interesting and practical contribution. The fittings of the Aviary, the kind of birds to keep, and their requirements in the way of food and accommodation are all described, and there is an illustration of an outdoor aviary which is at once inexpensive, roomy, and adequate in every respect.

WITH THE WILD BIRDS DURING 1914.

By H. Norman. In this article our British bird expert writes in his well-known style on the birds about which he is so well qualified to write, and all lovers of birds in their natural surroundings will be interested in this feature.

HOW TO REDUCE THE FOOD BILL.

By Claude St. John. Useful hints that will help bird-keepers to economise in this time of temporary stress; showing how the expense of feeding may be reduced without any detriment whatever to the well-being of the birds.

A REVIEW OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

How the birds have fared during the year in each section. All are dealt with:—Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Greens, Cliffhamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fancies, Crests, Lancashires and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

A DIRECTORY OF JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

DIARY AND CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR WITH EGG-HATCHING TABLE. ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CAGE BIRD ASSOCIATIONS. &c., &c., &c.

No matter what variety of birds you keep, whether novice or old hand, there is information in this bird-keeper's encyclopaedia of the greatest use to you. Each article is written by an expert, and in their experiences of failures and successes you will find the way to the top of the ladder.

KIPPAX.

Linnets contest Aug. 21, Commercial Hotel. About a score of the members of the Clarence Hotel Linnets Club, Leeds, paid us a visit and brought their birds to sing, and we had a contest both for time and quality. Leeds and Kippax members getting prizes in each contest. The Clarence Club had with them some of the best judges in the Broad Acres for quality, also their genial host, Mr. Crowther, of the Clarence Hotel. The President of the Clarence Linnets Club has promised to give a medal with a bird in centre when the Kippax Linnets Club pay their visit to the Clarence Club. A general meeting will be held at Kippax Club Aug. 28 to make arrangements and fix date to visit the Clarence Club, but as the majority of the birds are moulting we may wait a week or two in order to take some good birds with us, as the Kippax members will want some of their best Linnets for the contests. Time singing: 1, Plows; 2, Ward, Leeds; 3, Potter, Kippax. Messrs. Plows, Potter, and Cooper Wallis attended to the time singing section. Quality: 1, Ward, Leeds; 2, Wigham, Leeds; 3, Collinson, Kippax. Messrs. Somers and C. Bess judged for quality.—R. Plows, Sec.

We have decided to have a one-day show on Dec. 4, writes Mr. J. Ainsworth, Sec., Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.C., Secs. of Federated shows kindly note, so as not to clash.

The Committee of the Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A. have been successful in obtaining the Albert Halls, 285, Bath-st., for their Annual Show, Nov. 12 and 13, writes Mr. W. Hutchison, Hon. Sec. Being an old church, it is high and lit from the roof, and will make an ideal hall.

Sergt. J. H. Harrison, R.A.M.C., stationed at Woodcotes Park Convalescent Camp, Epsom, will be very glad to meet any fanciers in or round Epsom where he can have a friendly chat on birdy matters. He also extends a welcome to anyone wishing to visit him at the camp.

The Garston B.B.A. members and friends will take a ramble on Aug. 29; meet at Mr. Jones's, 35, Church Road, Garston, at 2, writes Mr. R. T. Lonsdale, Hon. Sec.; fanciers of Liverpool will find it worth while to join.

Will customers please note that for the remainder of this season the Post Office authorities collect parcels of Ramsden's Pure Peppers on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday mornings only, at 11.15. Delays on rail are frequent. Customers should therefore make allowance and send their orders a few days before the pepper is actually needed.—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London, S.W.—(Advr.)

The Coaltown of Wemyss C.B.S., writes Mr. Alec Storrar, secretary, intends running a show on Dec. 4th in aid of the Wemyss Soldiers' Comforts Fund. The judges will be: Borders and Yorks., Mr. R. T. Campbell; Norwich, British and Foreign, Mr. G. Arnott. The show will be confined to Fife, and it is hoped that the Fife fanciers will make it a success. All trophies of the society are to be competed for.

In our issue of July 24th date, we had the pleasure of announcing that Dr. Lovell Keays had achieved a success in being the first aviculturist to breed Bearded Tits, and in the August issue of "Bird Notes," the journal of the Foreign Bird Club, the Dr. gives a full and most interesting account of his experiences with these charming birds. The Marquis of Tavistock continues his articles, "My Little Owls" and "Cranes, etc., in Captivity." Mr. G. E. Low gives notes on the Cape Zosterops and Jackson's Whydahs, and among the other articles are "Breeding of the Black Seed-finch," by Mr. W. Shore-Baily, and "The Breeding of the Masked Dove," by Mr. H. Bright.

OBITUARY.

It is with regret, writes Mr. J. A. T. Woodall, press correspondent Sheffield O.S., that I have to announce the death of the eldest daughter of Mr. Geo. Fletcher, one of our most prominent members. The deepest sympathy is expressed by all the members of the S.O.S. in the great trouble that has overtaken Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher, and trust that they will have strength given to overcome so great a blow.

Mr. Walsh, Pheasant Avianes, Blackburn, has forwarded us samples of his tasteless and hot pepper, egg bread with colour, and insectivorous food with colour. In a letter accompanying these, Mr. Walsh says: "We are the direct importers of the best quality peppers, and are in with some of the best growers in Spain. We can therefore offer our customers first-class value. Our egg bread and insectivorous food are: gain in great demand. Samples will be sent free to any of your readers, as per our advert in CAGE BIRDS." The samples seem to bear out all that is said of them; the peppers are of good colour and rich in oil, the sprinkling of maw seed which is added to the egg bread is just what is wanted, and the insectivorous food contains a liberal proportion of "dried flies." Readers should send for the free samples and inspect them for themselves.

The Morals of Rheas.

In the correspondence columns of our Aug. 7 issue there appeared a letter from Mr. Dan McArthur referring to the Rheas and Emus in the Scottish Zoo, and in the August issue of "Bird Notes" the Marquis of Tavistock writes:

The Common Rhea (Rhea americana) is even better known in this country than the Emu, and when adult is perfectly hardy. The cock bird alone sits and takes charge of the young, the hen being indifferent to her offspring, and at times even inclined to molest them.

Rheas are both polygamous and polyandrous, four or five hens accompanying a cock for some days, laying him a nest of eggs, and when he begins to sit transferring their allegiance to some other admirer. In spite of the extreme laxity of her morals the female Rhea shows quite a lively interest in the display which her mate performs for her benefit, wherein she differs from most hen birds who appear excessively bored by the efforts made to arouse their interest and admiration.

A Moth as a Humming Bird.

The "Blackburn Weekly Telegraph" prints without comment the following letter from a reader (Great Harwood): "I noticed a rare bird on the 23rd July in my garden. I have a lot of violas, and, seeing something strange flitting from flower to flower, I went closer to have a good look. I am certain it was a humming-bird. I called in a neighbour and his wife, and they had never seen anything like it before. It did not alight once while I saw it, but stabbed flower after flower with its long, thin bill, all the time its wings going like an electric fan. I have looked for it many times since, but in vain."

Twenty-two, Not Out.

F. H. M. writes to the Darlington "Northern Echo" that he has a Canary twenty-two years old and still singing.

The original drawings of our front page illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing in our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture will be sent on application.

Birds in the Firing Line.

In an extremely interesting article on "Birds in Flanders," in the Avicultural Magazine, Dr. Bernard E. Potter says:—"Greenfinches and Yellowhammers are very common and sing all day. Willow Wrens are heard in all the high trees of the woods, no bird's note was more welcome this spring with its gentle cadence. I have seen many Pied Wagtails, only one Ray's. Of the Tits the Great Tit is much in evidence, but none of the others. Wrens are very numerous and sometimes seem to predominate as singers. So vociferous a song from so small a bird always seems extraordinary. Usually they sing at the end of a house-roof and their profile with the well-cocked tail is most comical. While shells were falling with regularity, yet I could not help noticing a Wren in this typical pose on an estaminet at Potijze."

Can Albinos be Bred Scientifically?

Mr. W. Bush, of Newport, stated in an interview with a representative of the Cardiff "Western Mail," that he had bred white Blackbirds, Jays, Ring-doves, Sparrows, Jackdaws, Starlings, Magpies, Linnets and Robins. "Mendel," he said, "did not apparently experiment with birds. Mice and plants were his subjects. I have verified his system in the case of birds. I have been specially successful in the case of Ring-doves, which breed freely. The process, roughly speaking, is this: A white freak bird is put to mate with one of normal colour—brown or black. The product are birds that Mendel would speak of as 'F 1.' To casual appearances they are all true to the normal type. But there is a trace of the albino in the blood of probably all of them. If you follow the experiment a stage further you get what Mendel calls 'F 2,' and out of a hatch of, say, four, you will find that there are three apparently normal and one quite white bird. But of the three apparently normal one only is a common bird. And if you could determine which one that was, exclude him and follow up your experiments with the others, you are pretty certain to get white birds. But you cannot determine which is the commoner, and so you must go on till you get a white stock. It is a most interesting study. But neither Mendel nor anyone else has told us where the first white Blackbird, or Sparrow, or Jay came from, or how he came to be so abnormal."

How Advertising Pays

"The advert. we have in CAGE BIRDS is bringing us continued orders."—PETS SUPPLY CO. (Harrogate).

"I always get a good many replies to my advertisements in CAGE BIRDS and meet with the best of customers."—A. DRAPER (Halstead).

"Please thank all enquirers for Parrot, and say the bird is sold, as the applications were so numerous I could not reply to all by post."—D. COOMBS (West Hartlepool).

"I had so many replies to my advert. under the heading of Foreign in CAGE BIRDS of July 16, that it was impossible for me to answer all. I take this opportunity of thanking you for your splendid publication."—W. F. MONK (Halstead).

"Now the season is drawing to a close we may state that our sales of rings advertised in CAGE BIRDS have exceeded our expectations by thousands considering so many are now serving their country in this great war."—THE SUN-DE LAND RING CO.

"Kindly allow me to thank the many applicants for the Canaries I advertised in CAGE BIRDS. I am unable to answer them all, only one of them enclosed stamp for reply. I made an exchange (and both of us quite satisfied) on Saturday afternoon."—W. HEPWOOD (Albrighton).

"I beg to thank all those who answered my advert. of birds for sale owing to enlistment. Most of my birds were sold within a week. I regret to state that I have been rejected by the Army doctor, so I shall continue in the Fancy, but with only a very small stock. CAGE BIRDS is a good advertising medium, and deserves every success."—H. TEAT (Ancaster).

"Would you be so good as to make it known through CAGE BIRDS that I have sold the Canaries I advertised last week. I sold them on Saturday in good time, which speaks well for CAGE BIRDS. I thank all the readers who have written to me about them, but I cannot possibly reply to all, as there were so many, and I am still receiving applications."—G. LUDRON (Stockton-on-Tees).

JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS

The attention of Show Secretaries is directed to the following list of gentlemen willing to act as Judges. Terms for insertion on application.

- J. C. BARNES, 113, Northfield Road, Walsley, Sheffield. Judge of all varieties of cage birds. Long, practical experience. Terms moderate.
 THOS. BENNETT, Judge of Cage Birds; life experience; terms moderate: 14, Cumberland-rd., Lidget Green, Bradford.
 J. W. BRUCE, Coldstream. Judge of all varieties of cage birds; Border and British Bird specialist. Terms moderate.

 W. YOUNG, 25, Grosvenor Road, New Brighton. Judge of Cage Birds. Life experience. Terms moderate.

The Toll of Nature.

After stating that the Hawfinch has steadily increased in numbers for several decades, the "Yorkshire Observer" goes on to say:—"The exceptional case of the Hawfinches makes one wonder that the number of birds should, as a rule, remain so nearly stationary year after year. The past season has been most favourable for nesting, and undoubtedly the bird population at the present moment is very much higher than in April. But we are not justified in assuming that next April there will be any exceptional number of birds in our woodlands and hedgerows. A tremendous number of young Song Thrushes, for instance, must have come into the world this summer, but we shall probably be disappointed if we expect crowds of Song Thrushes to greet the springtime next year. Nature is ruthless. There are many hardships to face before next spring. A rigid winter eliminates the old and feeble of those which stay amongst us throughout the year; and in the case of the migrants there are two perilous over-sea journeys. The records from lighthouses give an idea of the sacrifice of life which these journeys entail. Altogether the wastage is huge, and to do no more than maintain present numbers each pair of birds must hatch out three or four times their own number each year. Perhaps the case of a pair of Dippers—less plentiful birds at all times than Song Thrushes—better illustrates this tendency for numbers to remain stationary. A pair, not the same pair, of course, have occupied a certain ledge of rock so long as the oldest person in their district can remember. In twenty years' time a few score Dippers must have left that nest, cosily hidden behind a waterfall, and must have dashed through the foam into the world at large. But there is no reason to suppose that there are more Dippers on that stream or upon neighbouring streams than there were twenty years ago. It is a rare accident indeed to find a nest of the bird in a fresh situation."

The Revival of the Evenly-Marked Yorkshire.

By Oscar E. Brooks.

AS a keen admirer of the evenly-marked Yorkshire, I often wonder why it is that this beautiful variety has been permitted during recent years to lapse into a state bordering on obscurity. I am prepared to admit that two weighty arguments are often quoted in disparagement of even-marks, namely, that they prove a strong temptation to the "faker" and that they are difficult to breed to anything like a standard of perfection. Having admitted as much, however, I fail to understand why this should tell against its popularity.

Regarding the latter, I must candidly confess I think it should be an argument in favour of, rather than against the variety. We have most of us experienced the truth of the old saying that there is no royal road to success, and that things not difficult to obtain are not worth having. The genuine fancier looks upon difficulty as the fascination of his hobby, and not a stumbling-block, for all difficulties are intended to be overcome.

To Get "Even Marks."

From personal experience, I am certain that the chief cause of failure in breeding for even-marks is not laying a proper foundation at the commencement. Many individuals lacking in practical experience have an erroneous idea that all one has to do in order to produce these much desired markings is to pair two birds together, each bearing an outward resemblance to the ideal. I would not like to say that well-marked progeny cannot be had in this manner, but I am positive that in nine cases out of ten perfectly even-marked youngsters do not result.

It is absolutely essential, if one wishes to ultimately be successful, to "line breed." Here I must pause, for I am inclined to believe that a large percentage of amateur Canary breeders have but a hazy notion of what line breeding really is.

To pair closely related birds indiscriminately together is not line breeding, but inbreeding of the most injurious type. On the other hand, to systematically pair mother to son, daughter to father, or grandfather to granddaughter (provided the birds themselves be suitably matched) can be productive of excellent results, especially where the production or retention of certain markings is the object in view.

As I have previously stated, it is quite useless, and in fact sometimes harmful, to be guided in mating solely by the external appearances. One must have a perfect knowledge of the individual pedigree of his stock, and this can only be properly carried out by line breeding on scientific principles. In this connection I would recommend the reader to procure a copy, unless he has already done so, of the breeding room register compiled by Mr. G. E. Weston. I have found from personal experience that if the particulars are entered in this register as directed, it affords a very helpful means of ascertaining the exact information one needs when embarking on systematic breeding.

The Even-mark Standard.

For the benefit of those imperfectly acquainted with the standard for even-marks, I quote the following:—"An evenly-marked bird must be four pointed (i.e. both eyes, and both wings), or six pointed (i.e. both eyes, both wings, and both sides of tail)." I would also remind the breeder that in judging, out of the hundred marks any number up to twenty-five are allowed for eye markings, the number depending largely upon the neatness and regularity of outline, and for distinction.

Now it is generally admitted that good eye markings are much harder to obtain than wing marks, although neither are easy. In my own opinion I think this is largely due to the fact that neck and head ticks are more apt to crop up when one is centring his attention upon the eye markings. I presume, too, that it is also because while we are chiefly concerned in the wing or tail markings we frequently use birds that are entirely deficient in marks on the head, face, or neck, with the result that ticks on these parts are not much in evidence. The moment, however, we turn our attention towards perfecting the eye-markings, and, for the purpose, introduce birds thus marked into our breeding stock, the old trouble begins to assert itself once again, and the annoying splashes of green colour about the head and neck are continually revived in each successive brood.

Another type of marking that perplexes the breeder in no slight degree is the splash about the thigh or under part of the tail. It is, however, practically impossible entirely to avoid the occasional reappearance of these objectionable markings, as the considerable amount of green blood has a strong tendency to come to the surface at most unexpected times.

Keep to One Sort.

In my own breeding experiments I have confined myself to the Green marks, and have hardly touched upon the Cinnamon, although I am fully aware that good Cinnamon even-marks are procurable quite as much as the Greens. Whether one decides to specialise in Green or Cinnamon is of course purely a matter of individual taste, but I strongly advocate breeders confining themselves to one or the other, as when both are bred in the same room, one is liable to affect the purity of the shade of the other.

In building up a strain of evenly-marked Yorkshires I would advise the breeder to get into communication with an individual who makes even-marks his speciality, and consequently, possesses a thoroughly established strain. If he is a reliable breeder of good repute, the novice can safely place himself in his hands, as it were, after having explained what birds are required, and may feel assured that he will be honourably dealt with.

If I may depart from the subject for a moment, I would like to add, that in all branches of Canary breeding quite as much as in that which chiefly concerns us, this advice holds good, for if the inexperienced were only to place themselves without reserve in the hands of breeders of much experience they would invariably start on the absorbing study of bird breeding with much more suitable stock than when they have relied merely upon their own limited knowledge, and obstinately refused any proffered advice from those well able to give it.

A Modest Start Sufficient.

But to return to our subject. For the average individual, not blest with too much available space, two pairs of stock birds are sufficient to make a start with, provided they are unrelated, that is to say, not closely related, and from a recognised strain of even-marks. If possible, however, it would be better and cheaper too, in the long run, to invest in three pairs. Each pair should be kept quite distinct, and a knowledge of the individual pedigrees obtained at the time of their purchase.

For the first season or two one cannot reasonably expect to accomplish more than to lay a foundation for the future strain, but the more scientifically the pairing is carried out at the start, the sooner is the breeder likely to see some definite reward for his pains.

In the first place, it is highly important that the stock be typical as regards size and shape, for it will be readily understood that to breed birds possessing good technical markings but lacking in general type of the variety to which they belong, is only a waste of time and labour.

The Breeding of the Roller Canary

A paper by Mr. G. A. Harper, Bilston, read to the members of the City of Birmingham C.B.S.

I HAVE no doubt that the old hands have their own way of breeding, and I say to them, if they have a good proved system, stick to it, for everyone has a way, and every way does, but some better than others. You will generally find that it is the persevering ones that succeed, and I strongly advise anyone not to go in for Canary breeding if they cannot look after their birds properly, unless they have a better half to do it for them, or someone else who will, or in nine cases out of ten it will be certain failure. Even those of us who give the birds every attention have mishaps sometimes.

Variety in Food Necessary.

Birds in their wild state have no end of things to choose from, therefore the more variety of wholesome foodstuffs we can give our own, the better will they repay us. I remember reading once of someone who reared a few Canaries on seed alone, but I am sadly afraid he would not get many prize winners out of them, as I think it next to impossible to rear strong healthy birds unless they have soft food of some kind or other.

Before we commence breeding operations we have to purchase some birds, and the question occurs, where shall we get them? Well, perhaps I may be pardoned for offering a little advice, as I have had rather a wide experience, and I have had to pay for it, too. I once had a beautiful orange-coloured Canary in reply to an advertisement for a good singing Canary. He was to sing by daylight or gaslight, or any other light, but, although I kept him nearly six months, I never heard him sing at all, and this is only one case out of several I could mention. Now if we want really good birds we have only to look down show reports to find what we want, or there are plenty of reliable breeders who would be only too pleased to supply us with what we require if we give them the chance.

When to Buy Stock Birds.

The next item is the best time to purchase. Well, I should say November to February—not later, as it is always best to have the birds a month or two before you want to pair them up to get them thoroughly accustomed to your mode of feeding and their new surroundings. Having the birds, you want to know which is the best and whether to breed in cages or aviaries. My ideal place is a room, or part of same partitioned off with half-inch mesh wire netting, one over a living room preferred, as it is generally warmer than the others; a few branches fixed here and there; windows facing east and west if possible, and one cock to three or four hens, according to his age and constitution.

Fifty Young from One Cock.

I have reared 50 in one season off one cock and four hens in this way, and found the youngsters were nearly always stronger than those reared in cages, while one feeding does for the lot. I have reared nearly all my birds in this manner for the last 20 years, and have never had a bad season. The lowest number reared has been 50, and several times I have had to stop breeding operations before the breeding season was over for fear of overcrowding, as my space is limited.

This season I have had to alter my breeding room for domestic reasons, but shall stick to my plan of one cock with several hens. I have made three large flights, 7ft. long, 2ft. 6in. deep, and 2ft. high, one above the other, so have more accommodation, yet taking up less room, and I advise anyone short of space to try this plan. If they have plenty, then give my original idea the preference, as it is far less trouble and more natural. The more we imitate Nature, the better we shall succeed.

A Useful Contrivance.

For seed I use self-filling hoppers, they hold anything from six to ten lbs., with a partition down—canary seed one side, rape the other. You do not get so much wasted by keeping separate instead of mixing the seeds, and then I have a shallow box hanging under the hopper, same size, to catch husks or seeds if the birds scatter it, some hens being very mischievous in this way. If the birds do throw it out, you can then sieve that caught in the bottom box, and, after blowing away the husks, put the seed back in the hopper. I also have another one filled with groats and hemp until the time the young are hatched, then I crush the hemp in a mill.

I use Jones's hygienic glass fountains for water, and prefer them to any other. Being in two pieces, they can easily be kept clean. I also use a shallow dish for bath, with about one inch of water in, which they have fresh every day, summer or winter; they enjoy it very much, and it helps to keep them in good health, while, in my opinion, it is a preventive of sweating.

I use charpie, moss, and fine hay as nesting material, and baskets and terra-cotta nests to build in, but they nearly always prefer the baskets, and I do not dislike them myself, as you are sure of the young ones getting plenty of ventilation, and if given a good dressing with paraffin you will not be much troubled with insect pests.

Some East Coast Birds.

By J. FEW (Wigan).

IN a field of newly-mown hay an animated scene in bird life, which is always of interest, is observed. It is a mixed lot of insectivorous birds, with a sprinkling of seed-eaters—which latter are partially insectivorous too, particularly when rearing young. The flock consists of Missel and Song Thrushes, Skylarks, Meadow Pipits, Yellow and Pied Wagtails, Greenfinches, and House Sparrows; and, on the wing, a number of Swallows and House Martins hawking to and fro.

It is well to remember that Finches, including Canaries, relish a meal of small insects. In gathering groundsel, chickweed, and shepherd's-purse, especially the last-named, I always made a point of securing what insects I could, as I found that some of my birds showed a partiality for these, and would search for them before beginning to consume the seeds.

A Fault which Mars a Song.

The mellow notes of the Whitethroat now greet the ear; some of its phrases are very like those of the Blackcap and Garden Warbler. If, however, invariably mars its best efforts by introducing some rather harsh notes. A Redpoll passes in very undulating flight, chanting its familiar ditty, and feeding on chickweed by the roadside are some Linnets in nuptial dress. One perched on the hedge is rendering its sweet and varied song. There is something beautifully wild about the Linnet's song, with which I always associate the gorse-covered common and hillside where I listened to avian choruses by flocks of these Finches.

A very locally distributed bird, the Corn Bunting, is plentiful in this district. On every hand the bird is singing. Its song, which is not of much consequence, commences with "tuk, tuk, tuk," and is continued till late in the season when most birds are silent, except the other members of the family Emberizæ to which it belongs. Yonder a Greenfinch tells of its ecstasy by pouring forth the drawn-out note, "tway," and then by its fantastical aerial display.

Now I listen to the song of the Yellow Bunting or Yellowhammer, which syllabised is, "che, che, che, et, errrrr, oomm." Its song is most appreciated in August and September, though it is sometimes described as monotonous.

"The simplest notes have charms
"For me: I even love the Yellowhammer's song.
"When earliest birds begin to budge, his note,
"Simple, reiterated, oft is heard
"In leafless briar or half-grown hedgerow tree;
"Nor is he silent until autumn's leaves
"Fall fluttering round his head of golden hue."

—GRAHAME.

Turning into a by-lane, a young Song Thrush is observed squatted in the roadway. It has left the nest prematurely, its pinions not being sufficiently developed for flight. Fearing it might get run down by a vehicle, I transferred the little helpless thing, which looked exquisitely sweet in its first "spick and span" suit, from the danger zone to the adjacent field. After passing through the village of Bempton, the evening being far advanced, birds were flitting hither and thither to their roosting quarters, though Blackbirds, Song Thrushes, Corn Buntings, and Robins were singing here and there till I arrived back at Bridlington.

Effects of the War.

What effect has the war had on bird life? Probably no birds have suffered so much as the East Coast Seagulls, for the withdrawal of the trawlers from the Dogger Bank has meant that thousands of these birds are starving. In the past they have practically existed on the offal cast back into the sea by the fishermen. This source of supply having failed, huge flocks have flown inland, and are scouring the ploughed fields for any dainty morsels in the shape of worms, slugs, and other tit-bits. It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good, and I am confident the farmers have been pleased to see the birds on the fields, knowing full well they do a great deal to rid the soil of noxious insect pests. Quite recently a costly monument was erected in Salt Lake City to commemorate the Gulls which saved the crops of the first Mormon settlers by devouring the grasshoppers by which they were being devastated.

In conclusion, I may say that during the winter months our shores have been invaded by an abnormally large number of Wild Duck from the Continent. A keen East Coast sportsman states he has never seen so many during any winter of the last forty years.

Breeding Bullfinches in Captivity.

SIR.—This year I built a rustic aviary on one side of an elm tree covered with ivy, and with other branches, including a hawthorn tree, poking through the wire-netting. I nailed rough cork bark to the trunk of the elm and have had two nests, the first with five eggs and four birds, and the last four eggs and one lovely young cock bird. This pair of birds, with my Canary-Linnet Mules, are advertised in this week's issue.

The Affairs of the Rossendale C.B.S.

SIR.—I notice in CAGE BIRDS, Aug. 14th, a report of a meeting of the Rossendale C.B.S., at which I see they decided to rename the Society the Bacup Roller Canary Club. I am sorry to see this, as it has ever been an uphill fight to get a society for Canary fanciers together. I wonder what the fancy members of the society have to say in the matter, as I consider it a very high-handed proceeding to alter the name, and I presume objects, of this society, to suit the interests of a part of the members. In the first place I think they have no power to alter the name unless at the general meeting, and only then after each member has been written, and the object of the meeting has been explained. The only part I can see which redounds to the credit of the Roller portion, is in coming out in the open, instead of using the society for the advancement of their particular variety. We have stood by whilst they have run two open shows, giving specials, etc., out of the funds of the society, whilst the members who kept the show varieties must have a members' show, and at the last show rely on specials given by themselves, or from people who sympathised with them. If the open shows had been a failure, the loss would have been shared by the whole of the society. Another point which I would like explained is the reason for making the name Bacup, when the society comprises members from other parts of the district; it was intended to cover the Rossendale Valley. I would like to know what the other Yorkshire, Norwich, etc., fanciers have to say in the matter. I for one object to any change in the name, unless at a general meeting. Sorry I had not seen the report that there would be a meeting, or I should certainly have been present, and objected to any such change. I had intended not to exhibit at the next show if there had been one, but I was quite willing to give what help I could to make the show a success.

JOHN RUKIN.

Exterminating Lice on Birds.

SIR.—"Interested" has unwittingly put a wrong interpretation to my letter on this subject. He will find I did not say that the life history of these creatures was of no importance generally. On the contrary it is of the utmost importance—in its proper place, which is, or was, hardly the case in this correspondence. Neither do I say or think the subject is necessarily beyond the average fancier intellectually, but I do say it is eminently out of place in his hands. Only those who know the hours of close watching with the aid of a lens that may be necessary to verify one simple fact can fully appreciate this assertion. But any thinking person must appreciate the difficulties in the way of studying life histories of creatures which it is practically impossible to observe continuously in situ, but which must be removed from their natural surroundings and watched closely with the aid of a lens. Even then one may fall into error: Take, for instance, the plant louse, or aphid. One observer of them, having seen eggs deposited, from which young were hatched, might declare this was the method of reproduction; another, studying the same species under similar conditions, witnesses the production of living young, and is equally convinced that this is the method of propagation, and each would dispute the facts observed by the other. Yet more prolonged and patient watching would show that both were right, and that the species was in reality both oviparous and viviparous. Hence my using the term "obscure" in this connection. Though not perhaps very obscure in the sense that nothing is known about them they are very much so in other respects. I can only repeat now that the true lice possess a biting, or gnawing, mouth, and differ in feeding habits from the blood-sucking mites as much as, say, a gnat from a common house fly.

OBSERVER.

Blaenavon and its Show.

SIR.—It is of no interest to the Fancy to know what Mr. Vaughan was taught a mountain was; or to know the height of Blaenavon and Pontypool above sea level. Pontypool and Blaenavon are both in the same valley, and both are among the mountains; in fact, I think the majority of towns in Wales and Monmouthshire are among mountains. But the statement that Blaenavon was six miles higher up on the mountains was calculated to give exhibitors the impression that Blaenavon was in some outlandish place and a difficult place to send their exhibits to. Our society is a new society with nearly 30 members, and we wish to run our open show successfully so that is the reason why I corrected the statement.

Tortured Prisoners.

SIR.—I was pleased to see that the letter sent to the lay press by Mr. F. A. Cox has brought forth a trenchant reply by "Bird-Keeper" in the columns of CAGE BIRDS. The last paragraph of "Bird-Keeper's" letter sums up the matter admirably. There is no doubt that there is a section of people who look upon bird-keeping as a crime, and anything is good enough as a peg upon which to hang their attacks. This latest tirade is ostensibly against singing contests, but it is really directed against bird-keeping as a whole. I hope some abler pen than mine will take up the defence of the working-man who keeps a singing Linnet as a pet, and who exploits the singing powers of his pet in harmless competition against the birds belonging to other men in his own social station. It may or may not be that there are drunkards among Linnet fanciers, as among any other section of the community, and it may be also that there are "ruffians" among those who earn an honest addition to their scanty wages by the catching and selling of a few birds to provide these working-men with their contest singers. I notice that Mr. Cox in his letter refers to the "ruffians" who catch the birds, while Mr. Jerome stigmatises as a "pack of ruffians" those who buy the birds from the "ruffians" who catch them, and who use them in a form of sport which, to say the least, is no more worthy of indiscriminate attack than any form of sport indulged in by the monetary superiors of the workmen who find a means of relaxation in listening to the singing of their pet birds and a justifiable pride in the possession of one which is a bit better than the majority. The rich man loves a fleet greyhound or a fast race-horse. Why should not the poor man love an exceptionally talented Linnet? If he has to use a club-room in a public-house for his sport, is he any the worse for that than the courting nobleman who can run his greyhounds on the plains of Altcar, or the millionaire who can exploit his racers at Ascot? If the birds are improperly kept and improperly treated, by all means let us take steps to alter the circumstances, but violent and unwarranted abuse of bird-keepers in general is not a proper means to this end.

JUSTICE.

SIR.—If you were engaged and had been engaged for as many years as I have in attacking forms of cruelty to animals, you would realise that you might almost keep by you a stereotyped letter in reply to those dealing with the letters you send to the Press on the subject. For the letters contravening your assertions are nearly always anonymous—strangely so, considering the arrogant tone in which they are written. Your plain facts will always be characterised as "hysterics"; the fact that your opponents have not seen a thing will be tendered as an assured proof that you, who have, did not; and, most assuredly, such letters, whilst denying the cruelty in the first part, will palliate it in the last—will prove that the animals concerned really rather enjoy the cruelty complained of. "Bird-Keeper's" letter is on these well-worn lines.

"Bird-Keeper" says I have "evidently been told that in some district what are called singing contests are held in public-houses". I have seen the men coming away from the public-houses with the birds under their arms most fully demonstrating the fact that they have been to public-houses. Whether the birds are Linnets, Skylarks, Chaffinches, or Thrushes does not matter; they are wild birds, confined in cages in which they can hardly turn round, and condemned to perpetual darkness. I have myself seen such little cages containing birds tied up in black cloths suspended over the front doors of houses during the whole of a sunny afternoon. I have myself seen one of these "better men all round than their fellow workers who have no such hobby," coming from one of these matches so blunderingly drunk that he twice dropped the cage in front of me.

"Bird-Keeper" may be, and doubtless is, most proficient in his profession, but in the ethics of the case he is as mentally blind as, I believe, are many of these poor birds physically. I would ask you, in all fairness, to be allowed to put the case in all its aspects.

First, from the social point of view, what conceivable right has any individual man to abstract from the lanes and fields for his own personal uses and gain the birds whose singing will give pleasure to the whole community? The act can be defended, certainly, on the identical grounds which would justify me in abstracting the sunlight and fresh air, if possible. Secondly, we are to understand from "Bird-Keeper" that as these birds in their cramped and darkened captivity are "cherished by their owners as pets," they not only rather enjoy it, but are to be congratulated upon having the experience of leading a happier existence than their free fellows? Strange! One not having "Bird-Keeper's" wisdom would hardly have deduced the fact from an observation of caged birds. Thirdly, the one justification for the practice of caging birds at all is, and only can be, that man's cunning enables it to be done; the superior cunning of man over his fellow man, and over the beast, is responsible for all the cruelty there is in this world. Fourthly, we are to understand that the keeping of birds in cages makes men "better"; we are to picture the surge of finer feelings which rushes through the minds of these men when they capture the innocent songster who evinces such an ignorant instinct for liberty. I am to be pitied in that the appearances of the many men I have met who are engaged in this philanthropic work anything but bears out "Bird-Keeper's" dictum; and further, is it not remarkable that this source of inspiration never became apparent to such well-known nature writers as Richard Jefferies, Frank Buckland, and dozens of others?

In a word, "Bird-Keeper" has no more right, socially, morally, or individually, to deprive one of my birds of its liberty than I have to capture and confine one of his little children, if he is blessed with any; and whatever argument he may adduce in support of his own action I will adduce in support of mine.

FRANCIS A. COX.

A WINTER VISITOR.

The BLACK REDSTART is a dainty bird of sombre plumage which comes to us in October to replace its relative the Redstart of our woods and coppices, which will then be leaving us for the winter. In some parts of the Continent it frequents towns and villages in such numbers as to be known as "The House Redstart." It visits us only in small numbers and remains with us throughout the winter.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR.—This discussion is becoming interesting, but, if it is to reach any useful conclusion, it would be well to keep it as far as possible to the one point—instinct v. reasoning—and this should not be difficult seeing that my critics seem to have no more to say on the question of morality in birds. I note that my definition of instinct does not commend itself to Mr. Coe, and he is good enough to explain to us what is wrong with my definition, but I must confess myself unequal to the task of unravelling his meaning from his words. In any case, an argument about words is simply a waste of time, so it will be sufficient for my purpose to point out that, whether or not the dictionaries are right in defining instinct as a "tendency," the young of any species may inherit more than a tendency. "The human boy" (to quote Eden Phillpotts) inherits a strong tendency to swim, but, if thrown into deep water, he will drown. The duckling, on the other hand, not only inherits a tendency, but, at its very first attempt, will swim as well as any old duck; it appears, therefore, to have inherited not only the tendency, but the actual proficiency and experience of its ancestors in the art of swimming.

Turning then from that part of Mr. Coe's letter, which is perhaps a little vague to that which is quite definite, we come to a statement which is most arresting and most remarkable. He accepts the facts of the Thrush story, but, apparently with the object of belittling the achievement of this clever Thrush, he tells us that "bees would have done the same under similar circumstances." In order to show how remarkable this statement is, it will be necessary to briefly restate the problem that the Thrush had to solve. The Thrush, as your readers will recollect, missed the train owing to an alteration in the time-table. It was seen to return to the platform and to be greatly excited on finding that the train had left. The railway officials (to whom all bird-lovers are certainly much indebted) at once wired to the other terminus that the Thrush had missed the train, and that its arrival should be looked for; when the train arrived, the Thrush was on its nest. Now, consider that the Thrush had first to think the matter over somewhat in this way. "Where is my nest?" "On the train." "Where is the train?" "Travelling away from me down the line." "Can I catch the train?" "Yes." It then had to catch the train, which necessitated not only an accurate sense of direction, but a big muscular effort. In estimating the latter we have no exact data, but apparently the train had about 10 minutes' start, and, assuming that (being an Irish train) it did not average more than 20 miles per hour, and that the Thrush could fly 30 miles per hour, by a simple calculation we find that the Thrush would have to fly no less than 10 miles before it overtook the train, or, in other words, 20 minutes' hard flying.

Now, let us see what bees can do in the way of finding their house and home, if the latter be removed. Every bee-manual tells the beginner that, if he wishes to move a hive from one end of his garden to the other, he must not move the hive more than a few yards at a time, or the bees will fail to find it, and, returning to the place where the hive was, will there perish miserably. No two scientists probably have done more to "write up" in a popular way the cleverness of insects than the veteran French entomologist, M. Henri Fabre, and the late Sir John Lubbock, yet Fabre (experimenting with Mason-bees) found that only about a third of the bees he released found their way home, though the maximum distance was only rather more than two miles. Lubbock's experiments led him to the conclusion that "there is no sufficient evidence among insects of anything which can justly be called a sense of direction." Professor Romanes' experiments were even more convincing. Taking some bees from a hive situated only a few hundred yards from the seashore, with lawns between the sea and the hive and flower-gardens on each side, he found that of the first lot of bees liberated at sea, none returned; of the second, liberated on the seashore, none returned, and that actually, when liberated on the lawns only 200 yards from the hive, not one returned.

Such, then, is the intelligence and sense of direction of bees; yet Mr. Coe asserts that they would have found their home on the moving train as easily as the Thrush did. Now, there are two tests that we may always ask our critics to submit to; one is that they are sure of their facts, and the other that they are not arguing for the mere sake of argument. I am entitled therefore to ask Mr. Coe to prove his very remarkable statement by actual experiment, more especially as the experiment could be so easily made (by driving a stock of bees into a skep, sending the hive on by train, and releasing the bees when the train had received a start of ten minutes). As he would no doubt like to invest something on the event to cover the cost of the experiment, he can send any sum he would like to stake to the Editor, and I will cover it by a similar amount. If he thinks that there would be any difficulty in making the experiment on a railway, I shall be perfectly satisfied if the hive is conveyed for, say, a dozen miles in a straight line on a motor-car at a speed of 20 miles per hour with ten minutes start.

Of course, Mr. Coe may make the conditions of the proposed test as similar as possible to those which the Thrush had to grapple with. He can choose a road in a locality well-known to the bees, and he can educate his bees to follow a motor car, in which case they will have a great advantage over the Thrush, which, on the very first occasion that the carriage was put in motion, found itself whisked away to the very end of the line. What I want is a fair and square test of the comparative efficiency of the intelligence of birds and the instinct of insects.

We cannot allow him to evade the test by saying that bees have never yet selected a moving train as a domicile, or any similar quibble under the heading of "similar circumstances." What he has to show is, that Lubbock and Romanes were wrong in concluding that insects had no sense of direction; also that bees would have had sufficient intelligence to guess where the train was at the moment; and, lastly, that they would have had sufficient perseverance to follow the train for ten miles, in which connection it may be interesting to mention that the experiments of modern apiarists have shown that the hive-bee never ventures to wander further than three miles from the hive. If he cannot show this, he will stand convicted of having wasted our time by addressing us on a subject with regard to which he has still much to learn.

When instinct and reason walk hand in hand, it is difficult to compare them, but when they are opposed it is often possible to note which is the most useful as a means to an end. Mr. Coe tells us that instinct is a "higher psychometric force," and here again he successfully conceals his meaning under a very long word; I thought we were talking about mentality in birds, not about psychology. An insect, acting by instinct, often seems to do very clever things, and it gets along all right as long as it has only to deal with the same problems that its ancestors had to deal with, but, when it has to face new conditions it generally shows itself to be almost a perfect fool. For instance, M. Fabre found that a Mason-bee, when a small hole was made in the side of a cell, continued to pour honey into the latter, and finally sealed over the empty cell; it never thought of plugging the hole. Similarly a species of Spheg, which preys on a Grasshopper, and drags the latter to its nest by its antennae, when the Grasshopper's antennae were cut off, left its prey in despair because it was not wise enough to seize the Grasshopper by a leg.

Birds, on the other hand, seem to be able to throw instinct overboard at any moment, and to adapt themselves to new conditions by pure reasoning. For instance, we all know how the excreta of young birds are collected and carried away by the parents, and this seems to be solely a matter of instinct; but it was recently noted (in the "Field") that some young Wrens, hatched in a small box with a contracted entrance, themselves collected the excreta and passed the latter out through the entrance to the parents who then carried them away. Another and more remarkable instance, which I think may not have been published before, was mentioned to me recently. It is a matter of history that a number of Australian White-eyes (Zosterops) migrated to New Zealand—a wonderful flight, for so tiny a bird, of 1,200 miles across open sea. Now, the White-eye builds an open, cup-shaped nest; but these colonists which landed in a strange country at first built nests of the Weaver type, entered by a hanging tube, but afterwards reverted to the cup-shape. It seems an almost irresistible conclusion that, finding themselves in a strange country, and not knowing what new dangers their nests might be exposed to from snakes, lizards, etc., they took special precautions which were subsequently found to be unnecessary. Consider also the many clever ways in which birds exploit and take advantage of insects by their superior intelligence; the habit of some species of birds of building their nests close to hornets' nests in South Africa (recently mentioned in CAGE BIRDS) is also very common in S. America, and excellent protection is thus obtained gratis. We may also instance the little Honey-guide, which cannot extract the honey-comb from the hollow tree itself, but is clever enough to lead the natives to the spot, well knowing that it will receive some comb as a reward. In these various ways we see that the intelligence of birds easily triumphs over the instinct of insects.

We are much indebted to Messrs. Lott and MacArthur for their very interesting contributions. The death of the Grey Parrot from grief is by no means a unique occurrence, and supports my contention that birds are three parts mind. Incidentally, did any reader ever personally know a member of our own species really die from grief? One cannot help admiring the genuineness of birds; when they grieve, they do really grieve; when they do not grieve they do not pretend to grieve.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SEED SAMPLE (Dan).—The seed sent is not summer rape, which is what is generally implied by the term "German rape," but is known as winter rape, and in reality is probably charlock, or wild mustard. It will undoubtedly increase the tendency to looseness in your birds. For use in combination with canary seed as staple diet get a sample of genuine summer rape, which is of a mild and nutty flavour when a little is chewed in the mouth, and you will doubtless soon find the looseness disappear. Every second day for a week or so give half a teaspoonful of the summer rape that has been boiled, and on the alternate days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle and crushed arrowroot biscuit. This should set matters right, but, if it does not, give instead of the boiled rape a morsel of bread and milk which has been well sprinkled with carbonate of bismuth, and add to the drinking water for one day only as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice, and after this give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of opium and dilute sulphuric acid for a day or two.

PUPILS' PERFORMANCE (Roller).—Although the young cocks may not have heard any other song but that of the schoolmaster, it is not possible to guarantee that they will all have a song quite similar to his, but in a general way the tutor's song will form the basis of the young birds' performances. The amount of divergence depends to some extent upon the breeding of the birds, the young from a highly-trained strain of songsters under a schoolmaster with a different type of song being the most liable to intersperse notes or tours off their own bat, which may either be inherited, or merely variations of some of the tours which the tutor sings. But on the whole these are exceptional cases, and the rule will be that the young will develop a song which bears a strong "family resemblance" to that of the tutor under which they are trained. You do not say whether or not the tutor is out of song in consequence of being in moult. If this is so, it is rather unfortunate, as the young coming nicely forward in song would benefit very considerably by his tuition just now. If he is out of song your best plan will be to keep your ears open, and if any of the young appear to be going seriously wrong cover their cages rather closely to keep them quiet until the tutor takes up his work again.

INSECT PESTS (R. M.).—As you intend re-painting the cages, deal with them as follows to clear out the red mites. Remove all dirt from insides and outsides as thoroughly as possible, and rake out any open joints or cracks or holes in the wood, with a pin if necessary, especially where any white powdery dust appears, on to a sheet of paper, and at once burn the debris. Dissolve an ounce of camphor in half a pint of methylated spirit, and paint the cage all over with this inside and out, using a small paint brush to work it into the joints. Allow cage to stand to dry for one clear day, then repeat the painting; allow a similar interval and repeat the painting a third time. Then when dry paint or distemper the insides and repaint and varnish outside. Be careful to go through all your stock of cages at the same time, do not neglect doing all the appliances, and any staging, racks, or even the nails on which the cages have hung, as thoroughly as the cages themselves. To clear out the lice catch the birds and dust very freely with Icarine powder, working it well into the base of the plumage with a small wad of wool, or blow it in with a small bellows, then roll bird in a small handkerchief, leaving only the beak free for breathing, and lay in an empty cage for a quarter of an hour, then release each patient, and after it has shaken and preened itself return it to its own cage. Repeat this treatment twice at intervals of a week. See that the cage in which the birds shake out the powder is cleaned afterwards. Give the bath every third day, and add to each pint of the water used in it a teaspoonful of sulphurated potash each time for the next month. (Askie: Maybe a little can de Cologne will be appreciated whilst sulphurated baths are in evidence).

SWOLLEN VENT (Cymro).—It would have been a great help had you mentioned the condition of the droppings. Do not interfere with the swelling, but try the following treatment for two or three weeks, and if it has not disappeared in that time, please write again, and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further. In addition to the staple of plain canary give every second day a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, well sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, teazle, white millet and chopped sunflower seeds. Give a morsel of banana three times a week instead of green food. In the water every second day for a week add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice, and in the next week give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumha and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day.

VALUE OF BIRD (B. G.).—Sorry, but it is not possible to satisfactorily place any value upon a bird without seeing it. Quite as much, or maybe even more, depends upon the size and shape of the bird as upon the fact of its being ticked, however attractive the tick may be. But you do not even say where the tick is placed, or the size of it. As you say you intend exhibiting it, I would advise you to do so at some established open show where one of our staff is judging, and then you could send a sealed request for a valuation of the bird to the secretary to be handed to the judge after judging had taken place, and in this way you might have an expert valuation of the bird, which would be infinitely more useful than any that was given without an examination of the bird. Not being colour fed will tell against it more or less according to the keenness of the competition, unless you show it in a class for non-fed, or natural colour birds.

WATERY EYE (E. Horne).—See that the perches in the cage are not so unduly rough and ragged as to irritate the eye when the bird rubs its head about them, and keep them as clean as possible. Get a pennyworth of camomile flowers from a chemist, place six or eight in a breakfast cup, fill up with boiling water, cover, and allow to infuse beside the fire for an hour. Then strain off the clear liquid, add small teaspoonful of boracic acid, and 20 drops of tincture of opium. Catch the bird and bathe the eye for a few minutes with a little of this concoction every evening until the eye has recovered its normal condition. Use a little fresh fluid, and a fresh wad of wool each time, and burn that which has been used at once.

SIZE OF SHOW CAGE (F. W. Vancouver).—The standard Yorkshire show cage is open wire all round, with arched top. The outside measurements are 9ins. long, 6ins. wide, 11ins. high at the ends (eaves) and 14ins. to centre of arch.

YORKSHIRE AND ROLLER (First Seasonite).—(1) The Roller has evidently not been in breeding condition, assuming, of course, that it is an undoubted cock. It is not very unusual for a cock to cease singing when placed with a hen, and not resume until again separated. It is quite too late now to give any treatment with the object of bringing them into condition to begin breeding, as either of the birds may drop into moult any day now, even if they have not already done so. Neither do I think it would be any use mating the cock with the Goldfinch hen, though you might try it if you are particularly anxious to do so, and if the hen is ready to start nesting at once. You would, of course, need to have a hen Canary nesting at the same time to which, if necessary, and it would probably be so, you could transfer the eggs to be hatched and reared. (2) The toes are probably a little tender and sore, which is not at all unusual at this season whilst the moult is in progress. Bathe the foot for a few minutes each day for a week or so in a solution of weak hazel—a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing, dry carefully, and gently anoint with a little boracic ointment, but do not leave on any surplus grease to collect sand and dirt. See that the perches are of a proper size for the bird, and made of nice soft pine wood. (3) I cannot be quite sure of the variety of this bird from your description, but judging from the dark legs I think it is most likely a green ticked or uneven marked, or, rather, what would be termed in most other breeds a green variegated.

If not this, it is a green-cinnamon cross. If you had mentioned the colour of the parents I might have been more definite. To remedy the crumpling as far as possible, see that it has plenty of head room in the cage, strictly avoid placing the hands upon the top of the cage when doing anything about it, and give all green food and such dainties in a small rack fixed sufficiently high up on the cage front above the end of a perch that the bird has to stand bold upright to reach it. You might also fix a piece of loaf sugar firmly in the wires in this position. This, and always handling the cage when necessary around the bottom part, and now and again gently scratching across the bottom, will eventually greatly improve the bird in this respect.

DOES NOT SING (W.D.).—Now that the bird is again recovering from the moult the following treatment for a week or two should suffice to bring it into song in a natural manner. Continue your present staple dietary, and give half a teaspoonful of the mixed packet seed twice a week, separately from the rest. Every second day for a fortnight, and twice a week afterwards, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and two drops of sherry mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. In the water, every second day for a week, add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid. After this give instead, every second day for a fortnight, 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. If he does not show signs of coming into song at the end of this treatment your best course would be to let him hear a free singing cock for a week or two if possible, which might incite him to emulation. As regards the strained toe treat it the same as advised to "First Seasonite (2)" in this issue, except that you may omit the anointing.

VARIED (Derfla B.).—(1) Yes, you can improve your dietary by omitting so large a proportion of ingra, and also the hemp from the staple mixture. Give a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape only. Give all other seeds separately as occasional treats rather than as a material portion of the staple diet. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of the following seed mixture, which you may keep ready mixed. Two parts each of hemp and white millet; one part each of black rape or cole and niger, and a half part each of maw, teazle, and gold of pleasure. In very cold weather, in winter, you may add one part broken groats, and a quarter part each of linseed and chopped sunflower seeds. A small teaspoonful of egg food or some substitute once or twice a week, and a morsel of green food daily, for which you may substitute a morsel of sweet fruit twice a week in winter when green food is not available will complete a good and efficient dietary. (2) Treat the hen with swollen vent as advised to "Cymro" in this issue, for a fortnight, and if not better in that time, please write again, and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further. (3) The only effect likely to be produced on a cock by removing him out of a cold room into a kitchen, presumably a warmer place, in November, would be a stimulating one, and probably bring him into breeding condition earlier than is desirable. This, of course, is assuming that the bird would not be exposed to cold draughts, fumes of burning lights in the evenings, nor rapid extremes of temperature in the kitchen. The effects of these unhealthy conditions are too manifold to speculate as to which the bird may first fall a victim. Then if you wished to return him to the cold room you could not do so until the weather became mild in spring without running a risk of throwing the bird into an abnormal moult.

LISTLESS NORWICH HENS (D.W.).—Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Give separately every third day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of scalded summer rape seed, and on the intervening days give first a morsel of banana, or a spray of watercress if the latter is available, and next half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts niger, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and you may also stick a cube of hard common salt in the wires for them to peck at for a time. See that they are not exposed to cold draughts. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea every second day for a week, and in the next week give instead 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day.

HEN NOT MOULTING (W.A.).—It is quite too late now to think of forcing a hen into a moult and to expect her to breed after she is through with it. The best thing I can advise you in the circumstances is to turn her into a flight for a few weeks, when she will probably have an early autumn moult. This, of course, would entail the loss of her services this season, but that would be more of an advantage than otherwise if she is a young hen, as she would be in all the better trim for good work next season. At the same time, if she is in sound, robust health, and active, and shows any desire to nest, there is no reason why you should not let her take the chance of bringing up a brood this season. I suppose there is no probability that the hen moulted early last autumn, as many birds did, in which case a moult would not be due until after this breeding season.

HIGH CONDITION (Nemo).—There is nothing at all to feel concerned about in the birds being in somewhat high condition in the circumstances in which they are kept. Indeed, it is only what you might expect, and is by no means a bad sign. In addition to your present staple, give the cocks the mixed seed once a week only, and on the other occasion give instead a similar quantity of summer rape. Stop giving the hens mixed seed altogether, and give instead the same quantity of niger, which is the same as ingra. Stop the apple and give instead a spray of watercress three times a week. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for three consecutive days, and repeat this once in each week if they still come forward in condition. This is all that will be necessary for you to do.

UNFERTILE EGGS (J. Upton).—(1) It would not be unwise to give any satisfactory reason for the infertility of your birds without much more definite particulars as to the method of your management, age of birds, etc. If the infertility only attaches to the cock you commenced with five years ago, and of whose age you are doubtful, I should be inclined to think he was past his useful career as a stock bird. You ought to have tested this point by mating the hen that had the clutch of unfertile eggs with him last season, with another cock that was in good condition and filling eggs satisfactorily. Then, if the hen had a clutch of fertile eggs with the other cock, it would have gone to show that the cock was in all probability the faulty partner. Considering his age now and the circumstances, I should advise you not to trust him again, but get a young and vigorous cock in good song to breed with in the coming season. (2) Perhaps you did not persevere enough with the feeding of the young you were hand-rearing last season, which caused them to die at a month old. When they reach this age young birds are often difficult to continue feeding. Or it might have been due in some way to keeping them over hot water. Keeping the nest near a dry heat will help considerably in hand-rearing, but not over hot water if it means subjecting them to any moisture or steam. Of one thing you may rest assured, it was not due to the absence of sand grit in their food.

BARE OF FEATHERS (C.E.S.).—I am not quite sure whether the bird is really a Canary or some other species. Try the following treatment for a month, and if not greatly improved, write again, and describe the bird as fully as you can. Keep fairly warm, and not too near the window, in which situation the temperature must necessarily fluctuate very much. In addition to staple diet give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flour of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar every third day, and on the intervening days give first a little sweet fruit, banana for preference, and next a spray of watercress or some other green salad, but be careful to see that it is quite free from frost. Add a sprinkling of white millet to the staple seed diet. In the water give ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence every second day for a fortnight, then miss a week, and resume and give it for another fortnight. Allow it to bathe freely, but see that it is not exposed to chill until quite dry. You may slightly anoint the bare areas where feathers have fallen from with sulphur ointment or Lanocillin twice a week for the first fortnight.

HEAVY BREATHING (A. E. L.).—I am afraid this bird is too far gone to be more than temporarily relieved, or otherwise you must have omitted the most important step in the previous treatment, which lies in the removal of the exciting causes of the condition as far as possible. Unless the latter step is taken treatment is of very little use at all. Attend well to this point now; keep the bird fairly warm; and give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every third day for a month or so, and add to the water five drops each of oxymel of squils, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and tincture of tolu every second day, during the same period.

ABOUT RINGS (Doubtful).—What you have been told about the consequence of putting rings on Canaries is—well, "tommy rot." There is absolutely no cruelty attached to them whatever, and if they did collect filth the blame for that could only rightly be attached to the owner, and not the ring, because the rings would only collect filth in cages that were in a disreputable condition. As regards their causing death the risk is almost negligible. You would find the subject fully dealt with in Part VIII. of "Our Canaries," also the method of putting them on illustrated.

EFFECT OF PAINT (Novice, R.E.G.).—If allowed to set and dry hard before the cages are used for keeping birds in, there can be no harmful effect of painting cage fronts with aluminium paint.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

STOCKING AN AVIARY (A. Harrison).—Your aviary would not hold more than four pairs of birds comfortably. It is a great mistake to overcrowd. I would advise the following pairs: Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, and Redpoll, or Twite. A pair of Siskins would look rather better as regards colour than either the Redpolls or Twites, but I do not think it wise to include them in a small aviary with the Goldfinches, as they are such greedy birds that they invariably eat up all the food intended for the Goldies. With this collection you will have a couple of pairs of birds of good colour and get some amount of song from the Goldfinches and Linnets. Your staple food would consist of the following mixture: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, and summer rape 1 part. You could make up another mixture of hemp, teazle, and maw, and give a spoonful per bird three times a week, and on other days a spoonful of wild seed mixture which you can now purchase in packet form from most corn merchants. Sunflower seed should be given daily. All these birds will live outside during the winter months. You must be careful to prevent the mice contaminating the seed, and see that during frosty weather the water vessel is free from ice.

SHOW CAGE FOR THRUSH (Same).—I quite agree with you that for evening shows a 2ft. cage is somewhat cumbersome. Make one 20ins. long, 16 high, and 10 from back to front, with two fairly stout perches; paint the inside a pale blue grey, almost white. A cage like this will do capital for evening shows, but it is not large enough for exhibition over a longer period, and as he is only in it for an hour or two you need not trouble about food and water, or you may just have one hole in the front for a water tin. (2) Your best method of capture is to have a trap cage near the aviary, put a Redpoll or Siskin in the compartment made expressly for the call-bird, and bait the trap with a spray of elder or privet berries. Your question as to the kinds of foreigners to keep has been forwarded to Mr. Page, and his reply will appear under the heading of "Foreign Querists." Kindly note that queries upon separate subjects should be written on separate sheets of paper.

LINNET WITH INJURY (W. Gibbon).—I am afraid you can do no more for your Linnet than you are now doing. The bird will recover and possibly show little signs of the injury. I know of an exhibition hybrid that had a similar accident, and it is still being shown. Anyway, even if he does not carry himself sufficiently well to exhibit I have no doubt that he will be able to pair. Keep him perfectly quiet, and if you feel you are unable to set the limb properly leave it alone and trust to nature. Birds make some wonderful recoveries from accidents.

FAILURE WITH GOLDFINCH (J. Mees).—The question of unfertile eggs is one of the problems of bird-keeping that none of us can quite understand. An instance came under my notice this season, where two pairs of birds were unfertile; my suggestion to change over the cock birds proved successful. All the birds were apparently perfectly healthy and they were the only two pairs in the room with all unfertile eggs the first round. If your Finch is healthy, and a suitable bird for Mule breeding, I would not part with him, but pair him another year to a different hen. Of course it is possible that had you paired him with several hens this season he would not have bred; it seems to require very little with birds to upset reproduction. An indifferent moult is a common cause, and it is quite an ordinary occurrence for a bird to be unfertile one year and breed the next. (2) I have noticed the peculiar action you mention in the Hedge sparrow, but can offer no explanation. In other birds and animals there are equally strange proceedings at pining time.

BIRDS IN AN AVIARY (First Seasonite).—The number of birds you mention is quite enough for your aviary, and I should feel inclined to remove a couple of the Bullies. You do not say the sex of these; anyway, leave in a hen, if you have one; more than one would cause trouble when nesting. (2) The Goldfinch you have just purchased would breed next season, and would be quite suitable for Mule breeding with a hen Canary. Of course it is too late to think of doing anything this season. The majority of birds are now in the moult, and at this time should have just a little extra good food.

THE WAXWING (E. P. Maltby).—The Waxwing does not breed in this country, and I have never heard of it doing so in an aviary. These birds are winter visitors to Great Britain, coming from Northern Europe. Their nesting period is during our summer, but the nest has seldom been found; it is difficult to locate in the vast pine forests of the North.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

YOUNG AMAZON PARROT MOULTING (Seddon).—The first moult in this country is frequently a protracted one, and unless you see the bird pulling and nibbling its feathers you may assume the loss of feathers as normal. The chemical food is quite in order. The main thing to keep in view is to keep it free from draught, yet it must have light and air, and to keep its bowels well regulated. The bowels should move quite freely without being watery loose. Give one teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the drinking water as often as may be required to maintain this "happy medium." You are correct as to your method of spraying, but use tepid water and occasionally put a little quassia essence in it as a precaution against parasites. I do not recommend mealworms or any other kind of animal food for caged parrots. Diet: Seed mixture, boiled maize, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuits, stale crusts, plain cake and green food. Cuttlebone and parrot grit should be regularly supplied, and a thickish piece of the branch of a tree kept in the cage for the bird to exercise its mandibles upon. As regards boiled maize, many Amazons like a little, but if your bird is not accustomed to it, and it is eating heartily of the other items of the diet, I should not introduce it. As to perches, your best plan will be to put three in the cage, pieces of natural branches with the bark on, of say, 1in., 1 1/2in., and 1 3/4in. diameter respectively. Place the thickest in the bird's favourite sleeping place. Once established, Amazons are hardy birds, and if kept out of draught, wholesomely fed, and not allowed to become constipated, are usually very long-lived birds.

RE MOCKING BIRD (Mocking Bird).—The common or American Mocking Bird (Mimus polyglottus) is about the size of the Song Thrush, but it has a long bill, legs, and tail, and in contour it resembles a Wagtail. The upper parts are ashen-brown with dark centres to most of the feathers; the chin is white, the remainder of the under-parts are white slightly suffused with brown, the breast is tinted with ash-colour; the lobes are dusky and there is an almost white eye streak above the eye. The wings are very dark brown, crossed with two white stripes formed by the white tips of the greater and the median coverts. The tail is blackish, with white outer feathers and tips of the same colour. The bill, legs, and feet are black. The sexual difference was given in the reply you refer to. There are several species of Mocking Birds, and I do not think your bird is referable to either, but is some species of Spectacled (Mocking) Thrush, probably the Chinese. The true Mocking Bird does well on insects of all kinds, both in the imago, larval, and pupal stages; also ripe fruit, being especially fond of grapes and insectile mixture (soft food). The best food and water vessel is one that is fixed to a small door and comes out with the door, to the latter is fixed a small wire grid which closes up the door opening while food is being replenished.

FOREIGNERS TO RUN WITH FINCHES (Same).—There is no reason why you should not put them in pairs. Grey and Green Singing Finches for song, Napoleon and Taha Weavers (cocks only) for rich colour, and Avadavats, Gold-breasted and Orange-cheeked Waxbills and Zebra Finches. These would make a pleasing variety, and all are hardy species, but you will not find them easy to obtain at the present time. If you add a mixture of white and Indian millet in equal parts and hang up a millet spray or two at times, it will suffice, as any other seeds they fancy for variety they will pick out of the British Finch mixture. Seeding and flowering grass is the green food most favoured by Foreign species. In the winter, frame lettuce and ripe apple may be given. Most Finches fancy a mealworm or small spider occasionally, and they are the better for them.

SEED SHELLING (Proctor).—I believe one of the large seed merchants who regularly advertise with us supply shelled millet, and another firm sell a small machine for the purpose at a low price. I never give shelled seeds myself, but if I wanted any in a hurry I should spread out some millet on paper on a smooth table and pass a roller over it, using sufficient pressure to crack the shell (husk) and then blow these away. Only the Nutshell "Budgerigars" is from my pen; it is 2d. post free from our manager. Neither skated nor shelled seeds are necessary, as their parents feed them till they are able to crack seed for themselves. You can supply broken biscuit and stale crusts if you choose, but many individuals will not touch these.

PARROT OR PARAKEET? (Anxious).—Your description of colour, etc., indicates your bird to be the Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. The majority only utter an occasional word; some not even this. A few become really talented, and others vary between this and the non-talking stage. If yours is really a tame bird, persevere with it. Give it a name and address it by this whenever you give it a tit-bit, and whenever you come in contact with it say something to it; for instance, if you call it Jocy, say such things as "Pretty Jocy," "Good morning," "Hallo," and the like. When it responds to any of these things, then you start on something more ambitious. It's all a matter of quietness and patience. See that nothing occurs in its vicinity to alarm it. I should have a place in your living-room, where there will always be someone with it.

WILL THEY MATE? (First Seasonite).—It is all a matter of the time your individual birds will take to settle down, but if they do not breed this season, having had them for so short a time, you will have no cause for dissatisfaction. When in breeding condition the cere round the nostrils of the male is bright blue; that of the female varies from dark cream-colour to ruddy brown in different Individuals. While you can get it, supply as much seeding and flowering grass as they will eat. There should be four husks put up for them, and if you supply canary and white millet seed, in equal parts, give them a millet spray twice a week and do not omit cuttlebone and grit. When in breeding condition they should go to nest, but whether it will be this season or next it is impossible to say. A tablespoonful of crushed oats may be given once a week and without limit when they are feeding young.

IS IT LARGE ENOUGH? (T.H.R.S.S.).—Yes, you could keep two pairs in such a cage. Put a husk in each corner near the top of cage, with the husk openings facing the light. As regards the kitchen recess, providing it gets plenty of light and is not hot and stuffy, it will do well enough for the birds; but if the temperature is subject to sudden fluctuations between the periods you are cooking and when you are not, then no birds will do well in such a position. Such conditions would set up abnormal moults and other ills. Budgerigars need a light and airy position, and a reasonably even temperature without draught. If not subjected to draught they do perfectly well in an unheated room all the year round. Better get our Nutshell "Budgerigars," 2d. post free from our manager. You will not then be in any doubt as to procedure.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis 2s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Blue Pigeon.—Parrot, female; cause of death, inflammation of the bowels, following impaction.

Rex Cliff.—Canary succumbed to pneumonia, both lungs being affected.

Miss Louisa Joffree.—Scotch Fancy was very thin and anemic, brought about by septicaemia.

Mr. John Allison.—Bird succumbed to pneumonia.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. Kegan.—Recipes for making birdlime have appeared from time to time in our columns, but they are generally accompanied by the obvious statement that when only a small quantity is required it is better to buy it than to undertake the very messy task of making it.

They comprise expert advice on everything appertaining to the keeping, feeding, breeding and general management of Canaries, Mules and Hybrids, British and Foreign Birds. Send along at once for the one most suited to your requirements. It will pay you.

A SEASONABLE BOOK.

The Stock Book.

Makes Bird Breeding Easy.

"Cage Birds" Breeding Room Register and Bird Keeper's Account Book.

(Copyright.)

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

Is framed on novel lines and contains many entirely new departures. Is absolutely indispensable to everyone interested in the hobby. This Breeding Room Register and Bird Keeper's Account Book offers in a handy form a means of keeping—

The complete pedigree and description of every bird in one's room.

A full record of the season's breeding experiences.

An account of every young bird reared and how it was disposed of.

A register of one's doings at the shows (the most complete and useful yet devised).

A cash account for the year.

A profit and loss account of the season's proceedings, and a balance-sheet showing how much one has invested in the hobby.

A series of Registers will thus furnish a concise record of the career of a fancier as a breeder and an exhibitor from year to year, or over any number of years.

MANY USEFUL EMERGENCY AND OTHER HINTS WILL ALSO BE FOUND IN ITS PAGES.

THE BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

By H. NORMAN.

The Most Thorough and Practical Work on British Birds ever Produced. Published in two parts and complete bound in cloth. Part I. Hardbills. Deals in the fullest manner with Linnets, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, and all other varieties of Finches. Part II. Softbills. With Blackbirds Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid.
Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist,
MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft feeds and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

ALWAYS USE "CAGE BIRDS" DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers. In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit system should be insisted upon.

1. PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2. END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3. AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4. IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended; and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5. A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6. GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing his receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7. FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale is effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8. GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9. PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10. DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient plus the extra postage incurred has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

Telegrams—"Aviculture, London." Tel. No. 5229 Holborn.

The Editor is always glad to receive and consider suitable contributions, whether articles, sketches, or photographs. Provided an addressed envelope, sufficiently stamped, accompanies same, every effort will be made to return unaccepted contributions promptly, but he does not in any case hold himself responsible for their safety.

All matter intended for publication must be written or typed on one side of paper only, and must reach us not later than the first post on Tuesday if insertion in the next issue is desired.

Twitterings.

We have appointed Mr. Wm. Mundell, of Bradford, to judge our show on Dec. 4, writes Mr. J. Ainsworth, sec. Old Shildon Workmen's Club C.B.C.

We hear Mr. R. A. Newley, of Stockwell, has received a rather large order for cages from Durban, S. Africa. In times like these it is cheering to hear of a colonial fancier having the grit to send to the old country for cages.

Crystal Palace and Penge C.B.S. are still going strong, writes Mr. W. D. Fryett, sec. Thanks to the kind assistance of their treasurer, Mr. Hutton, they have been able to secure two more five guinea cups for competition. For further particulars apply to the sec. See Club Notice.

Owing to business pressure I have been reluctantly compelled to resign the secretaryship of the Glasgow, Queen's Park and Dist. C.B.S., writes Mr. E. Holliday. Mr. A. K. Hunter, 142, Aitkenhead Road, Glasgow, has been elected as sec., and all communications should be addressed accordingly.

It is with regret, writes Mr. E. Norton, hon. sec. Leeds C.B.S., I learn of the unfortunate accident that has befallen Mr. H. J. Mennard, the popular chairman of our society. He fell from a ladder on Thursday last and broke his thigh. Members and friends, I am sure, will wish him a speedy recovery.

The original drawings of our front page illustrations, and of most other pictures appearing in our pages, may be purchased by readers for framing. Terms for any picture will be sent on application.

The Value of Our Query Columns.

I have great pleasure in reporting, writes Mr. E. J. Morgan, that I treated my Grey Parrot, which was suffering from indigestion, as per Mr. Wesley T. Page's advice of some weeks ago, with the result that it has had a complete cure. Many thanks for your kind and valuable attention.

The Bird-Keepers' Roll of Honour.

PERHAPS no section of the community has responded more generously to the country's call throughout the great struggle which has been raging for more than a year than those Englishmen who are generally known as "bird fanciers." Aviculturists of high degree, middle-class bird keepers, and working men, all have left their ordinary avocations to give of their best for their country's sake, many, alas, never to return. It has been suggested that we institute, with the help of our readers, a Roll of Honour of Bird Lovers. Foremost among those who could help us in this direction are the secretaries of bird societies throughout the kingdom, and if these secretaries will furnish us with the names of those of their members who are serving with the Colours we shall be glad to combine them into a list as a permanent record. If they give up their lives in their patriotism the fact will, of course, become known to the various secretaries, and a line to us will ensure a record being made of the sad occurrence, while if they are sent back among our wounded heroes that fact also could be noted and forwarded to us. What we ask secretaries to do therefore is: (1) Send us at once the names of any members serving with the Colours; (2) furnish us with news of the death of or injury to any member; (3) send us the names of any members invalided and discharged; and (4), when the war is over, send the names of such members as have been through its horrors and returned unharmed to resume their hobby of bird-keeping with its peaceful delights.

A Fine Record.

Mr. A. Harper (not G. A. Harper, as printed), the report of whose lecture on the Roller Canary was commenced in our last issue, writes: "I have reared 66 out of 72 hatched this season, so I think my method worth giving a trial."

How Pedigree Tells.

Many thanks for publishing the lovely drawing of my unfledged buff cock on the front page of your valuable CAGE BIRDS. He was only shown once, and then carried off the novice trophy for your humble, which was the second time I have won it. His father and a cousin both took firsts in the same show, and a brother a second prize, so I did pretty well with my four birds. I am glad to be able to say that I bred both the parents and grandparents of him. I have only this one bird left now, not being able to look after them, as I am serving in the Territorials, but shall, of course, take up breeding again when this horrible time is over. Again thanking you and wishing you every success.—CHAS. W. TUCK.

Wedding Bells.

The well-known cage-maker, Mr. R. A. Newley, of Stockwell, was married on July 31 to Miss G. E. Edney, at St. Andrew's Church, Stockwell. The vicar, the Rev. Hook Longden, assisted by the Rev. Hicks, performed the ceremony. A numerous company of friends and relatives of the happy couple were present, and afterwards attended a reception and wedding breakfast at Mrs. Edney's. Both Mr. Newley and his bride are very popular in the district, and received a goodly number of costly and useful presents from their large circle of friends. Among those who sent, and were present at the ceremony, were Mrs. Edney, Messrs. L. Edney, W. G. Edney, P. S. Edney, H. Edney, W. Edney, H. Bridgen, Mr. and Mrs. Powell, Miss G. Edwards, J. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Baker, Messrs. T. Mansell, G. Murrell, Mesdames Powell, Ruddick, Trewin, Petty, Coney, Deacon, Jacobs, Mrs. and Miss Coney, the Misses Edney, Rogers, Ruddick, and Light. We are sure all readers of CAGE BIRDS, and fanciers who know Mr. Newley personally, will wish the couple every happiness.

The Goldfinch's Exquisite Flight.

As exquisite and almost as airy as that of the thistle-down itself is the autumn flight of the Goldfinches in their chase of it. By the end of August their latest nestlings are active on the wing, and old and young set forth together in pursuit of the kernels in the thistle-down. Glades where Goldfinches are rare in the spring grow alert with their musical calls, which to many ears are sweeter than their set song; and above the pastures brown in September the sunlight strikes through the gold splashes in their outspread wings, as it does through the barred feathers of the Hoopoe in the hot south. There seem never so many Goldfinches as in September, partly because all their young are still with them, but more because of their restless and omnipresent ways. All the countryside is their post-road, says a writer in "The Times," and their halts are the thorny beds of thistles foaming into silken effervescence under the September sun. Their own downy nests of May are defaced now, explored by curious spiders and trodden by the woodmouse rambling in the boughs. On the north winds of autumn the thistle-down leads them to the south, and the winter must die, for spring to be born again, before that gay and tender call-note will question in the garden limes.

THE EXHIBITION YELLOWHAMMER.

Its Feeding, Colour Feeding and Show Points.

By MRS. LILIAN E. T. DALTON.

HAVING been invited by the Editor to contribute an article on the Yellowhammer—by the way, my favourite British bird—I will first of all deal with the points required in an ideal exhibition specimen.

I do not think the Hammer is seen at his best until he is eighteen months or two years old, as I find some of them improve beyond all recognition. I have one at the present time, a last year's bird and a buff, which is now of extraordinary size and the largest chested bird I have seen. This bird, when first caged, was so heavily marked that it was nearly impossible to distinguish any yellow between his V marks, his crown being heavily splashed with brown like his back. To see him now, one would never credit the improvement which has taken place.

I always endeavour to obtain the largest birds I can, as I find a good big one always beats a good little one. As is the case with the majority of our British Birds, we have at least two different shapes, one the Yorkie, the other following the Norwich type. It is the latter shape I prefer, for when standing and looking at you in his show cage, he looks very majestic indeed.

The Points of a Show Bird.

The points, therefore, required for a show bird are size, abundance of yellow, with a most distinct V, and a "topper" must be quite clear in between, and must have prominent eye and cheek markings, for very often at the shows we see a real good bird put back because he is minus of these markings.

My method of colour feeding is as follows: To each bird I give one teaspoonful of tasteless pepper and one teaspoonful of Spratt's Cage Bird Cod Liver Oil Food mixed well together to two teaspoonfuls of best Spanish plain canary seed. This is slightly moistened with sweet oil, and allowed to stand overnight. The seed by the morning will be well saturated, and this necessitates the birds taking some of the colour food. In a few obstinate cases I take the seed vessel away in the evening at 7 o'clock and put it back in the morning at nine. The birds then are certain to partake of the prepared food; they will not starve. Start the colour feeding in June, and do not drop off until the end of September, when I promise you the little extra labour connected with this matter will be well worth your trouble if the bird or birds you are feeding are possessed of any show points at all.

How to Feed Yellowhammers.

My 'Hammers' principal stock food is the best plain Spanish canary seed. By way of a change, I throw in a few oats and screenings, which they pick at with delight. Through the winter months, I give them a finger tray of a good brand of insectivorous food three times a week. Their chief live food is one mealworm morning and afternoon, occasionally a spider, also a few earwigs, which are a splendid pick-me-up.

Further, to keep the Yellowhammer in perfect health and condition, his bath should be hung on from early morning until midday, for I have seen a few of mine bath three times a day, and this has always told me they must be healthy. In buying a bath, I advise you to get one large enough for a Thrush, when your pets will let you know if they like the water or not.

In conclusion, let me ask the British section of bird-keepers to show during this coming season whatever 'Hammers' they think are worth the show cage, and help to fill the classes when the various societies are good enough to provide a class specially for the bird which I consider our most handsome Britisher, the Yellowhammer.

ABNORMALLY-COLOURED BIRDS.

New Quarters Wanted for Newport's Fine Collection.

The changes which have taken place at Newport Technical Institute, says "The Western Mail," Cardiff, now involve the disposition of one of the most unique of natural history collections in existence. For a long time Mr. W. Bush has had the use at the institute of a large aviary, in which he has carried out wonderful experiments. He has had probably the finest collection of white freak birds in the kingdom. For thirty years he has kept up a scientific study of Mendel's system of heredity, and has proved its accuracy by interesting and long-continued experiments. His collection of white Thrushes contains probably the only ones of the sort in the world. He has Linnets and Sparrows in the intermediary stages between normal and white.

The new principal of the institute, Dr. Holland, finds that the room occupied by the aviary will be needed for other purposes, and has asked Mr. Bush to remove the birds. To find a suitable home for so wonderful and valuable a collection is not by any means an easy thing. Mr. Bush is anxious that the birds should, if possible, remain in Newport, but he is very much concerned for the continuation of the study and experiments. To place them in the aviary which has been erected in Belle Vue Park would be to give them over to exhibition purposes only. There are very few people who can devote the attention and scientific cares to a matter of this kind like Mr. Bush. Perhaps, however, a home may be found for the birds in South Wales.

"Please take my Mealworm advert. out of C.B. & BIRDS. I have had orders from all over the country, over 50 in one week."—H. JONES (Brighton).

"I had so many replies to my last advert. in CAGE BIRDS that I could not reply to some. Kindly thank those who offered exchange. The cages, etc., went to a fancier in Denny, just five miles from here."—T. R. WALLACE (Falkirk).

WILD FOODS FOR SEED-EATING BIRDS.

By
(Ropley).

The useful greenfoods, etc., available during September are herein described. Previous articles appeared in our issues of April 10 and the first weeks of the following months, and we have, we are pleased to say, been able to arrange with the author to contribute a continuation in the first issue of each month.

SEPTEMBER arrives laden with a prodigious assortment of wild foods—varied, and of proved worth. The whole gamut of August weeds continues a career now grown riotous, more heavily stocked with well-matured seed this month than ever.

The later heads of knapweed are filled to bursting with plump ripe seed. Charlock is well-nigh dead ripe, and will barely endure handling without breakage of the pods and consequent loss of the seed. Soon, in fact, the state of ripeness is so advanced that transporting the branches of seed pods intact becomes impossible. It is then time to write it off the list.

Linnets are the birds chiefly concerned with charlock seeds, and they thoroughly enjoy them and benefit by eating them so long as they are able to extract them from the intact pods. But when the seed-pod breaks through ripeness, and the seeds are released by that agency, they remain uneaten where they fall. Hence harvested charlock seed has no value either in seed mixtures or in the "tit-bits" side pad. The birds' consumption of it then being either negligible or quite nil.

A Universal Tit-Bit.

Bindweed or cornbine, which may now be likened in feeding value and general acceptability to chickweed in May, is carrying its heaviest freight of well-matured seed, and it should be made use of with every freedom for all the seed-eaters. Even chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's-purse, aye, and dandelion seed-heads, too, take on a new lease of life, and although of less account now than in the spring, are not quite without value. Milk-thistle is still available and still valuable.

The well-protected Scotch thistles, too, are yet in evidence, and, as was observed earlier in these notes, should this month be gathered for storing as well as for present use. Most of the earlier heads will have opened before now, and the seeds taken wing. In many cases this has happened before the seeds have reached maturity owing to the attacks of maggots on the thistle heads. The seeds in such heads are obviously not worth saving. But the later heads are seldom maggot infested as are the earlier ones, probably because the insect whose egg produces the maggot has fulfilled its destiny and perished before they bloom—and they are generally tightly packed with plump seed of the best maturing qualities. All of this improves the chances of successful storage, and marks out September as the best month for storing.

How to Harvest Thistle Seed.

The process of gathering these heads has already been described. The preliminary to successful storage is the thorough drying of the heads without allowing them to "blow," which, if it occurs, means losing the seeds. The place chosen for this drying process must be dry and fairly airy, but sunshine, and in fact even strong light, must not be admitted. A well ventilated shed with wooden floor, an attic in which the light can be subdued, an airy cellar, or any such premises are suitable.

The heads should be spread out thinly on the floor, or they may be laid in shallow wooden boxes, and so left until all moisture has evaporated. This is quite likely to take a couple of weeks, possibly longer; it depends upon prevailing atmospheric conditions. When they are perfectly dry, they may be shovelled up with a small iron shovel, and shot into a hessian bag or sack. Tying the mouth of the sack, and placing it handy for use finishes the job. If the heads are not perfectly dry when stored they will become mouldy and musty, and unfit for use. If they are exposed for only a few moments to sunshine, either during or after the drying business, the heads will open and the seeds sail away clinging to their parachutes of down. That is why the sack's mouth is better kept tied.

Persicaria is a weed of the autumn, which is well worthy the bird-keeper's notice. It is a weed that flourishes wherever there is moisture in the sub-soil, and usually on heavy land. In a general way the plant resembles the common garden fuchsia. There is the same branching habit of growth, the same distinctive coloration of the stalk—a rich dark maroon—and the same oblong, pointed, rather veinous leaf. But there is no fuchsia like flower.

The seeds are produced in clusters at the tips of the branches, in size and formation something like those of ribwort—the narrow leaved plantain. Of different colour though, for persicaria flowering and seeding tips are normally a bright pink, though occasional specimens are pale mauve, and here and there an example crops up of a dirty white colour. The seeds, which may easily be rubbed out of their panicle between finger and thumb, are flat and round—or nearly so—and shiny black in colour. The circumference is about equal to that of winter rape, or perhaps a little more, the shape being flat, however, as noted above, and not spherical.

Fond of Persicaria Seed.

Chaffinches and Bramblings, Greenfinches and Bullfinches are very fond of it, and for these four species it is particularly valuable, close behind them coming Linnets, Redpolls, and Twites. If opportunity offers (and this particular weed usually grows abundantly where it grows at all), it is well to gather a surplus of well-ripened stock for use later on.

SOME REMINISCENCES OF AN OLD FANCIER.

By E. HURDLEY (Madeley).

MY next experiment was with a Jay which did not live long. This my father got for me from a nest. The Jay was the only wild bird he ever encouraged me to keep. I managed to rear this one on hard-boiled eggs, bits of meat and liver chopped up fine, with bread crumbs mixed. The bird was a fine one. It soon began to take notice of people talking to it, and it was not long before we fancied it could talk. This surmise proved correct, as one morning just after the Christmas holidays (if my memory serves me right) my father, who rose early, went into the kitchen where the Jay was kept, and was greeted with a "good morning." This startled the old chap, who dropped the candle and began to feel for the poker, thinking somebody was in the kitchen. The bird was not suspected for some time until it used to repeat the "good morning" and other words. But misfortune overtook this bird; it had some throat complaint or the other, and there was no CAGE BIRDS at that time to write to for advice, which might have saved it, and it died, much to my regret.

A Talented Jay.

About four years ago a friend of mine reared one of these birds from the nest, and a splendid talker it proved to be; it used to hang inside a porch, the entrance to an old-fashioned country cottage, and hearing the conversation between my friend's wife and people, who were callers at the cottage, it learned to imitate some of these people very well. It could also imitate the children talking, and also their crying. It used to surprise many a visitor if he were left alone for a few minutes and did not know the bird was there.

This bird, I believe, was fed on scraps from the table, meat chopped up fine, hard-boiled eggs, etc. I may mention that the owner was a bird lover of the old school, although, like myself, not possessed with any more means than he knew what to do with. I have seen him with some splendid Mules and Hybrids, and he had at one time the largest and smartest Goldfinch that I ever saw, and I have seen and caught a good few. This Goldfinch he told me he trapped in an orchard, where it was feeding young in a pear tree. He also took the young and reared same; in fact he told me that the old bird fed the young after being caged up.

The Mule's Untimely End.

I myself bought from him a young Mule, of which the Goldfinch was the father; and he was as fine a Mule as ever I saw. This bird came to a rather untimely end; it was killed one night by what I thought was a mouse. I tried for months to catch this chap, but with no success. Yet I could see traces of him every morning. At last I had almost given up the chase, but after altering the positions of my birds so that he could not get at them, I thought I would try another sort of trap. I did—one of the penny break-back type, baited with cheese, bacon and seeds of all kinds. But I had no luck though I could still see traces. At Teazel is not notable for rapid development, and it is likewise somewhat tardy in ripening its seed. Many heads, however, will ripen off during September, and the seed of wild teazel ripened thus naturally is much to be preferred to the average sample handled in trade. It would, in fact, be a boon to the bird keeper if teazel seed could be grown and harvested in this country as a commercial proposition solely for bird-feeding, especially having regard to the fact that until recently the bulk of our supplies has been imported from enemy countries. Bird-keepers who have a little spare land might profitably try the experiment of growing their own, for the value of teazel seed as a component part of all-the-year-round seed mixtures for all the Finches is now generally recognised.

Some Supplementary Items.

Willowherb, or wild cotton-weed, which Redpolls are specially fond of, knot grass, and various other late seeding grasses, may be mentioned as supplementary items that are not without value, but of secondary importance in September's flowing tide. Blackberries may be gathered in clusters as they grow, ripe, half ripe, and green, and given to Bullfinches. They have not, however, by themselves, the infallible colouring properties they have been widely credited with.

Dock, sorrel, and stinging nettle, which are now conspicuous on stretches of waste land and neglected areas, will be passed under review next month—with other things.

last I caught an ordinary house-mouse, and the trap having a strong spring had caused some blood to get on to the wood-work.

Not a House Mouse.

I put the trap on one side, thinking I had caught the rodent at last; but next evening, on picking up the trap, which had not been re-set, I saw marks which showed that something had been feeding on the blood. I set the trap there and then, and next morning I had a mouse the like of which I had never seen before. It was rather larger than the ordinary house mouse; it had a short tail, was squirrel-coloured on back and white on the chest and belly. A day or two after this while in my garden, I noticed a mouse hole underneath an apple tree, and on getting the spade and removing some soil I began to see part of a nest and some heads bobbing up and down. I found that the nest contained four young ones, and one old mouse of the same kind. As the young ones could run well, I had a sharp minute's work, but I managed to kill them all, though I lost the old one. I left the dead young on the garden path, thinking this would encourage the cats (of which there are plenty about here) to be on the alert, and perhaps catch the other old one; but while I have seen the cats go and look at them, not one of the mice was taken away. The other old one we saw many times after running about the garden. I thought this strange with so many cats about, as I know to my sorrow that a room door need not be left open long before these monsters are soon hanging on one's birdcages.

After a run of some months I had occasion to set a spring break-back in the coal-cellar for a mouse I had seen, and almost the same thing happened that was the case before—the mouse caught left some blood on the trap, which the next day was set again and baited with seed. But the blood was not cleaned off; and to my surprise I caught the old mouse which had been lost in the garden, at least I believe so, as I have never seen or heard of one about since.

I may add that the Mule that was killed by this mouse was hanging on a papered wall about five feet from the floor and was bitten right through the breast; the wires of the cage were also smeared with blood. I have mentioned this to many friends and bird-lovers, but I think the nearest the mark were some fanciers I was speaking to at Norwich, who called it a mouse-hunter or mouse-eater, an animal which seems to work in the same manner after mice as the ferret does after rats and rabbits.

From Chimney Pot to Bird-Room.

My next venture was in regard to a couple of Jackdaws, which were taken from the chimney-pot of a castle on a nobleman's estate. I did not get these out, but two apprentice boys managed this, and fed them for about two days. Saturday came, and as we all went home at week-ends they decided to leave the birds in an old cement cask until the following Monday, when we returned at about noon. I would not, however, hear of this, as I knew what it meant—the birds would be dead. So I put the Daws in my basket and took them home; and as luck would have it, when I arrived there an elder sister (who was enjoying a holiday) was there, and I knew that if they were to be reared by patience and good feeding, they were "landed." My sister set about the task of feeding in earnest, and as the birds proved good feeders, all went well. They were given bits of meat, cheese, hempseed, in fact, almost anything that came to hand; and they grew into remarkably fine birds.

"Jack," the Hen Jackdaw.

They were a pair. The cock was always prying about in the fowls' run, and got a blow from one of the cock fowls, which ended his career. But the hen turned out to be a beauty, and was admired by many people. She delighted in getting in water, and when any of the family went to fetch water from the hydrant (which was some distance away) she would follow them, either by flying after them, or by running on the road with them, shouting the while. And the moment they had filled their pail she would jump in and bathe and swim about the top. She would repeat this several times in the day. She was a great favourite also with the children from the school close by; these children used to watch her tricks and also bring her tit-bits, which she would take from their hands, taking great care, however, to see that they did not handle her. She would often run after them, and peck at their legs. One person only did she allow to handle her, and that was my mother, with whom she was a great favourite. When the old lady went to town (which was about a mile away) "Jack," as she was called, was sure to go, sometimes flying in front, and at other times flying from house to house; but always keeping watch and always ready to return with her mistress. She would also go about half a mile to the house of a brother of mine, perch on the window-sill for a few moments, and then fly home again. She had followed the old lady there several times, and so kept up the habit, and when the old lady did not want her to follow lest some mischievous boy should throw a stone and perhaps kill the bird, she used to put her umbrella up; and even this sometimes failed, as when she thought all was right she would perhaps find "Jack" on some wall, tree, fence, or house close by, evidently persisting in going the whole journey.

"Jack's" roosting place was in a box hung to the wall outside with a good perch and always plenty of coarse sand in the bottom; but never under any circumstances could she be induced to go to bed before being fed with a piece of cheese and some hempseeds. These she would go to the house door for, and if they had forgotten her she would keep shouting "Jack!" and "Alice" as plainly as possible, and has been known to fly on the latch of the door and keep pecking at it to attract the attention of those inside.

Diet and Breeding.

IT is a mistake to limit the diet of birds during winter months. They must have sufficient nourishment to keep them from getting "down in the dumps" through sudden changes of temperature. Changes of seed—not mixed, but a pinch of first one and then another—with apple, etc., should keep them fit. Birds that are forced into condition are responsible for clear eggs. Egg food they may have just previous to pairing up; but do not overdo it. If you are sure of the cock birds, leave them with the hens while sitting. Two feeders are better than one, and if by chance the hen refuses to do her duty, the cock bird may take to it with a good will.

It will do a hen good if you give a dose of sulphate of soda (or Epsom salts) in the drinker when the young are about three days old, or before, as the hen gets "out of order" during sitting, and this is the cause of a lot of trouble. The nest should be changed as soon as necessary, as it keeps the youngsters clean and comfortable. The old birds while feeding young should have a good supply of hemp and whatever green-food you use. Great care is necessary with young birds when they leave the nest. Milksp sprinkled with "Quinella" (Spratt's Patent, Ltd.) should be given occasionally. Pick out your best birds, feed them well and show them to their best advantage, and you will be repaid for your trouble, if not financially, at least by congratulations from brother fanciers.—"VULCAN."

Gateshead Fanciers Please Note

SIR,—As we have not had any meetings of the Gateshead C.B.S. during the past four months owing to so many of our members being engaged on munition work, and therefore unable to attend meetings, it has been decided to call a special meeting, and as the notice may not be read by all concerned if inserted in your Club and Society Notices column, I beg that you will allow me the publicity of your Correspondence columns to state that this meeting will be held on September 11, at 7.30, at Lockhart's Cafe, High Street, Gateshead. Important show business and other items will be considered at this meeting, and I earnestly hope members will try to attend. A hearty welcome is extended to fanciers in the district who would like to join our society, the annual subscription to which is only 2s. 6d., with an entrance fee of 1s. I shall be pleased to furnish any further particulars upon application.

An Appeal for a Tyneside Fancier.

SIR,—I am writing an appeal to which Tyneside fanciers will, I hope, respond with generosity. It is on behalf of Mr. James Shepherd, one of the founders, and for some time chairman of the Newcastle C.B.S. and the Northern Yorkshire C.C. In consequence of the war, Mr. Shepherd was thrown out of employment; then he got work at some military huts, but had to spend most of his wages in rent and travelling expenses, and so was unable to save. Now he has caught scarlet fever, and that means six or eight weeks at least without an income, except 10s. from the Insurance Committee, of which 7s. goes for rent. May I ask those Tyneside fanciers who, like myself, owe so much to Mr. Shepherd for kindly sympathy and advice when they were beginners, to come forward and assist their old friend? Mr. Tindale, 6, Gill Street, Benwell; Mr. Coutts, 122, Brinkburn Street, Byker; or myself, at 121, St. George's Terrace, Jesmond, will be pleased to receive and forward any donation, however small, to help our friend over his present troubles.

The Birds of Kamptee.

SIR,—I have received CAGE BIRDS from a reader at Deal (Kent), and it came as a pleasant surprise. I handed it round the company, as there are several Ashford fanciers among us. Referring to my letter in your issue dated July 3 ("Where the sun does the hen's work"), two of the birds hatched off, and shortly after were running about feeding. I am sorry to tell you they only lived about four or five days. I don't think the Sergeant could have fed them correctly.

I must thank Mr. Page for information regarding the feeding of Indian Mynahs. At present there are dozens of these birds leaving their nests; we have several caged, and they soon settle down, the old birds feeding them through the cage bars. Indian green Parrots and Parakeets are very numerous here, passing over the bungalows in large flocks, some pitching down like a flock of pigeons to feed on the berries growing on trees around the barracks.

Blue Jays are very plentiful; they are much brighter in colour than the English Jay. I think if some of the fanciers in England saw these birds they would long to possess them. The Golden Oriole is a glorious sight when seen on the wing, with its deep black and orange plumage; these also are very plentiful. The prettiest birds here are a kind of Bird of Paradise, about the size of a Wood-pigeon. One is a pale blue, with two long drooping tail feathers of the same pale blue colour. The head and neck are very dark blue, with plenty of sheen. Another bird (I do not know if this is the male of the same species) is a very dark blue, its call is very similar to that of a pheasant, and it has the same long drooping tail feathers. There are two birds here that are expert thieves, the Kite and Indian Rook, or Jackdaw. If you happen to pass from one bungalow to the next with a plate or dish with any food on same which is not covered over, you will soon lose your dinner. I have had this happen twice with the company's butter. The Jackdaw is very sly, and watches your movements like a cat watching a mouse. As soon as your back is turned, into the door or window he comes, and off he goes with a piece of routine or any food that happens to be in his sight. He is far more crafty than our old Magpie and Jackdaw at home; two men went short of their loaves this morning through these birds. Some of us have monkeys as pets; we have one in our company. This afternoon I gave him a biscuit, and I had hardly turned my back before there were six or seven Jackdaws trying their hardest to steal it from him, but I think they had their master for once. We have plenty of pets amongst us. One is a young panther; another company has a fine Indian black buck, he is very tame and runs loose, feeding out of our hands, and he is very fond of boxing and butting if you tease him. I have just had a Blue-head or Lavender-headed Parakeet given me by one of the boys; it is quite a youngster, the colour just breaking through the head and neck. We are able to get plenty of bananas and monkey nuts, also insects for the birds. There are hundreds of Swallows or Martins flying round the bungalows now, and their nests are crowded round the eaves and beams under the verandahs. It is quite a different nest to that of our Swallow at home. It consists of a woolly grey moss, or fluff from blankets, or any woolly stuff they can find, mixed with coconut fibre and feathers. The birds often fall to the ground inside the bungalows during the evening, when the light is bad, and we keep them prisoners until the morning, and set them free when it is light, otherwise they dash themselves about so.

Snakes are very plentiful here, Cobra, Python, and Rock snakes. There is also another reptile like a small crocodile, but its skin is like a big lizard's. The natives call them Gothars. We have several of their skins, which will make fine cigar and cigarette cases. I nearly forgot to tell you that the Cuckoo has been heard several times during April, May, and June, but I think I have already said too much. Wishing CAGE BIRDS and its readers the best of luck during the coming show season, and hoping to have another start as soon as the war is over.

Greenfinch-Siskin Hybrids.

Is this a Record?

SIR,—I have now on the sticks hybrids bred between a cock Greenfinch and a hen Siskin, and the following is a simple account of how I bred and reared them. My room is 12 feet by 8 feet, and the cage they were bred in is 3ft. 3ins. long, 1ft. 6ins. deep, and 9ins. from back to front. I paired the birds up about the first week in June, placed a little nesting material in for them, and found they were both eager to build their nest. I put the nest pan in with a good thick lining gummed inside, but the Greenfinch was not content until he had picked and rove it all out. I placed another nest in, the same as the first, but with the same result, so I then decided to try with some bran in the nest pan, and this I found worked out all right, as they could not get it out so well. On July 11 I got the first egg, and one on each of the following three mornings. I placed them under a hen Canary, fearing the finches would spike them, or would not rear them if they were fertile. At ten days I tested the eggs and found them clear. For a few days afterwards the hen Siskin sat with her head under her wings, fretting, I believe, for taking her eggs away, but soon got friends again with Mr. Greenie. On July 22 she laid again, and on the following two mornings, so I decided to let her sit on her own eggs. I made her a nest of cow hair, placed the three eggs in, and found her to be a good sitter. It was amusing to see the Greenfinch edge up and pull a tuft of hair from the nest, but the hen would not be content until she had replaced it in the nest. On the ninth or tenth day I tested the eggs, and found them fertile, though one had a slight dint in, either through a spike from the cock bird or from the hen's claw. On August 6 two birds were hatched out, and one was dead in the shell. I watched to see what the Greenie would do, but found when the hen came off he was very busy feeding them. My method of feeding is very plain. During the time of incubation I just fed on ordinary finch mixture. On the day I expected them to hatch out I gave the yolk of egg and crushed hemp seed. After they were three days old I gave abundance of seeding chickweed, also crushed sunflower. For a change I gave occasionally a little ground monkey nut. These youngsters were on the sticks at thirteen days old, which proves them to be strong birds. They are showing plenty of colour, and are a good size, being as big as the Siskin up to this date. Have they been bred in a small cage similar to mine, and bred in the same way, namely, from a cock Greenfinch and a hen Siskin? Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success.

E. GRAY.

[Mr. Wesley T. Page's book, "Species which have reared young and Hybrids which have been bred in captivity in Great Britain," records the cross between the cock Siskin and the hen Greenfinch, and this is, of course, by no means an uncommon one. Perhaps some readers may know of Hybrids bred the reverse way.—Editor, CAGE BIRDS.]

Bradford Cinderella Show Suspended.

SIR,—I am sorry to have to inform you that although the committee of the Bradford National C.B.A. have spent much time and labour in making arrangements for this year's Cinderella Show, which has been for the past few years held for the benefit of a deserving charity, yet they have reluctantly decided to abandon the idea of holding a show for this year. At their last meeting they had before them a communication from the Lord Mayor suggesting that it would not be desirable at the present juncture to hold such an exhibition, and after serious consideration it was decided to fall in with the Lord Mayor's wishes and abandon the show. We hope, when the country becomes more settled, to continue this charitable venture, which has been so successful in the past, and we hope that we may count on a resumption of the support of the leading gentry of the district and of fanciers in general.

The committee desire to thank most heartily the gentlemen who had kindly offered to officiate as judges, and also the various specialists clubs which had granted their patronage. We hope that the giving up of our show for this year has not seriously inconvenienced the judges and societies concerned, and we assure them that the Bradford fanciers regret very keenly the step which they have so reluctantly been compelled to take.

Breeding Bullfinches in Captivity.

SIR,—Noticing in the correspondence columns of CAGE BIRDS letters referring to the breeding of Bullfinches in captivity, I have decided to tell you my experiences. Early in April my Bullies showed distinct signs of pairing, and had begun to hunt about for building materials, etc., so I had hopes of great things. However, one day I noticed that the cock was looking most unwell, and on further examination I found that the middle toe of one foot had been broken, probably by a cat. This, of course, rendered him quite lame, and his interest in domestic pursuits vanished. His leg soon healed, however, and he got more "perky," although the toe had to come off, leaving only a stump. They both began to collect nesting materials again, and I once more got hopeful, but as I could see no nest appearing I had a good look through the bushes and discovered that the hen had laid an egg on the top of a travelling cage which I had placed in the bushes for them to build in. There was no sign of a nest, so I took away the egg and looked about for something to give them a nest in. Luckily I found an old Hedge Sparrow's nest in the garden, so I put it on top of the cage where I found the egg (laid on June 10), but when I went to get the egg to put into it I found some one of the birds had dropped it on the floor and "cracked" it.

The hen laid four eggs in the nest, and commenced to sit on June 20, but during the following week a pair of Goldies also decided to start housekeeping, and nothing would please them but Mrs. Bullie's nest, from which she was frequently driven. Also a cock Yellowhammer took a great fancy to her, and wooed her most strenuously every time she left the nest, and in the scuffles which ensued she got rather badly pecked about the face and head. Needless to say Mr. Yellowhammer and Mr. and Mrs. Goldie were removed to safer quarters.

The Sunday following (4th July) there were three tiny red babies in the nest, and these young ones grew rapidly; the fourth egg did not hatch. On July 21 the youngsters left the nest and hopped about the bushes, being fed both parents on anything, bar egg food, which they would not touch. Soon the hen showed signs of wanting to nest again, and consequently neglected her young, two of which were content to sit and wait to be fed, but the other was more energetic and followed his father about, ever ready to receive a mouthful. On Saturday, July 31, I saw that the two youngsters were in a very bad way, and so I took them out and fed them by hand, but one was too far gone, and died on Aug. 4. The other was doing very well, but one day his cage door was left open and he got out into the kitchen and was not found till some hours after, by which time he had eaten dust and other things, and he died on the following day. Needless to say I praised the person for leaving the door open. The remaining youngster can now feed itself and is a fine bird, and I am waiting for it to moult to see whether it is a cock or a hen.

The aviary in which they were bred is not very large; it is roughly L-shaped, the arms being 7ft. long and 4ft. wide. The structure is 6ft. high all over, and there are bushes of box about 3ft. high and 1ft. thick along the front, the back of the aviary being the wall of the house. There were 15 British birds in with the Bullies, including a Robin and a Hawfinch, also an old male Cockatiel who is put out during the summer for his health, which is much improved, thanks to your advice. The young Bullies were fed on mealworms and their beetles, green seeds of various plants, and ordinary hard seed, also the soft food supplied to the Robin, but egg-food would not be touched by the old birds under any circumstances. I did not allow the hen to nest again, as I thought it rather late, and I am glad I did not, for she is now in the middle of the moult, which seems to have come early this year, my hen Redpoll being well through it by the end of July. The Robin was also rather early. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR,—Personally, I see no use in prolonging a discussion with anyone who can read intelligence in a bird which dies of grief at having lost a mate. Such imaginings are akin to the fond parent who can make the English language out of the gurgle of a three months' old baby. The genus Homo is supposed to be the most intelligent of all animals, but if a human were to die of grief, he would be written down a fool, and a fool—an unknowing one—is the least intelligent of humans. Reverting to the morality of birds, does Mr. T. consider the hen Flycatcher, which left her five young ones to starve to death, an exemplification of morality? The thieving Magpie, Jay or Jackdaw, the carnivorous Eagles and Hawks, the habitually lazy Cuckoo, the spiteful Robin which will beat to death even his own brother if he intrudes on his territory—are not their actions on a par with the land-snatching, lust, and murder which is taking place on the Continent at the present time? Mr. Teschemaker is an eminent ornithologist, of that there is no doubt, although we may not always agree with him; but if his knowledge of bees is confined to Sir John Lubbock and M. Fabre, he should seek other authorities, as the quotations he gave us last week betray a woeful ignorance of bees on someone's part.

T. JOHNSON.

SIR,—I much regret that Mr. Teschemaker has spoilt a clever letter by introducing into this debate an element of personality which the circumstances do not warrant. I refer particularly, but by no means exclusively, to the sneer which accompanied his statement that I spoke of instinct as a "higher psychometric force." As a matter of fact, I used no such phrase, but when I referred to a "higher psychologic phenomenon" I used a perfectly legitimate and relevant expression.

I am aware that I brushed aside his Thrush story with scant ceremony, and also that I stretched my imagination somewhat to say that bees would have done quite the same, but when I say that I regard the hypothesis Mr. Teschemaker bases on this tale, and particularly the elaboration of it which you print in CAGE BIRDS of August 23, as positively ludicrous, I think I can well claim some measure of benevolence for the indulgent way I handled it. I might perhaps ask what became of the cock Thrush, and if, as appears certain, he was left behind, then why a Flycatcher who loses her mate "krys" she

OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENG.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

"cannot" bring up her young, while the Thrush actually abandons her mate, apparently knowing that she can dispense with his services. Yet, although their actions are diametrically opposed, both these birds are said to have an almost cabalistic foresight and intelligence. The real reason why I have taken none of Mr. Teschemaker's tales seriously is that I regard the anecdotal line of argument as both unfair and futile. My opponent apparently imagines that he can fire any anecdote he likes at me, and if I fail (with the aid of such data as he himself chooses to give me) to upset the hypothesis he founds upon it, then his case is established. And even should I succeed, as I did in the tale of the Flycatcher, it merely means another tale the following week. This is a one-sided line of argument, indeed, which will not do for me. What are his tales worth as actual evidence? At the best they are only anecdotes of exceptional happenings, and have no relation to the continuous and characteristic conduct of birds generally. In fact, I might almost argue that if the only evidence of the existence of reasoning intelligence in birds lies in their abnormal doings under exceptional circumstances, then the very fact that the majority of birds act normally should prove that they at any rate are not gifted with a reasoning intelligence. I should not, of course, like to adopt such an argument, but the mere mention of it shows the futility of the line Mr. Teschemaker adopts.

For my part I have produced evidence that nesting and brooding are purely instinctive. I have also advanced proof that migration has nothing to do with voluntary action, and here Mr. Teschemaker is silent. Although I have raised several points indicating the domination of instinct in the psychologic constitution of birds, the foregoing is all I have so far produced in the shape of actual proof. It is little enough, I admit; still, it is something in such a subject as this, which is mainly a matter of conjecture and opinion. Anyhow, I invite proofs for the other side of the case. Let us have evidence, based on the ordinary and normal doings or natural requirements of all birds, which indicates the existence, the probability of the existence, or even the natural necessity for the existence, of a reasoning intelligence in those small passerine birds to which your excellent journal is devoted. If this be forthcoming, well and good, otherwise I shall relinquish my part in a discussion which has, I am afraid, lost much of its early promise. A. R. COE.

"Tortured Prisoners."

SIR,—Noticing that in what purports to be a reply to my letter in CAGE BIRDS of Aug. 21, Mr. F. A. Cox refers to what he calls his "plain facts," I have re-read his original letter in search thereof. He says in that letter that thousands of wild birds are condemned by their owners to "deliberate and calculated cruelty." Is this one of his plain facts? If so, will he give us details of just a few of the thousands of cases of deliberate and calculated cruelty. Another statement by Mr. Cox is that "these birds are often kept in perpetual darkness in order that they may trill the better at singing matches." Is this another "plain fact"? If so, can he prove it? The classification into "ruffians" of all who may choose to catch a Linnet, and the statement that owners of contest Linnets regard their birds as "a medium for providing them with extra drinks," are not "plain facts"; they are exaggerated and unwarranted abuse.

In his letter in CAGE BIRDS, Aug. 28, Mr. Cox says that we who have not seen the things mentioned take it as an assurance that he who has has not, and then all the details he gives us are that he has seen men coming away from public houses. Well; what of it? The last paragraph in the letter signed "Justice," in your issue of the same date is sufficient answer to this. He says it does not matter whether the birds are Linnets, Skylarks, Chaffinches, or Thrushes. We who know more about it know that it matters a great deal. Firstly, a Linnet or a Chaffinch will thrive in a small cage, while a Skylark or a Thrush will die. (I am not defending the use of small cages for Linnets or Chaffinches, but simply stating a "plain fact.") Secondly, to write about the caging of Linnets in terms so vague as to mislead others into the belief that "Thrushes are condemned to beat out their gallant hearts, to pour forth their song of courage, for the pleasure and profit of a pack of ruffians," displays either a lack of knowledge or a wilful desire to mislead.

Mr. Cox in his second letter says he has himself seen birds confined in little cages, in which they can hardly turn round, and the cages tied up in black cloths and suspended over the front doors of houses during the whole of a sunny afternoon. Taking this as really a "plain fact," if he will say where such examples of improper bird-keeping are to be seen by others, I think it will not be long before some reader of CAGE BIRDS will see that matters are altered. Among the men whom Mr. Cox has seen coming from public-houses he has seen one (mark the "one") so drunk that he twice dropped the cage. This as a "plain fact" is a deplorable circumstance, but has Mr. Cox never seen a drunken man other than a bird-fancier? Is it fair to brand a community for the fault of one of its members?

I will not quarrel with Mr. Cox for his estimate of my mental blindness, but I would ask him to be more definite as to the physical blindness which he says he "believes" to exist in singing Linnets. He makes more than one reference to blindness and darkened captivity, and he doubtless has some "plain facts" on which to base his belief. The rest of his letter consists only of expressions of opinion, and Mr. Cox is entitled to his own, as am I to mine. I will, however, undertake to modify the opinions even of one so convinced as is Mr. Cox, if he will give me the opportunity of meeting him during the forthcoming show season at any exhibition of Canaries, British birds, and Foreign birds in London or the provinces. BIRD-KEEPER.

SIR,—In reference to Mr. F. A. Cox's letter in this week's CAGE BIRDS, I should like to ask him if he has had any experience in the keeping and management of British wild birds. If he has not, I think he should try the experiment, and take proper notes as to the improvement that can be made in their conditions of health and appearance by proper care and attention. If he has not the time to devote to them, I am sure fanciers would be pleased to show him their birds if he would care to visit them, and then, I think, he would alter his opinions about bird-keeping. B. HUGHES.

Club Reports.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.
Meeting, Marie Stuart Hall, Crosshill, Aug. 25, Mr. R. Haggie presiding. Several items re annual show were settled. The president read a letter from secretary intimating his retirement. Mr. A. R. Hunter agreed to take up the duties of secretary, Mr. A. Steel being appointed as assistant. Member elected: Mr. E. Steel, Pollokshields. Next meeting, Sept. 29.—Ed. Holliday, Sec.

NEWCASTLE (East End) C.B.S.
Meeting, Aug. 25, Leighton School, Heaton Road; Mr. Hutchinson, chair. Mr. R. Havis, Blaydon, was elected a member. Classification, 70 classes, arranged for annual show.—Nor. 12 (4 nov.), Crests 9 (2 nov.), Cinn. 5 (1 nov.), Yorks. 8 (2 nov.), Bord. 14 (2 nov.), Liz. 2, Scots Fancy 3, Mules 2, Gift 1, Brit. 9, For. 2, Sell. 3. Rules for show were drawn up and sec. instructed to get a suitable hall.—J. W. Coutts, Sec.

SOUTH MOOR C.B.S.
Meeting, Aug. 28, Mr. W. Cresswell, chair. Messrs. F. Brown and E. Marsh, South Moor, and G. Foster, East Castle, were elected members. Decided that schedule of 43 classes for annual show be adopted, and that the winners of the Border classes be judged for best bird and runner-up. Donations and specials are coming in remarkably well, and everything points to our show being as big a success as last year. We would like to see as many members as possible attend our next meeting, Sept. 25, when we shall get all show business settled. Subs. are now due.—G. F. Bates, Sec.

CARDIFF C.B.S.
Meeting, August, 19, Maskell's Hotel. Unanimously agreed that M. G. W. Slocombe be elected a life member, also that all members of the society who are serving with the colours be exempt from paying contributions. Letters read from Mr. E. J. Banks, re holding a member's show in October. Sec. was instructed to write to Mrs. D. Longden conveying the sympathy of the members in her recent sad loss of her husband. Sec. was instructed to call a summoned meeting in October to discuss the holding of an open show. Owing to members joining the army we want those who do not usually attend the meetings to attend and take their share in the work as the few who were present at the meeting decline to go on unless they are supported by the whole society. Now, members, rally up at the next meeting, our motto should be: "Shows as usual." Members elected: Messrs. Radford, Metcalfe, Wheeler, Emerson, and Price.—E. Thomas, Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED Y.C.C.
Meeting, August 21. Owing to unavoidable absence of the President, Mr. W. A. Cowgill, the chair was taken by Mr. H. J. Chittenden. Members elected: Messrs. E. Butterfield, H. Ramsbottom, J. W. Salt, and J. Mothersdale. The following is the list of prizes for show season, 1915-16. Champion section: 1st, N.G.M. 10 gns. trophy and 20s. medal; 2nd, W. A. Cowgill, 5 gns. trophy and 12s. medal; 3rd, Edwd. Clegg, 3 gns. trophy and 8s. medal; 4th, special, value 10/6, by Mr. P. Mason; 5th, special, value 7/6, by Mr. J. Chippendale. Amateur section: 1st, gold medal, value 21s., by Mr. E. Hattersley; 2nd, special, value 15s., by Mr. L. C. Casey; 3rd, special, value 10s. 6d., by Mr. J. Bailey. Junior Novice section: 1st prize, value 20s.; 2nd, value 15s.; 3rd, value 10s.; all presented by the Club. Cash specials as last year. Mr. J. W. Ramsden's special for most points gained by a novice or an amateur at Patronage shows. Mr. John Firth was elected on the committee. As the Club's year-book is ready for the press, intending members should send in their names at once for inclusion in same.—J. Chambers, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD LINNET CLUB.

Annual general meeting, Aug. 21, with a good attendance. Officials for coming season elected:—Chair, W. Nelson; treas., Mrs. Parker; sec., W. Dobson; assist. sec., B. Milner; committee, W. Caddy, W. Watkiss, J. Williams, J. Roper, J. Brindley, J. Wainwright, and A. Longfield. The cup was presented to Mr. J. Williams for the highest score of the year, 145 seconds out of 4 minutes; he also won the highest break with the same bird, doing 59 seconds in one break. He is to be congratulated with having a bird to win the cup and two gold medals in one sing. S. Morley won gold medal for best average with 76½ points, the highest ever gained. On Sept. 4 there will be an open sing, first pair of birds in the window at 3. After the sing there will be a general meeting for the alteration of rules, and we hope all members and intending members will turn up. Open sing Aug. 28, 12 birds: 1, Watkiss; 2, 3, W. Nelson.—W. Dobson, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.C.

Meeting, Market Tavern, Bradford, August 28. Mr. W. A. Cowgill chair. Correspondence read from societies applying for patronage, and the following were granted same:—City of Bradford, Oct. 16; Carlisle, Oct. 27 and 28; Sheffield, O.S., Nov. 5 and 6; Blaydon, Nov. 12 and 13; Halifax, Nov. 19 and 20; London C.B.A., Dec. 10, 11, and 13. We are still wanting four more to make the number up, so will societies who would like our patronage, and who are holding an open show on any other date not previously mentioned above please apply at once so that I can have them printed in our year-book. Once more I appeal to Norwich fanciers to join us, sub. 2s. 6d. a year. We are giving Mr. E. Hattersley's cup for most points in amateur section, all birds to count, to be held only for one year, and also a gold medal, valued at one guinea, £1 1s. along with it; and also two other specials besides for amateurs as follows: 15s., 2nd, 10s. 3rd. Novices as follows: 1st 10s., 2nd silver medal with enamel centre, 3rd 2s. 6d. special. So will amateurs and novices rally round us and join at once. Full particulars on application to 16, Back Manor St., Ecclehill, Bradford.—S. Wilcock, Sec.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Meeting of the patronage committee, Aug. 28, 142, High-st., Edinburgh; Mr. G. W. Brown, president, in the chair, and every member of Council present. The chairman referred to the great loss the club had sustained during the year through the death of Mr. Thos. Arnot, Hawick, and moved that the sec. be instructed to insert same in minutes, which was unanimously agreed to. The new classification, by which Variegateds, Greens, and Cinnamons would be better catered for, was considered, and the following classification agreed upon:—4 clear or ticked, 1 each even marked, yell., varieg. cock, buff ditto, yellow or buff varieg. hen, yellow or buff Green cock, ditto hen, yellow or buff Cinnamon cock, ditto hen. The committee thought it would be advisable to grant medals to three open shows in Scotland and three in England, on condition that they adopt this new classification, both to encourage members and to do our best for the few open shows that we have this year. Sec. was instructed to write to the secs. of the shows selected. Where three medals are competed for they will be for clear or varieg., Green or Cinnamons, and novices. A number of applications were considered, and those whose classification did not meet the approval of committee were to be asked to rectify same as early as possible.—W. B. Smart, Sec.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing, Commercial Hotel, Aug. 28, for three prizes: 1, Plows; 2, Collinson; 3, Collinson; largest break, Plows, 30; timekeepers, O. Potter, R. Plows; tappers, J. Wallis, W. Perkin. We are continuing our contests for a few more weeks, and trust members will attend.—R. Plows, Sec.

PONTEFRAC.

Cross Keys Hotel, Halfpenny-lane, open Linnet contest, Aug. 28: 1, 2, 3, Nelson. Open sing, Aug. 29: 1, Plows; 2, 3, W. Nelson.—A. Bull, Sec.

Open Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Horsfair, Aug. 28; 13 entered for 3 prizes, and some very good singing was done for four minutes' time singing. Mr. T. Jones carrying off all three prizes and doing the grand score of 102 for first place. Open sing, Aug. 29, three minutes time; 19 birds: 1, Watkiss; 2, 3, Blackshear. We had a few members from the Castleford Linnet Club, and some good birds they have got too. We had another good day of singing. Mr. Watkins doing a score of 100 for first in three minutes. We hope they will pay us another visit.—J. Beard, Assist. Sec.

LEEDS.

Plasterers' Arms, Skinner Lane, Leeds, open match, quality and time singing, Sept. 4; three special prizes.—(Advt.)

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A., Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York Rd., open contest for quality Linnet singing, Aug. 29, 19 birds sang for three prizes: 1, Johnson; 2, Howarth; 3, Wood. Judges, Harcastle and Naylor.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Open contest, Clarence Hotel, Skinner Lane, 16 of the best birds in Leeds sang for three prizes, and some very good singing was heard before a crowded house, with friends from other clubs: 1, J. Parker; 2, W. Condliffe, a Leeds Koller fancier who has become a member of our club, and we all wish him the best of luck in his new fancy; 3, H. Wigfield. Messrs. A. Bryan and T. Butterfield judged. Aug. 29, 15 birds entered: 1, Parker; 2, Wigfield; 3, Hirst. Messrs. A. Bryan and T. Butterfield judges.—W. Lipman, Hon. Sec.

Questions and Answers.

COURTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

- (1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and conclude with either the correct name or a pseudonym.
- (2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query.
- (3)—Queries intended for different specialists must be written on separate sheets of paper.
- (4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.
- (5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated on the left-hand corner of the query.
- (6)—Queries received during any week, up to the first post on Saturday morning, will be answered in the issue bearing date of Saturday in the following week.
- (7)—If an answer by post is desired from our specialists, a postal order for sixpence must accompany any query relating to sickness of birds, or a shilling in ordinary enquiries, with a stamped and addressed envelope in either case. Dead birds must not be sent to the office (see Post-mortems).
- (8)—All who desire letters of complaint written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Children's Fund (London).
- (9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Postcards are not admissible.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

GROWTH ON BEAK (Troubled).—Has the bird started to moult? If not, its trouble is probably connected with its failure to do so, in which case it would be advisable to give it a vapour bath as a first step, to induce it to make a start. To do this place the bird in a small open wire cage, stand it on a table, and arrange it so that you can cover all over with a small blanket or shawl, leaving an inch or two of space all round it. Then place a small mug of nearly boiling water near the cage, and place under the cover. After 15 or 20 minutes remove the mug, but leave the cover over the cage for another half hour or so. Then return the bird to its cage, and keep it rather on the warm side, and a light cover over the cage to avoid any chill or draught. Then go on with the following treatment:—Add to the water 20 drops of Fluid Magnesia daily until the bowels move freely, but not too much so. After that two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards, give instead 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. In addition to the usual seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and well sprinkled with raw seed, every second day, and a half-ripe plantain stalk or some green salad daily. Just moisten the swellings over the beak with sulphur ointment, and then dust well with dry boracic acid twice a week for a month if necessary; probably they may disappear in less time than that. If the bird is already moulting naturally, you need not give the vapour bath, but give the rest of the treatment, and if the bird is not considerably better in a fortnight or so, please write again, and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further.

EATS ONLY RAPE (G. R. Mason).—If the bird keeps apparently in good health and condition, there is really nothing to worry about, because it eats nothing but rape. You have doubtless a very good sample of summer rape, or it would not perhaps be so partial to it, and there is no harm at all in good sound rape. Many roller fanciers would be only too glad for their birds to subsist almost entirely on it. See that you get a good sound and sweet canary seed, and then nearly fill the seed-box with this each day, place a small teaspoonful of rape on top, and just stir it slightly into the top layer of canary. If you do this systematically for a time the bird will doubtless gradually acquire a taste for the canary seed. Give half a teaspoonful of the mixed seed separately twice a week, and once a week a morsel of bread and milk, or a small teaspoonful of any good substitute for egg-food. Give a small spray of green food each day. Restlessness in a young bird is not necessarily a sign that anything is wrong with its health, but rather the reverse.

ABOUT HENS (Yorkshire Hens).—(1) There is no reason why the young hens bred last season, and which have not nested this year, should not breed quite successfully next season, provided they are in good robust health and active condition. You do not say anything about their nesting performances this season, so I cannot form any opinion as to the probable cause, but I see no reason why you should not give them another chance with the above conditions. (2) I take it this question means at what age does a hen some useless as a stock bird. If this is so, the answer is that no definite age can be named, because individuals vary immensely in this respect. Some hens rapidly lose their reproductive powers after the second or third season, whilst others will make very serviceable stock birds for eight or nine years, and there are exceptional cases which have bred well longer than this. But, as a rule, one may expect a diminution of powers after the fourth season, so that only hens of exceptionally good pedigree, or those which consistently produce young with some outstanding feature, and still show signs of healthy vigour, need be kept after this time.

EFFECT OF PLUCKING (C. P. W.).—It is extremely doubtful whether the feathers that were plucked will be moulted again in the moult that is about to commence, therefore, as the plucking seems to have been very extensive, I should advise you not to colour feed the bird this time, but keep it for non-fed classes if you wish to exhibit it. You would certainly get a "patchy" or mottled appearance if you colour-fed it in present circumstances.

INBREEDING (Blinchill). You omit two important details in your query which rather limits the usefulness of my reply; the colour of the parents of these young, and the forced in question. In any case the mating you suggest is closer than should be, unless there is some definite object in view, as the chances of a considerable loss of size are very great. It would, however, be better to intercross the parents with the young than to cross the young only among themselves. Thus you will see the value of a knowledge of the above points. As the old birds have not been directly injured, I would suggest the following matings, provided the colour of the old birds is suitable, as the best you could attempt without introducing fresh blood. But even with this, you must not be surprised to lose a little size in the progeny. If the old cock is a yellow, mate him with young felled buff hen only, but if a buff mate him with both the young hens. The clear buff young cock mate with the sister of his mother, and also with the lightly marked yellow young hen, if this bird is not used with the old cock. The clear yellow young cock mate with the remaining old hen, which, again, is the sister of its mother. I should not advise you to interbreed with any of the progeny of these matings again, especially if the birds are Norwiche, or any other breed where size and substance are a consideration.

BIRDS IN BEDROOM (Robertson).—I am afraid it can be only the outcome of absolute ignorance to assert that it is necessarily unhealthy to sleep in the same room as Canaries are kept in, provided, of course, that the hobby is kept within reasonable limits. If the room is of fair size, hygienic, and properly ventilated, so as to make it a healthy domicile for human beings, the latter would take not the slightest harm from the presence of a few birds comfortably accommodated in a corner set apart for them. On the other hand, if the room were in any way unhygienic or inefficiently ventilated, the bad effect of these conditions would be seen in and felt by the birds much sooner than by the human occupants, they being far more susceptible to these adverse conditions than humans. There are more than a few people who have no other convenience for housing their pets, who do as you suggest doing, and so long as they attend with scrupulous care to the sanitary conditions, I do not think they will ever be a "penny the worse" in health for it. But if either suffered I am sure the birds would be the first victims.

CANARY WITH COLD (E. Alfrey).—Keep the bird in a fairly warm place where the temperature is equable; keep a light cover over the cage, and withhold the bath until all symptoms of cold have disappeared. Every second day for a fortnight, in addition to the usual seed diet, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it. On the alternate days add to the drinking water four drops each of ovinol of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and sweet spirit of nitre. If not quite well at the end of a fortnight or so, write again, and repeat particulars, and I will advise you further.

LOSS OF SONG (Wellington).—It is not at all unusual for a cock to cease singing for the time being when mated with a hen, whether the mating is successful or otherwise does not affect the matter in the least, and it cannot be termed a complaint in any sense of the term. It is rather an idiosyncrasy, harmless enough, of the individual, and such cocks often recommence singing as soon as taken away from the hen, or, at least, as soon as the moult is quite finished, as they are not always separated until the breeding season is over, and the moult is about to begin. But your query rather suggests that the birds have only just lately ceased singing, and if that is the case, the stoppage is probably due to the approach of the moult, as it is quite the rule for cocks after their first season to cease singing during the moulting season. It is only the few exceptions that go to prove the rule that sing through the moult. Therefore, I do not think you need worry at all about them not singing just now. Keep them rather on the warm side as soon as they drop into moult, see that they are not exposed to cold draughts or chills, and give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, or a little egg-food as a substitute, three times a week, and aim at getting them through a quick and complete moult. At the end of it you may add to the water 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and a drop of pure honey about the size of a small pea, three times a week for a week or two.

BALD HEAD (H. G.).—The red mites may, of course, be an indirect cause of the loss of feathers, but are in no sense a direct one. Thoroughly overhaul the cage and see that the mites are exterminated as far as possible, as you will have seen advised in detail in these replies quite recently. Allow bird to bathe as freely as it likes, provided it does not show signs of chill afterwards. Then treat as follows for a month or six weeks, and the bird should come through the moult, if not quite in faultless plumage, at least so as you can expect to get it again. In addition to the staple seed diet, give twice a week a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, chopped sunflower seeds, and broken groats. Every third day give also a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut dusted with flour of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the day following this add to the drinking water ten drops of lemon juice and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. If new quills appear about the neck at the end of a month you may cease giving the sulphur and potash, etc., in the water, and add to the water instead 20 drops of chemical Food every second day during the last fortnight of the course of treatment. Glad you found previous advice useful.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

TREATMENT OF GREYPATES (A. Mack).—I have no doubt your Greypates are in the moult; probably you are not well up in birdy matters, so you may not detect it, and, if as you say they are wild, any loose feathers would soon be fanned out of the cage. The seeds you are giving them are rather too stimulating for general use. You had better make up the following mixture: Teazle 4 parts, canary 3 parts, hemp 2 parts, summer rape 1 part, and give them this as stock food. Also mix 3 parts niger to 1 of maw, and give a little every other day. Crack some sunflower seeds and give daily. If you can procure a good brand of wild seed mixture, they could have a spoonful of it occasionally. This you would find particularly useful during the winter months, but just now you should be giving them a liberal supply of wild food, which you can collect for yourself, especially thistles. These are in their prime now, and if you take a trip to the fields and waste places with a decent sized bag, you can get enough in an hour or so to last some time. The seed heads should be laid out in the sun to thoroughly dry before storing. In addition to these you can get sow thistle, hard heads, plantains, etc. Failing a good supply of these, give the birds a little seed that has been kept damp for a few days until it commences to germinate. Keep them in a fair-sized cage. Get them as steady as you can, and let them bathe frequently. Do not spray them unless you are obliged to, as it is much better for them to bathe naturally. If they are cock birds they will commence to sing as soon as they are through the moult. Do not leave off their present seed too suddenly. Break them from it carefully.

TROUBLE WITH LINNETS (Robt. Melvin).—Personally, I have never had any trouble in moulting Linnets, either in cage or aviary, and I am rather surprised that you should fail with these and succeed with all the other Finches. I think you would have been wise to have sent one of the dead birds to Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination; it would probably have given you the clue you want as to the proper treatment. If your Linnets are with other birds it is just possible you are feeding rather heavily, and Linnets cannot stand rich food. If this is the case, I would advise you to try a change of diet, and feed as follows: Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape and chnlock 1 part each, and supply them liberally with wild food, and if you think you would like to give them something in the way of soft food, let it be soaked seed. A pinch of salt occasionally at the bottom of the cage aids digestion. I fear I cannot advise you further without knowing more of your treatment.

STOCKING AVIARY (T. S. F.).—I gather from your sketch of aviary and notes that you want one of your compartments for breeding, and the other for singing birds and birds of plumage. Taking No. 1 aviary first, you could turn in there from 4 to 6 Canary hens, and two cock Canaries, or, if you preferred to breed Mules, a couple of stout Goldfinches, or even one Goldie and a Linnet or Greenfinch. Do not overcrowd this breeding aviary. You will probably do better with 4 healthy hens than 6, although in aviary breeding one generally has to remove a hen or two as the season goes on.

I notice on the drawing of No. 2 aviary you say "How many Goldfinches and Bullfinches?" Half-a-dozen birds would be sufficient for this aviary. If you have all cocks, you can please yourself as to your mixture, but if you include both sexes, you had better have one pair of Bullfinches and a cock Goldfinch with two hens. Hen Bullfinches do not as a rule agree very well together. Get these birds as soon as you can and turn them in before the winter. (2) The seed you sent is called Persicaria. It is useful in wild seed mixtures. The grains are very hard when ripe, and consequently birds only take it sparingly.

FEEDING YOUNG BLACKBIRD (N. V. Charles).—The sample of food you sent is all right for the purpose it is intended, but I would advise you to feed your bird on something more nourishing. Blackbirds are scarcely so robust as most people think, and I fear there are many badly fed. You had better procure a lb. of insectile food, as used for Warblers, and feed him on this, mixing it with scraped carrot or damping it with a spoonful of fresh milk. You will get far more song out of your bird with generous treatment. Dissolve as much Glanbr's salts as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonsful of water, and give him for one day only, repeating the dose three days later. I think you would do better to keep him inside for a time and partly cover the cage with a thin cloth; this will assist him to shed his feathers, and help you in getting him steady. You should speak to him quietly when you go near the cage, and a good time to do this is directly after he has had his bath. Birds soon get to know their attendants, and the Blackbird, as a rule, is not a very diffident subject to manage. Do not forget to give him all the insects you can gather, also plenty of fruit. The wild Blackbirds are living on it just now; apples and pears are their favourites.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (Buchan).—Your aviary would accommodate 4 pairs of birds, but it is not large enough for them to nest in. If you are desirous to breed in it you would do far better to give it up to one pair only; your chances of success would then be much better. Anyway, if you would be content to have them for pleasure only, the three pairs you mention and one other would do nicely. Linnets would suit you; they are not quarrelsome nor greedy. (2) You are not obliged to have all cock birds; properly assorted pairs agree well, and to my mind, are far more interesting than single birds. If you decide to have all males, your selection could include one or two Buntings. These agree, as a rule, very well with Finches and are content if they get plenty of canary seed, and if you have these in an aviary it is as well to keep a vessel full of this seed for them. A good staple food for a mixed aviary would be: Canary seed 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape 2 parts. Also little sunflower daily, and every other day a spoonful per bird of wild seed mixture, which you can purchase in packet form from most corn dealers. See that it is wild seed—not simply a mixture of ordinary seeds. Hemp, niger and maw could be given in small quantities on other days. These seeds are more for the benefit of the Goldies than the others. The food vessels should be of the self-filling kind, so that they do not require constant attention, although they should be filled at regular intervals. If your aviary is outside, put these vessels so that the mice are unable to get at the seed. This at all times is a difficult matter; in fact, the only safe way is to suspend the vessels from the roof by a thin wire. The water vessels should be outside and washed and filled daily. In a small place the bath should be hung on outside in the same way as one does with ordinary cages. A small bath cage with bath fitted to it can be purchased at any bird dealer's.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

BUDGERIGARS NOT FEATHERING (Tickle).—Budgerigars that have been inbred for several generations, that have been allowed to exhaust themselves by too continuous breeding, and birds that are getting old and exhausted, often throw young that do not feather properly. Your birds may ultimately feather all right, as they are strong and otherwise fit. Keep them by themselves in a roomy cage that will enable them to be active. Give them a little scalded biscuit daily, lightly spreading it with cod liver oil emulsion and dusting it with sulphur. If they prefer it better so, you can make a sop of the biscuit, using, of course, the emulsion and sulphur as above. While it lasts supply seeding and flowering grass ad lib., also grit, and keep cuttle-bone continually in the cage; otherwise the ordinary dietary will suffice. I advise, however, keeping a millet spray hanging from the top of the cage, as picking out the seeds will supply them with healthy exercise. Apart from this there is nothing else to do but wait on nature to right matters. If the birds keep strong and continue to do well, undoubtedly the feathers will ultimately be produced. On the other hand it is possible that inherent weakness may develop, and that they may lose some of the few feathers they now possess; in such case the best thing is to have them painlessly destroyed. If the parents of these bring off another brood similarly deficient in plumage, then I should not permit them to breed again, at any rate, not for some considerable time.

LEMON-CRESTED COCKATOO NESTING (N.H.W.).—I do not think the Lemon-Crest has been bred in captivity in the British Isles; at any rate, my memory does not recall any such instance. But it was bred at liberty in the grounds of Northrepp's Hall. There is, of course, quite an element of risk in removing the fowl's egg, all must depend upon the demeanour of the birds; if you can remove it unobtrusively it would be better to do so, but I should advise having a warmed dummy egg similar to one of their own to put in its place; of course, if the hen's egg hatches out the chick will have to be removed at all risks. Two to three eggs are usually laid. As regards diet, keep up the ordinary menu; supply also broken biscuits, ripe fruit, green food, nuts, dry boiled potato, carrot and stale crusts of bread. While feeding young they may be given mealworms, and any large smooth caterpillars obtainable; wood-boring larvae would be very acceptable, especially large ones. If another egg is laid I should risk the removal of the fowl's egg, if you can get access to the nest without causing a disturbance or driving off the incubating bird. It is a most interesting event, and I hope you will communicate the result to the Editor in due course. I had better, perhaps, add that these birds develop slowly, and that the young are likely to remain in the nest nearly three months, or more.

GREEN PARROT WITH DIARRHEA (H. F.).—You do not mention the kind of Parrot it is, which makes it rather difficult to be so definite as one would like as to its diet. It should not have soft food, and possibly this lies at the root of the trouble; however, you had better give a little soft food till the diarrhoea yields; prepare it so: Into a teacup put one teaspoonful cornflour, ditto of condensed milk, and half a teaspoonful of cod liver oil emulsion. Beat into a paste, then fill the cup barely half (say, one-third) full of boiling water, and again stir well; while still hot pour this over either stale bread, plain biscuits, or sponge cake. Give this daily till the diarrhoea yields, and when this occurs write again at once. It will be well also to lightly colour the drinking water with chemical food. Give the following seed mixture: one quart each (best only) white oats and giant canary seed, and one pint each sunflower seed, wheat, dahl, hemp, and shelled pea-nuts, well mix and keep supply in cage. Also supply ripe fruit, piece dry biscuit, sponge cake. Keep cuttlebone and Parrot grit continually in the cage, also a piece of a thick branch for it to exercise its mandibles upon. As the bird has been in bad health for some weeks you cannot look for rapid amendment, but unless too far gone there should soon be a slight improvement at any rate.

TANAGERS AND SUGARBIRDS (Bingley).—I should need a whole page to properly answer your queries. A good insectile mixture (soft-food), ripe fruit, milk-sop, and a few live insects. In an outdoor aviary you had better supply all the above and leave the birds to help themselves. It is most difficult to lay down any rule as to what species of Tanagers will agree together, much depends on the size of the aviary and the extent of its cover; it is best, however, to choose species which are dissimilar in colour when they are to occupy the same aviary. Yes, they can be kept in cages during the winter, keeping a watchful oversight that they do not become over-fat. Tanagers so far have been shy breeders in captivity, but the Scarlet, Blue, and Black have all reared young in captivity. I have kept Violet, Blue, Black, Maroon and Scarlet Tanagers together in a large garden aviary. Their song is of varying merit, the Violet is a good songster. I must know size of aviary before I can express any opinion as to how many pairs it will accommodate; it would be better to put other softbills with them than give the aviary entirely up to the Tanagrides. I can only say that the male Violet Tanager is rich violet-black above, with the crown of the head and under-parts rich cadmium yellow; the hen is principally olive green, greyer and lighter on the under-parts. Sugarbirds do well on a syrup sop of Mellin's food, Horlick's malted milk, and honey, mixed with boiling water. Their song does not amount to a great deal, but some of them have a cheery, pleasing little lay. They will do in the same aviary with Tanagers, but you must be careful what you mix together. I should suggest two pairs only, say, either Blue, and Yellow-winged, or Blue and Purple Sugarbirds. Other parts of query same as Tanagers. They will do well in the winter caged and in the temperature of an ordinary living room, but must not be subjected to draughts. Sugarbirds have not yet been bred in captivity, though in several aviaries success has been all but obtained. The foreign Starlings make better aviary birds than cage birds; as regards the latter condition they are about on a par with our English bird. If there were a shelter attached to your aviary they would live out of doors all the year round. Malabar Starlings have reared young in my aviary this season. One pair could be kept with the Tanagers, etc. Your aviaries should be far more workable if a shelter shed, say, 6ft. square, were attached to each; the shelter should be span-roofed, and can be quite open to the aviary; the walls should have "a hedge" of twiggy branches fixed all round them. The Euphonia Tanagers, of which the Violet is one, and the Chlorophonia Tanager, of which the Necklace is a representative, are different species. Once established, however, and treated as you suggest, most species of Tanagers and Sugarbirds should prove fairly long-livers, but you are almost sure to get annoying losses in getting your collection together, unless you procure acclimatised birds, and even then a removal from one locality to another is always attended with a certain amount of risk.

POST MORTEMES.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

H. R. CONTON.—The seed heads you send are those of the common ragwort (Senecio jacobaea). This seed forms a capital addition to the diet of Linnets, Redpolls, and Goldfinches, but would not be in itself sufficient as a stock food.

Softbills. With Blackbirds, Thrushes, Jackdaws, Larks, and most of the more commonly kept species of insectivorous birds.

This work, lucidly written by a noted specialist, contains fullest directions for Hand-rearing, Keeping, and Exhibiting the most popular of our British Birds. Each bird is dealt with separately, its nesting habits, etc., are fully explained, and these, together with a description of its general characteristics, will enable the novice to easily identify the various species. Each part contains a coloured plate and numerous black and white illustrations by the author.

A HANDY BOOK.

MULE and HYBRID BREEDERS

make your 1915 breeding season a record in every way by purchasing a copy of

CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS.

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as a leading Exhibitor, and a leading Expert and Judge. Edited by G. E. Weston and C. A. House.

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

THE PRACTICAL AND COMPREHENSIVE

WORK WHICH ALL HYBRID BREEDERS REQUIRE.

CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL

This issue has met with greater success than ever before, and

THEY ARE SELLING OUT FAST.

Be advised, and send for a copy
NOW before it is too late.

Remember!

We had to Disappoint Many

Fanciers last year, as the entire edition was sold out before they ordered their copies.

These are some of the Contents:

THE BIRD-KEEPER'S YEAR.

A new feature, which will remind the fancier of essential details of management, the timely attention to which goes so far to ensure success in the hobby, and which gives valuable hints month by month.

THE CANARY BREEDER'S OPPORTUNITY.

By Claude St. John. Telling of the bright future that is in store for Canary breeders, and showing how to take advantage of the existing circumstances in order eventually to profit by the increased demand which is certain to arise in the near future.

HOW TO MAKE BIRD-BREEDING PAY.

By O. E. Brooks. Demonstrating that the hobby of bird-keeping may be made profitable as well as pleasurable. Indicating the mistakes to avoid, and the proper methods to be pursued.

THE FASCINATION OF AN AVIARY OF FOREIGN BIRDS.

By W. Wallis. The delights of foreign bird-keeping are dealt with in this interesting and practical contribution. The fittings of the aviary, the kind of birds to keep, and their requirements in the way of food and accommodation are all described, and there is an illustration of an outdoor aviary which is at once inexpensive, roomy, and adequate in every respect.

WITH THE WILD BIRDS DURING 1914.

By H. Norman. In this article our British bird expert writes in his well-known style on the birds about which he is so well qualified to write, and all lovers of birds in their natural surroundings will be interested in this feature.

HOW TO REDUCE THE FOOD BILL.

By Claude St. John. Useful hints that will help bird-keepers to economise in this time of temporary stress; showing how the expense of feeding may be reduced without any detriment whatever to the well-being of the birds.

A REVIEW OF THE 1914-15 SEASON.

How the birds have fared during the year in each section. All are dealt with:—Norwich Plainheads, Yorkshires, Greens, Cinnamons, Rollers, Whites, Border Fancies, Crests, Lancashires and Lizards, Scotch Fancies and Belgians, Dutch Frills, Hybrids and British Birds, Foreign Birds.

A DIRECTORY OF JUDGES OF CAGE BIRDS.

DIARY AND CALENDAR FOR THE YEAR WITH EGG-HATCHING TABLE.
ALPHABETICAL LIST OF CAGE BIRD ASSOCIATIONS.
&c., &c., &c.

No matter what variety of birds you keep, whether novice or old hand, there is information in this bird-keeper's encyclopaedia of the greatest use to you. Each article is written by an expert, and in their experiences of failures and successes you will find the way to the top of the ladder.

Club Reports.

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES CLUB
Meeting, September 4, Mr. Peter Pettigrew presided over a good attendance. Classification of annual show was confirmed at 61 classes. Mr. J. H. Adam will give a paper on "General Management of Canaries," at next meeting, Oct. 2, at 7.-J. H. Adam, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Sept. 4, Lockhart's; Mr. Walton, chair, before a very poor attendance. We have engaged Trinity Church Schools for our annual show, Nov. 12, 13, and it behooves all members to put their shoulder to the wheel and try and make the show a success, as we are going to more expense than ever before; for a show the rooms are ideal. I should be pleased to hear from any outside member or friend who would care to give a special so as to make up as good a schedule as possible.—H. Best, Sec.

BATHGATE C.B.S.

Meeting and F.F. show, September 4; over 20 birds were staged. Nov. 1, 2, 3, Strachan, Mules and Hybrids were a strong class; three Greenfinch-Bullfinches, and one Linnet-Bullie being among the collection: 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, McLean; 5, 7, Strachan. Hardly a bird, 2, Strachan. The president, Mr. R. Bald, judged, and gave everybody satisfaction. Agreed to hold another table show, Oct. 16, classes to be fixed at next meeting, Sept. 18. This brought a very successful meeting to a close.—A. Nicol, Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.
Meeting, Sept. 4, Victoria Hotel, Charterhouse Street, E.C.4, Mr. F. Harrison presided over a fair attendance of members, and one visitor, to hear Mr. Hodder lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. Mr. Hodder, however, was unable to be present, and in his absence the members passed a very pleasant evening in some interesting questions and answers. Mr. H. Bell will open a discussion on colour-feeding at next meeting, Sept. 18. Visitors will receive a hearty welcome.—W. Gilbert, Hon. Sec.

SOUTHMOOR SOCIAL CLUB.

Meeting, Aug. 29, Mr. Taylor, chair, and a big attendance. Decided to go on with stewards for annual show, Nov. 6 and 7. The deputation report from Consett was very satisfactory, the Chairman and Secretary also gave a very satisfactory report from the managing board; they are going to give the usual donation of £5, which is a good lift to a society. Decided that Chairman and Sec. get paid their expenses for deputation to Consett, and the meeting closed after a pleasant evening had been spent.—George Lane, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting and table show held Aug. 26, Mr. Crawhall presided. Decided to hold our members' show, Dec. 4, in the room adjoining the King Edward Hotel, kindly lent by Mr. J. B. Bell. The following shows were granted the club's patronage: Newcastle, Oct. 23; Carlisle, Oct. 27 and 28 (champion section only); Hartlepool, Nov. 6; Blaydon, Nov. 12 and 13; Haltwhistle, Nov. 19 and 20; Whitehaven (date not fixed). Table show awards: Nov. Cl. 1, 4, Havis; 2, 3, Studholme; vhc, Gregory; hc, c, Leach. Mr. Wm. Mather judged to the satisfaction of everyone.

SOUTHAMPTON C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 1, Mr. W. G. Fellows, chair. Mr. W. Sargent was elected a member. Mr. G. Gamble had come from Winchester to give his lecture on the Yorkshire Canary, but owing to the heavy rain the attendance was limited, and Mr. Gamble kindly consented to postpone his lecture until next meeting (Oct. 5, at 7.30). In order not to disappoint those present Mr. Gamble gave some seasonable and useful hints which were much appreciated. He dealt with causes and cures of diarrhoea, etc. in young birds, and laid stress on the need of at once isolating any ailing bird and cleaning out the cage immediately to prevent spread of disease. Birds should be selected and classed for stock, exhibition, and sale after the moult, never before, as many a bird winning in F.F. shows takes a wrong turning and dashes the fancier's hopes, while many a little thought of one takes the right turn and moults out a winner. Mr. Gamble gave his system of colour-feeding, and pointed out the need to thoroughly clean out cages before moult, that birds might not soil their new plumage. Care was needed in seeing that show cages were clean, the best of birds shown dirty in a dirty cage being heavily handicapped. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer closed the meeting.—G. J. Slade, Asst. Sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Quarterly general meeting, Headquarters, Sept. 1, before a moderate attendance. Schedule for Open Show, Oct. 27 and 28, was finally gone through and the show should prove one of the most attractive in the North. The classification is Bord. 18, Nor. 14, York 41, Hyh. 5, Brit. 11, Foreign 4, Gift 1, and the show will be held under the patronage of the B.F.C.C., N.B.F.C.C., E. and W.B.F.C.C., Y.C.C., C. and W.Y.C.C., O.N.P. N.N.P.C., etc. For the six sections, as before stated, we have secured six silver cups for most points in each section and we have also two solid silver cups for most points throughout the show and best bird in the show. The members' silver cup is awarded this year for the best Norwich Canary shown by a member. (Nine silver cups in all). With such a schedule before the fanciers, our show should prove second to none this season as the railway facilities are the best in the country. London, Leeds, etc., 3 1/2 hours; Newcastle, 2 hours. All on through mail trains. All birds in fact, no matter what distance, if not delivered on same night as show finishes will be at their destination on the following morning. Sec. was instructed to make arrangements with the Manchester Society to have any birds sent on to their show by train leaving Carlisle at 4.22 p.m., so that they have time to settle down to that show also. Prize money as usual, 10s., 5s., 3s., 2s.; the judges are Mr. Robson, London; Mr. T. McCredie, Dumfries; and Mr. W. Nicholson, Stockton-on-Tees. The gift class birds will all be sold for some deserving charity, so exhibitors will be doing good to some national cause if they forward an odd cage (show cage not included in the sale). All profit from selling classes will also be added. All our members are very enthusiastic, and so we expect fanciers to rally round and make the show the success the society enterprise deserves.—John C. Bell, Hon. Sec.

Mr. J. R. Meikle, hon. sec. Scottish National C.B.S., has removed from Brougham Street to 15, Angle Park Terrace, Edinburgh.

We have fixed our Old Bird Show and Open Linnet class for Nov. 27 (Mr. A. Hirst, of Accrington, will judge), writes Mr. R. Charleson, secretary Leigh C.B.S.

Mr. Geo. Broome, hon. sec., writes that the Blaenavon C.B.S. has been compelled to alter the date of its open show from Nov. 4 to Nov. 25, so as to engage Mr. Robson to judge, and he hopes this will meet with the approval of intending exhibitors, as it will not clash with any other show for a reasonable distance.

Mr. Jas. Fyfe, hon. sec. Forfar C.B.S., writes that no shows will be held in Forfar this year, as all the lalls are in military occupation.

The Glasgow and Western Counties Club has engaged the following judges for its annual show, Jan. 22, 1916, writes Mr. J. H. Adam, hon. sec. Canaries, G. Arnott (Sindclartown) and G. Hislop (Stirling); British and Mules, J. S. Fyfe (Forfar).

We hear from Mr. F. Turner, hon. sec. Leeds Quality Linnet Singing Club, that at each club contest held in the future there will be two special prizes given for the best plumaged birds, irrespective of their singing abilities.

At the next monthly meeting of the London and Provincial O.S. on Sept. 16, at 8, at the Raglan Hotel, St. Martin's-le-Grand, Aldersgate Street, E.C., Mr. Geo. Mortlock is giving a lecture on British Birds, writes Mr. H. L. Huggins, hon. sec. All interested will receive a hearty welcome.

Societies desiring the patronage of the Norwich Plainhead Club should kindly make application at once, as the committee meets on Saturday next, Sept. 18, writes F. Cunliffe, 19, Lark Street, Burnley, sec. The committee have withdrawn all restrictions regarding classifications, judges, and number of cup shows, so please hurry up.

The Bird-Keeper's Roll of Honour.

The City and Suburban A.C.B. to the Front.

SIR,—At this moment your Editorial note this week has come as a fitting commentary upon the magnificent patriotic spirit prevailing in the Cage Bird Fancy, and I hasten to assure you of my whole-hearted approval of your idea to institute a ROLL OF HONOUR. It is with especial pride that I send you the subjoined names of members of the City and Suburban A.C.B., who have responded to their Nation's call:—Miss G. Shepherd (Red Cross Nurse), and Messrs. A. Beavington, A. Fleet, A. J. Marley, C. Rolls, A. Thomas, A. Bryden, H. R. Lowe, W. Piggins, J. Taylor, and E. Bush.

V. WYNN, hon. sec.

SIR,—For our society, Blaenavon C.B.S., there are two—Horace Durham, in the Ambulance Co., and James C. Daniel, in the Royal Naval Division.

G. BROOME, hon. sec.

SIR,—The Southampton C.B.S. has only one at present—Mr. F. Snowden, 18, St. Mark's Terrace, Southampton. Several members of the society are working for the Government in other ways.

W. L. PAGE, hon. sec.

Who Sent This?

Among the replies to our last advt. in CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Moore, Lambeth Aviaries, Gladstone Street, St. George's Road, London, S.E., was a letter from a Mr. Stockley for a pair of Norwich. A P.O. was enclosed, but no address was given. We trust he will write again, as we do not want him to think it was our mistake. The postmark on the envelope was Newcastle.

Cup for Cinnamons at Plymouth.

A silver cup is promised by Mr. A. B. Brown, to be competed for at the Plymouth and Western Counties O.S. open show, Oct. 12 and 13, writes Mr. W. Luscombe, assist. sec. This cup is for Cinnamon Norwich, and is to be won by a young bird either bred or purchased by exhibitor. Here is a chance for Cinn. fanciers to send their birds west, as purchasers are about. Mr. Craven has guaranteed a Greenfinch class.

The Dartford Warbler in Staffordshire.

In Mr. J. R. B. Masefield's yearly report on the Zoology of Staffordshire, it is noted that a Dartford Warbler was seen on March 22, near Rugeley, by the Rev. J. O. Coussmaker. Witherby's "Hand-list of British Birds" says there is "Some evidence that a pair bred at Cannock Chase about 1870," so that this would appear to be the only appearance of the species in Staffordshire during the past forty-five years.

The Cuckoo as a Bird of Prey.

In "British Birds" for September Mr. C. E. Milburn gives an account of the killing by a Cuckoo of three nestling Meadow Pipits. He says: "About a foot away from the nest two nestlings were laid upon a flat piece of slag, their necks broken, and blood oozing from their heads and bodies as if they had been battered upon the piece of slag. Another young one, evidently the last to be tackled before my intervention, had dropped into a crevice close to the nest and was just alive. This was replaced into the nest, and I had to leave the place. On returning to

It has been decided that all competitions of the Southern Yorkshire C.C. should stand this year, writes Mr. J. W. Rennie, Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants., hon. sec. Societies desirous of the club's patronage should make application as early as possible, with dates of show and judges, and stating if they are willing to have novice support as well as champion.

We have appointed the following judges for our open show at the Co-operative Hall, Benwell, writes Mr. J. W. Reed, sec., Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S., 218, Ladykirk Road, Newcastle: Messrs. T. C. Crawhall, T. B. Tomlinson, T. Robson, and C. Waters. I hope to have schedules ready in about a fortnight, and shall be glad if fanciers who do not receive one will apply for same and watch for advts. in CAGE BIRDS.

"British Birds" for September, Messrs. Witherby and Co., High Holborn, one shilling monthly, opens with "Notes on the Breeding-habits of the Asiatic Golden Plover," by Miss M. D. Haviland, with illustrations from photographs by the authoress. Mr. C. W. Colthrup contributes photographs and notes on the nests of Redshanks, and the rest of the number is made up of the usual interesting notes on wild birds.

SIR.—Our society, East Ardsley C.B.S., has one of its members with the colours, so I am sending you his name and regiment—James Hayward, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry. Our members are very pleased with your idea of a Roll of Honour for Bird-keepers.

ALBERT WALTON, sec.

[We hope that the hon. secs. of all societies with members serving with the colours will let us have particulars, in order that this Roll of Honour may be a complete record of bird-lovers who have responded to the call of their country. Readers who are themselves serving, or who have friends at the front, should also furnish us with their names so that they may be included. Some readers who are members of Cage Bird Societies have already sent in their own names, but we are reserving those for the present, so that they may be included in the records which we shall in due course receive from the respective honorary secretaries. For a long time it has been a feature of society meetings that resolutions have been passed to the effect that members at the front should be exempt from subscriptions during the term of their service. There must therefore be many societies whose secretaries have yet to forward names.—EDITOR.]

the scene of this little tragedy two days later this nestling also lay dead upon the same piece of slag as the other two, so it seems that the Cuckoo must have returned and finished her work after I left."

In the September issue of the Avicultural Magazine, the organ of the Avicultural Society, an interesting reprint is commenced of a paper giving the results of the Feeding of Humming Birds in Nature, and read before the American Ornithologists' Union. During a period extending over seven years small phials filled with syrup were placed inside artificial flowers, and the birds resorted freely to these in preference to the natural flowers growing in the vicinity. Among the other articles are: "The Great Crested Touraco," by Leslie M. Seth Smith; "Breakfast Guests," by K. Curry; "Red Rosellas at Liberty," by the Marquis of Tavistock; "Diamond Doves," by Miss Alderson; etc. Dr. E. Hopkinson continues his useful list, "English Names for the Parrots," and the usual notes and correspondence complete a good issue.

MY OUTDOOR BIRD-ROOM : Its Construction and Its Fittings

By
A. E. Moule
(Abertillery).

MY sole object in this article is to give my experience and observations, in a clear and terse manner, to enlighten these who are about to embark upon the entertaining and delightful pastime of bird-keeping in an outdoor room, and I trust that my article will be found useful to readers of CAGE BIRDS. Readers must first remember that if a thing is worth doing, it is worth doing well. Whatever you do, if done well, you look upon with pride.

As will be seen from the illustration of the exterior of my outside bird-room, its construction is quite simple, and yet the building is pleasing to the eye, and at the same time adapted to the requirements of its feathered occupants. My bird-room faces in a southerly direction, which is considered the best position by experts, as it gets the advantage of the morning sun, which is very essential.

Dimensions and Construction.

The roof of the building rises from the back to the front, thus providing to the best advantage both light and ventilation. It is 13ft. in length, 6ft. 6in. from back to front, 6ft. high at the back, and 7ft. in the front. It is, as will be seen, built upon a stone foundation 2ft. 6in. high, so that ventilation is ample, and the place is nice and dry. There is nothing very complicated as regards the way in which it is put together, as it is made in sections, and any fancier with a little knowledge of joinery, and a certain amount of patience, would find little difficulty in constructing his own aviary after the same fashion.

The ribs of the entire building, or stays as some call them, are all 3in. by 2in. I advise them to be of red deal, as this wood is, as a rule, nice and straight in the grain, and lasts much longer than spruce. The match-boarding outside is red deal, one inch thick when finished. The ribs are placed edgewise to the boarding, and a lining of 3-in. match-boarding is fixed inside, therefore there is a space of three inches between the two boards. I have this space filled with both sawdust and shavings, as I find that sawdust alone tends to draw the damp, but the shavings mixed with it tend to keep it aerated and dry; the complete walls, therefore, are nearly five inches thick.

The roof is of corrugated iron, lined inside with 3-in. match-boards, the cavity between being filled up with sawdust and shavings, as are the walls. The floor is of ordinary flooring boards one inch thick. The window is 3ft. 6in. high and 2ft. 4in. wide, with the top part opening outwards and upwards, thus preventing the rain beating in when it is open.

The Lobby and its Uses.

The lobby or outer compartment not only prevents direct draught through the door, but also prevents birds which may have got out of their cages by accident from escaping when the door is opened for entering the room. The main supports of this lobby, it being constructed separately from the bird-room, are two beams, nine inches by three, running underneath the floor of the bird-room and bedded into a nine-inch wall at the back, therefore it is very substantial; the sides of the lobby are screwed to the front of the building.

The size of the lobby, 5ft. by 4ft. 6in., gives one ample space in which to move about; it is 6ft. 6in. high at the back, and 5ft. 9in. in the front, and the walls are made of one-inch matching and lined as usual. There is a seat facing the door, and this, I find, is a handy place to keep a travelling case or two underneath.

The lobby window opens outwards so as not to be in the way inside when open; there are a couple of steps leading up to the entrance. I may say that there is a glass-pannelled door leading into the bird-room. I have Veronese glass in the windows and doors; this prevents the birds being frightened by any passing object, besides giving a nice effect, as well as being just as cheap as ordinary glass at the present time.

It will be noticed, that I have built the lobby roof lower than the main roof; the object of this is to leave room for a fanlight over the inner door to act as a ventilator during the summer months, and to provide additional light. I have the outside painted chocolate colour, which is very serviceable, and the windows are picked out white. I would advise anyone to use the best paint, as it is cheapest in the end.

I found the ventilation to be a very delicate matter to deal with, as a perfect system is absolutely necessary, and I must admit here that I had a lot of trouble before I got it to anything like perfection. The chief nuisance was sweating, which I believe is a trouble with a good many fanciers. Another difficulty was how to avoid excessive heat in summer and intense cold in winter.

After writing to several persons on the subject, and being advised what to do by one and another, I came to the conclusion that I should cut my place all to pieces, so I was determined to remedy the evil myself, which I am pleased to say I accomplished.

I placed a ventilator in the centre of the floor at the back, that is, underneath my cages, size 18 inches by 6 inches, with a shutter attached, so as to regulate the inlet of air. From this ventilator I have underneath the floor a pipe leading to the outside, by this means avoiding a direct air current. At the outlets of this I have two circular ventilators—that is, of course, one at each end—at the highest points—they work on the same idea as those on the railway carriages. As will be seen by the picture, these are shielded on the outside to protect them from rain and wind.

To Make Ventilation Perfect.

To provide against a very hot day, I have an extra ventilator eight inches square in the far end of the room, at a very low point, and working on the same principle. Then I have the fanlight which opens outwards, and with the complete system I can avoid either excessive heat or cold, and practically obviate sweating, excepting now and then a trifle on the window and door. By the above system of ventilation the air is drawn from the birds and not towards them, as I have seen in a good many instances, and which is a great mistake, as it is injurious to the birds.

As regards heating, after bitter experience, I do not advise heating apparatus of any description whatever, either indoors or outside. My advice is to have nothing at all to do with it; let your birds be cold-room bred, they will be far more healthy and robust. You will have less trouble with them, and they will stand more illness if attacked. Besides this, artificial heating involves unnecessary expense and trouble, and also anxiety and worry.

As regards the fitting up of a bird-room. We will first deal with the decoration. The most suitable colour, in my opinion, is a pea-green, not too light; this is for the sides, the ceiling to be painted white, the whole to have about three coats, and all finished off with a good coat of varnish. Then you can wash or lightly scrub it when it is dirty. The floor to be covered with lino, and I prefer this to be plain, for then there is no pattern to wear off; have everything compact and comfortable while you are about it.

The Rack for the Cages.

The next item of great importance is the rack for the cages. There are many different ideas and opinions as to which is the best and most efficient. Of course, every fancier has his or her own particular idea, but in my humble opinion you cannot beat a wooden rack, of course providing that it is well made and every joint glued so as not to give a harbour for the pest of the Fancy.

My own rack is made of 2in. by 1in. battening, the rails being let into uprights at each end, and with additional uprights let into the rails at every two cages apart. Providing the wood is nicely finished off, and polished black, a rack of this description looks well. The bottom rails are about 16 inches from the ground, and are supported by turned pillars. I place the rails sufficiently far apart vertically to give the cages a little play in order to be able to pull them out without noise and without exertion.

Mr. Moule's Outdoor Bird-Room.

The Breeding of the Roller Canary

A paper by Mr. A. Harper, Bilston, read to the members of the City of Birmingham C.B.S.

FOR frames to fix baskets or pans in I have boxes about four or six inches square, with a hole cut in centre, a little smaller than the basket, so that it fits tight. A bit of wire is fixed on back to hang it up with, and I like the brackets so arranged that you can just reach them nicely. Then you can tidy up your room, etc., at any time, without disturbing the sitting hens. Some hens are very peculiar; they leave the nest as soon as anyone enters their breeding place, and will not go on again until you have gone, so I always try to arrange matters so that the birds have a secluded place to build in if possible. You may depend on having far better results if they are where they cannot see you, rather than having to build where they are often disturbed. I find the brackets very useful—they keep the young from falling out of their nest, and catch the droppings, thus keeping the walls clean, also cages where latter are used.

To get the birds into breeding condition, I give them a bit of egg food once a week all through the winter, and occasionally maw, niger, linseed, and hemp in their tins. When I pair up I give the egg food about three times a week, and the foods I have just mentioned every other day in separate vessels. When the birds have been together a week I generally have a few with eggs, and as these appear I take them away and substitute dummies till the fourth is laid, then I return them. By so doing you get the young ones hatched out more even and stand a better chance of getting them reared, for if one is hatched out two or three days before the others, he would have nearly all the food, and the little ones would be neglected.

When the Young Ones Arrive.

In 14 days, if eggs are good (sometimes 13), there are generally some young ones, then I or the wife give egg food fresh twice a day, also milk sop, also young dandelion leaves and seeds, not forgetting English rape seedlings, which latter I find the birds are very fond of, and I consider it equal to watercress, while you know it is fresh if you grow it yourself, so there is no risk, and it is safe to use all the season, although as the weather gets hotter I give lettuce for a change, also seedly chickweed, plantain, shepherd's purse, milk thistle, etc. Nothing seems to come amiss, and they always seem to enjoy it.

When the young are six days old I usually ring them, but if very strong, at five days, while if they appear to have been neglected I wait until several days older, so one must be guided by circumstances. I keep a sharp look-out for a few days after I have rung them, as some hens will throw them out, but if the rings are darkened with blacking or some such substance, they generally leave them alone. I think myself it is their brightness that attracts the hens, but by using white nesting material they are not nearly so conspicuous and not so likely to be interfered with.

I always try to have a look night and morning to see that no young ones are thrown out of nest, and if they are being fed all right. If so, I leave them alone, otherwise I generally moisten a little egg food in my mouth and give them a bit with a little stick nicely rounded at point. I have saved lots of youngsters in this way, but I always try to look when the hen is off, as some will forsake them if you interfere with them too much, so I never hand-feed, except as a last resource.

At a month old I usually cage off in flight cages and give them as much egg food as they will eat, also crushed hemp and milk sop, which latter I find they like very much if given fresh. I have saved many young ones with milk sop when everything else has failed, and it is very few that will not eat it if made in my way.

At six weeks old I gradually reduce the quantity of egg, also milk sop, but I give a little of each right through the moult, and if I have any looking a bit seedy I give crushed hemp as well, having first administered one drop of warm castor oil direct in their mouth.

At seven weeks old I put them into my largest flight right away from the breeding room, and put the best tutors I have to spare with them, and let them stop until they have moulted off. Then I cage them off separately in their singing cages till they have their full song. In bringing my little paper to a conclusion, I sincerely hope that whether you try my plan or any other, if any of you, old or new members, find anything I have read to you this evening of any benefit to you in the future, I shall be amply repaid.

Experience Up to Date.

Mr. Harper, since writing the paper, has slightly modified his breeding arrangements, and now uses the flights described in his lecture as breeding pens, a movable partition being placed in the centre, and a hen in each compartment. As these compartments roughly are about 3ft. 6in. x 2ft. 6in. x 2ft., the hens have really an aviary each, and he now goes in for pedigree breeding. The cock is only left in the cage until the hen commences to sit, and then is removed downstairs.

The nestpans have given way to the baskets, while the nest brackets are capital. The sides are about 1in. deep, back and front same depth, but a half-inch rail only, leaving half an inch space to scrape droppings through, and with a little sand on the bottom they can be kept in splendid condition. Mr. Harper always keeps a few cocks from early nests and also from last nests as tutors, by so doing he can depend upon the latter teaching the young their song while the early-hatched cocks are moulting, and these are then ready as tutors when the late-hatched ones drop into moult, although in several instances when the late-hatched birds have been used very little for breeding, he has found them miss the moult altogether.

His egg food is one hard-boiled egg to two teaspoonfuls of bread crumbs, made from home-made bread, dried in the oven and crushed with a rolling pin. For milk sop he uses one teaspoonful of condensed milk to a third of a teacupful of boiling water, and after stirring he adds a sufficient quantity of bread to soak up the milk, the bread being dried as for the egg food, but not crushed, only broken into pieces about the size of a Barcelona nut.

Correspondence.

The Patronage of the Crested Canary Club.

SIR,—May I ask the Hon. Sec. of the Crested Canary Club, through your columns, if the patronage of the Club is to be given to any shows this year. I understand that the Secretary of the Western Counties O.S., Plymouth, has written twice, but has had no reply. Plymouth Show is due on Oct. 12 and 13, and the Crested Fanciers in the West would like to see the good muster of our favourites that usually occurs at the old-established fixture.

J. BAVAGE.

Greenfinch-Siskin Hybrids.

SIR,—I noticed in this week's CAGE BIRDS a letter from Mr. Gray describing how he bred Hybrids from a Greenfinch cock and Siskin hen, and asking if they have been bred in the same way before. I have one in my possession at the present time, bred by that old fancier, Wm. Ramsay, of Kirriemuir. There were two of them in the nest, bred in a cage and reared by their own parents in the same manner as Mr. Gray's birds. They do not show much colour the first year, but after the second moult they show plenty of yellow in flights and tail. In size they are a little larger than the Siskin. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

JAMES FYFE.

The Scottish National Show.

SIR,—We beg to advise the members of the Scottish National C.B.S. that the adjourned general meeting will be held on Sept. 11, at 142, High Street, Edinburgh, at 7.45 p.m. The important question as to whether our show will be held this year as usual will be brought up for consideration, and we would impress upon every member to be present, if at all possible, to express his views on the matter. Should it be agreed to proceed with the exhibition, notice will be given, with permission of the Editor, in CAGE BIRDS of the following week, for the information of the general body of fanciers. Appointments will also be made of the Executive and Committee officials, and other business will be transacted. Specialist clubs who usually grant their patronage to the Scottish National are asked to keep date open pending our decision.

J. R. MEIKLE, Sec.

In Case of Short Entries.

SIR,—Now that the show season is close upon us it occurs to me that it would be interesting to have some opinions from fanciers in your valuable paper as to which is the best method for shows to adopt to cover themselves in case of short entries. Everyone will admit that some limit must be adopted by shows, and the usual methods are—(1) Cancelling of classes; (2) half prize money; (3) graduated prize money. In Plymouth we have usually followed the first idea, and from personal experience I know how galling it is to a secretary to return entries. For our show of Oct. 12 and 13 this year we are graduating our prize money, so that classes well filled will get seven prizes, and the smaller numbers will not be cancelled, but will have prize money in accordance with the numbers entered. I should very much like to have the opinion of readers of CAGE BIRDS on this matter.

THOS. POPE, Hon. Sec.

Breeding Rollers in an Aviary.

SIR,—I was very much interested in Mr. Harper's article on breeding Rollers in an aviary, and I intend giving his method a trial next season, but I should just like a little information on two points. Say, four hens and one cock are in the aviary, and in due course one hen hatches out her clutch of eggs, and the other three are not due to hatch for seven days. When I put the egg-food in the aviary, naturally all the sitting hens as well will eat up the egg-food. Will this not have a tendency to make the hens desert their nests through getting too good a food? Secondly, suppose the Roller cock is a well-trained bird, free from harshness or bad notes. Will the young cocks bred from him, if left to their own free will, without caging off, copy his song fairly accurately, or will they develop into common singing birds with the usual choppy and harsh notes, such as are heard in other varieties of songsters? Of course, I should not think of keeping any other variety within hearing of the Rollers. If Mr. Harper would give me this information I should be much obliged.

W. HAINSWORTH.

Intelligence in Birds.

SIR,—The discussion re "Intelligence in Birds" is most interesting. I have a Tovi Parakeet which is more out of his cage than in it. He hates to be left alone, and either screeches till someone fetches him or comes out to find them. My mother was ill for some months, and her bedroom is next to the room in which his cage was. He always, when lonely, flew off his cage and trotted in to her. Last night I was dressing in my room, which is up two short flights which have a turn in the middle. I heard "Sammy" calling, and went to my door to see. Imagine my surprise to see him hopping up each step, turn the corner, and come on up the stairs. For about six stairs there is an overhanging ceiling, as it is the top of the house, and the skylight being very high up, this portion of the staircase was in darkness, so he stopped at the dark stairs, "talked" a lot, then began to scramble up one by one till he reached the top and safety! We have only been in this house two years, but he knows every part as well as we do. He has been up to my room on my shoulder before, but not very often; surely this is intelligence and not instinct.

(Miss) D. E. PITHIE.

SIR,—I agree with your correspondents that this discussion has run its course, and nothing remains but to add a few valedictory remarks. Our friend Mr. Johnson reappears upon the scene, and this time with a skilful argument; namely that, if humans—the most intelligent of all animals—do not die of grief, therefore dying of grief cannot be a sign of intelligence. I admit the soundness of the argument, but the explanation seems to be that, although the poets and novelists of all ages and all nations have declared that civilised man can and does die of grief, yet as a matter of fact he cannot do so. This is the more curious because uncivilised man and the so-called lower animals can and do die from this cause, and frequently in a few hours' time. It appears to be one of the qualities that we have lost, or perhaps I should say, bartered away for this civilisation which is held up to us as the great glory of the 20th century, but which we now and again see revealed in its true light—as for instance in this ghastly war, the greatest crime in the history of the world.

Mr. Johnson tries to pay me a little compliment, for which I must thank him, but I can truthfully say that I can conceive no more dismal fate for an aviculturist than to have to end his days as an "eminent ornithologist." For one thing, one would no longer be able to exchange experiences with one's fellow learners, and, for another, I hope that the time is not far distant when aviculture will be looked upon as a higher and more humane branch of science than shooting birds and stuffing them with tow, which in too many cases seems to be the beginning and the end of ornithology.

But, if Mr. Johnson has improved as a controversialist, Mr. Coe has so completely gone to pieces that it would not be kind to criticise his letter in detail. Nevertheless, if I did not reply to his more definite statements, I suppose I should be thought to admit them. The charge of introducing personalities surprises me, for I thought that this little discussion had been quite free from that blemish. I have been consistently bombarded with long words to which I am expected to reply, and, when I complain that I cannot understand them in the context in which they have been used, I am told that this is a personality. I can assure him that I have no personal interest in this discussion whatever, and, if he has been a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS I am sure that he will do me the justice to admit that, whenever I have taken part in a controversy it has been with the object of assisting aviculture.

Mr. Coe seems to have become so entangled in the coils of his various arguments that he seems to have forgotten that he told us not long since that he believed that my facts were correct; he now tells us that they are only "tales," and that he has never "taken them seriously." I think he will find, however, that they all have a solid basis of actual fact. It is interesting to note that Mr. Coe was within a few inches of discovering what I believe to be the real solution of the problem which we have been discussing, for he complains that I have only related abnormal occurrences, and suggests (for he has not quite sufficient confidence to adopt the argument) that, if birds act intelligently in abnormal circumstances, then in abnormal circumstances they act unintelligently. This I believe to be the clue to the whole matter. In normal circumstances they act by instinct: it is quicker, and saves the trouble of thinking. When the circumstances are abnormal, they think and reason. Now he will understand why I gave him so many abnormal occurrences; I had to prove reasoning. He will also understand why I did not claim reasoning for the hen Flycatcher; the circumstances were normal. I wish Mr. Coe well; he has done his best for what seems to me to be a weak case.

W. E. TESCHEMAKER.

The Exhibition Yellowhammer.

SIR,—Re the article, written by Mrs. L. E. T. Dalton in CAGE BIRDS of Sept. 4, I should like to ask if, in the first place, the writer is the same person as W. H. Dalton. I find on looking at my catalogue of the London C.B.A. show, held at the Horticultural Hall, 1914, W. H. Dalton exhibited two Yellow Buntings in a Yellow Bunting class, and neither of them were placed in the money. The same exhibitor exhibited at Leicester Nov. 6, 1914, and did not get a card with his Bunting, in an A.V. Finch or Bunting class, although a Yellow Bunting was in the cards, and the same bird was placed before it at the Horticultural Hall. I did not see Mrs. Dalton's name figuring amongst the winners at Bathgate Show, and there was a class provided for Y. Buntings there.

On CAGE BIRDS' front page, July 31, a Yellow Bunting is depicted. It is called a lady's champion. Why? Is it because it has two 1sts and three 2nds to its credit? I should like to ask what constitutes a champion. I consider a champion Yellow Bunting is a bird that defies all comers. How many times did this bird go out to win all these prizes? I take it in two seasons, because it is credited with 2nd Horticultural Hall, and it was cardless there in 1914. How it can be called a champion to win two 1sts and three 2nds in two seasons I don't know.

I should like very much to see classes provided for Yellow Buntings at our large All England shows, but you cannot expect societies to put classes on that do not fill, nor exhibitors to send their birds to shows where the classes only half fill and get half prize money. At the Horticultural Hall there were 12 in the class; at Watford, 5; at Llanelly, 6; at Scottish National, 10. I feel sure if Mrs. Dalton wants a class provided for Yellow Buntings (her special favourites), the societies would be only too pleased to provide one. If someone would guarantee the class against loss, and if full prize money was guaranteed, exhibitors would send and the class would fill. Mrs. Dalton tells us openly that she has one at the present time with extraordinary size and the largest chested bird that she has seen. If this bird has all the other qualifications, a most distinct V. and prominent eye and cheek markings, and abundance of yellow, I am afraid she will make all other exhibitors of the Yellow Bunting quake with fear, and instead of sending their birds to a show, keep them at home or let them have their liberty, because they know it will be useless to send them against such a champion. I shall look forward to seeing this bird on the show bench, because I feel it will do my eyesight good to see such a bird.

As a sporting offer by one who is desirous of seeing classes provided for Yellow Buntings, I will give two five shilling specials, to be competed for at two shows in South Wales (the show must be judged by a specialist British bird judge, not a Canary or an all-round judge), on condition that she will do the same at two shows in England under the same conditions. I will also make another sporting offer that I will name two exhibitors in the Midlands who will put down four Yellows that will beat her Buff, however good she thinks it is. The largest Yellow is smaller than the largest Buff, I admit, but no Buff is ever so deep in any of its colours as a Yellow. The Yellow of a Buff is pale, the black head and cheek markings are duller, neither is the breast, flank, under tail covers, nor the back colour so good as on a good Yellow. Another week I will take exceptions to her method of moulting, etc.

HERBERT J. CHICK.

[As Mr. Chick has desired us to publish the above letter in full, we print it as received, although perhaps some of the expressions might have been presented differently. The illustration to which Mr. Chick refers was of two birds, one of which was a Linnet which had won three first prizes and two seconds, and the picture was entitled "A Lady's Champion British Birds." The wording to the picture was our own.—ED. CAGE BIRDS.]

"Tortured Prisoners."

SIR.—The letter of Mr. F. A. Cox is surely much like the stereotyped letter to which he refers. He should go to a bird show and see some of these "tortured prisoners"; certainly no wild bird can approach them in plumage. Yes, a man is better for having a pet bird to tend and care for; it certainly will cause his "finer feelings to surge through his mind." Mr. Cox should not judge too much by outward appearances. Birds could not live in perpetual darkness as he infers. My Linnets, kept in an outdoor aviary, sing all through the winter. Would they do so if they had their liberty? If he captures and confines someone's child, he will find out for himself what moral, social, or individual right he has to do so. Let him try his blandishments first on the child's father, and, if unsuccessful, on the judge, and in the result he would be a sadder but wiser man.

EDWIN WILCOX.

SIR,—I am most interested in this subject, as at one time it worried me. From my earliest childhood I have been fond of natural history, reading all I could, and keeping and watching any living thing I was able to get, from snails upwards, but as I grew older and heard ideas of it being wrong to keep animals in captivity I gave it up, until a few years ago, when I read an article by Sir Ray Lankester in the "Daily Telegraph," which pointed out that the life that appears to us to be so happy and so free is in reality a hard struggle to obtain food and to escape from enemies in the air and on the ground, and that the number of birds in nature remains nearly stationary, although many of them rear three broods in a season. Nature is cruel, and without mercy; the slightest ill-health or disablement is often the end. Keeping and caring for a bird in a cage gives it many more years of life, and not unhappy life, for it would not live long if it were unhappy. It is not uncommon for a bird that has been given its liberty to return of its own will to its cage or aviary.

ALICE M. COOK.

SIR.—While to some extent agreeing with Mr. Cox, I am of opinion that he spoils his picture by laying on the crude colours too thickly. His logic also leaves very much to be desired. The fact that he has seen men coming out of public houses with something under their arms which looked like a cage may prove that they have been in a public house. It may even be taken as circumstantial evidence that they have had a drink; in fact, we may allow Mr. Cox to draw the conclusion that a singing contest has been taking place in some room in or attached to the house. But he has no right to deduce from the circumstance that bird keeping is cruel, that bird keepers and bird catchers are necessarily brutes, and that everybody connected with the hobby is no better than he or she ought to be.

He has seen a man drop a cage; therefore no man should have either bird or cage. I have seen a mother drop her baby, and she certainly had had too much intoxicating liquor. Shall I therefore advocate that all women shall be prevented from keeping babies? Or shall I ask that the woman who dropped the baby shall be prevented from having that which precludes her from doing her duty to her baby? Mr. Cox seems to advocate the first alternative.

In arguing from the social point Mr. Cox gets even further into the mud than he was in the mire. "What conceivable right," asks Mr. Cox, "has any individual man to abstract from the lanes and fields, for his own personal uses and gain, the birds whose singing will give pleasure to the whole community?" "What conceivable right" has Mr. Cox to pluck the wild flowers which grow in the hedgerows? "What conceivable right" has the farmer to shoot the rabbit for his own use and profit? What right has he to shoot "my" sparrows? Arguing from Mr. Cox's standpoint, I have just as much right to shoot his child.

"The cunning of man over the beasts is responsible for all the cruelty in the world."

OLD

OLD CALABAR BISCUIT CO.—LIVERPOOL, ENG.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

The horse is probably a better animal through being domesticated. Shall we prevent Mr. Cox from utilising the strength of his horse? Perhaps Mr. Cox will argue that the horse is a domestic animal. But it had to be caught and tamed at one time. Even now it has to be "broken." In a word, Mr. Cox has no more right, socially, morally, or individually, to build a high wall round his grounds, and prevent me seeing "my" rabbits, than I have to keep one of "his" Linnets in a cage. You see where we are getting, don't you, Mr. Cox?

I have just noticed the little paragraph in Twitterings, "Twenty-two, Not Out." The brute! To keep a bird in a cage for twenty-two years, and then write and brag about it. Of course he will say it was a Canary, and domesticated, but that does not excuse him. Then last week in CAGE BIRDS was "A sixteen-year-old Greenfinch." Shame! A wild bird this time!

There is no doubt room for improvement in the way some people keep birds, just as there is room for improvement in the way some people keep and treat their horses or their children. Let Mr. Cox go to one or two singing contests (they are not often in the taproom). Let him go to a few shows, and then, if he has satisfied himself that things can be improved, let him give us the benefit of his advice. I will do my best to help him. But do not, Mr. Cox, as you value your self-esteem, condemn the whole for the sins or ignorance of the very few.

ERNEST H. FULCHER.
Chairman, Manchester and N.C.O.S.

SIR,—It is very evident that Mr. Cox has never kept birds, or he would not wish to deprive others of the happiness and comfort of their caged pets. They live longer in captivity than if they were free, being defended against their natural enemies, and not exposed to intense cold or intense heat. Most people guard their birds most carefully, feed them well, and keep them clean, and study to give them their natural food. Birds will not sing if they are not happy. I have kept birds for years, reared many, and given many away to cottagers who appreciate their song and tend them well. In the sad days of this dreadful war, what should we do without our birds to cheer us? I have some (mine are chiefly British birds) in a room in the house, and some in an outdoor aviary. They often prefer to be in their cages in the house. Lately a Yellowhammer came constantly on top of the aviary attracted by one inside. It came day after day, and so evidently wanted to come in that it was caught and put in the aviary. Here it was very happy, and later was put in a cage, where it was equally contented. Birds often try to get into my aviary. Their intelligence is great. I call all mine by name, and they answer. They utterly differ in character and ways; some are very comical—one of mine does a self-taught dance. Richard Jefferies was a Nature-lover, his essays were beautiful and never to be forgotten. Frank Buckland kept monkeys—poor little restless animals; surely this is worse than bird-keeping. I would advise Mr. Cox to visit some of our fanciers and see how well kept and happy are these "prisoners."

A LADY BIRD-KEEPER AND A BIRD LOVER.

SIR,—Mr. Francis A. Cox has a kind heart, no doubt, and would not harm any living creature—not even a cockroach or a fly—and he deprecates the keeping of birds as a hobby in cage or aviary! Our ancient crony, Bechstein, on the contrary, wrote most lovingly on the pleasure to be derived from bird-keeping, and has left us written counsel for the care and management of birds so kept, which many a foolish person will read and treasure when Mr. Cox is forgotten. People who live among wild birds have no need to keep them confined to hear their music; but how about those who rarely have the opportunity to see and hear them, though still having an ardent desire to do so? What were the singing birds created for? Was it to waste their sweetness on the desert air and gladden the hearing of a privileged few only? I have not heard the song of a Linnet in its natural state for years, and I love the song of this bird. Who, living north of Doncaster, or in Ireland, has a chance to hear the sweet wild notes of Philomel in his chosen haunt in the grove during his brief season song in a wild state? If I could keep, and induce a bird of this kind to sing for seven or eight months in the year, as many bird-keepers can do, I should think I had done a very clever and commendable thing, and one of which old father Bechstein would have cordially approved. There is a heavy toll of cruelty in the world of which the caged Canary, Linnet, or Parrot knows or feels nothing, where suitable care and attention is bestowed upon it. I have kept Linnets in cages—suitable roomy cages—and the birds have sung merrily for nine or ten months out of the twelve, and if anyone should suggest that the sweet little songsters were unhappy I should not believe it. They will not sing when ill or unhappy. At the present time I have one of the Warblers in a cage which he will not come out of though its door is wide open for hours nearly every day! Would Francis A. Cox drive him out? I shall not.

J. WADSWORTH.

SIR,—Might I ask Mr. Cox and others why they always make a butt of the bird catcher? I would also ask what benefit could bird-catchers derive by being cruel to birds that they catch. Injured or poor specimens would be unsaleable and of no use to them. Has Mr. Cox ever had a quiet chat or been out to see birds caught by these so-called "ruffians"? If not, I should like to ask him to avail himself of the opportunity with some of them, and I think he would find they are far from ruffians, but, taken as a whole, an intelligent and interesting class of men. In any walk of life you will find a few black sheep; why condemn the whole for the few? I know many who go out catching, and, when they bring them home, the birds' comfort and well-being are studied before their own. Now take the purchaser. He spends time, money, and attention in studying their requirements, to bring them to the highest pitch of perfection, and to prolong their lives as long as possible. If Mr. Cox would attend some of our large shows he would there find a grand object lesson from the Mules and Hybrids shown, bred from some of the "Tortured Prisoners." In conclusion, I ask Mr. Cox and others to give the bird catcher a rest, and to go in for higher game. They will find a far greater number of "ruffians" and cases of cruelty in shooting, hunting, and trapping than in bird-keeping.

F. J. W. S.

[We have had to delete a large part of this letter, as the writer had gone far outside of the subject under discussion. Some other letters are entirely held over for a similar reason.—ED. CAGE BIRDS.]

SIR,—With reference to the letter from "Bird Keeper" in your issue of Sept. 4, I repeat that it is significant that although we who work to prevent cruelty to all living beings, men included, invariably do so in the open, our opponents as invariably oppose us anonymously. They have, therefore, no reason to complain if we and all open-minded people doubt the sincerity of their action under the suspicion that it is prompted by trade interest. It is "a plain fact" that thousands of wild birds are condemned by their jailors to "deliberate and calculated cruelty." The behaviour of such birds when they are trapped and as they are kept confined in bird shops and the haunts of bird traders in the East End of London—if it does not demonstrate that the birds suffer, and suffer unjustifiably, what does it demonstrate? I knew, of course, that "the poor man" would crop up; I said so in my original letter to the Press. He always does. No matter what abuse you attack, you will always find it must not be abolished on account of hurting the feelings or pocket of the poor man. I can only write as I have seen, and my experience is pretty wide and of some years' duration, and if I wanted to have my revenge on "Bird Keeper," "Justice," and "B. Hughes," I would compel them to introduce into their family circles the simple minded souls whom I have seen engaged in caged birds traffic.

I cannot congratulate "Bird Keeper" on his logic. He asks, with reference to my "plain fact," that I have seen a drunken man twice drop a darkened-caged bird—"has Mr. Cox never seen a drunken man other than a bird fancier?" Ergo, because men get drunk, it is right to keep wild birds in darkened captivity. In replying to my paragraph referring to the physical blindness which I believe to exist, "Bird Keeper" expresses his doubt as to the blinding of these birds. It is almost inconceivable to me that he can be really unaware of the fact that this is of more than frequent occurrence. Has he really ever been in Bethnal Green, and has he never heard a common expression—"has it been through it"? For what reason did a man who was convicted some two or three years ago train his hand and eye for the very delicate operation of severing the optic nerves of birds? For one or two birds?

My position is a perfectly simple one. If I knew that there were men who would capture you, Sir, "Bird Keeper," "Justice," and "Mr. Hughes," and confine them in a packing case for the rest of their lives in order that they might recite—never mind how carefully their captors tended and fed them—I should call the men who did this a "pack of ruffians," and should do all in my power to suppress a system which admitted of the outrage. Lastly, and I am encouraged by your courtesy to ask you to insert this item, if I wanted grounds for attacking the spirit which animates Birdkeepers, I should find it on the front page of your current issue. "A vanishing British Bird"—the Chough. The Chough, which was once so common that it was immortalised in glees, has been exterminated in England, is similarly being exterminated in Wales, and very shortly the last specimens will have vanished from the South-West of Ireland. The same tale is told of the Bustard, and the Great Auk. And the people who are doing this are "Bird Lovers"!

FRANCIS A. COX.

GARSTON B.B.A.

Members and friends held their 2nd ramble of the season, Aug. 29, when a good muster turned out to enjoy a good walk, and splendid weather favoured them. Leaving Garston we made along the main road to Speke, and were then conducted by that able fancier, Mr. W. Leadbetter, who works on the estate, through the many by-ways and stile roads to Oglet woods, through which we traversed and had plenty to see, wild birds being in abundance. Leaving the woods we were taken across the fields and around the well known nursery of Messrs. Turner, which seemed to be the happy hunting ground for every known species of wild bird in their neighbourhood. Going on beyond the nursery we finally came on the shore, when all British bird lovers started to gather their harvest of wild seeds, etc., for their favourites at home, and some very interesting bundles were soon made up, especially by the town dwellers, who do not get a chance like this every day. Making our way along the shore we eventually reached Mr. Leadbetter's house, where we were entertained to a real good tea, to which every one did justice, after such a walk. After tea there was a good trade done in a neighbour's garden with bunching flowers and, everyone laden with a bunch of flowers and a larger bunch of wild food, we happily wended our way home through the darkness, all acclaiming it a huge success, and one which augured well for the future of the society.—A. T. Lonsdale, Hon. Sec.

CLUB REPORTS.

SCOTTISH ROLLER C.C.

Meeting, Aug. 18, Liberal Club, Saltcoats, Mr. Anderson chair. Decided to hold Members' Show in Saltcoats, Dec. 18. Two classes; young birds, and birds any age. Sec. was instructed to call meeting for Sept. 22.—J. Macdonald, Sec.

EDINBURGH NOR. AND M.B.S.

Meeting, 142, High Street, Sept. 2. Balance-sheet of F.F. Show was submitted which showed a creditable balance for division in prize-money. Classification of British and Foreign sections was drawn up for Annual Show, with alterations and additions inserted. Classification forms for Annual Show will be on hand for next meeting, Oct. 7.—J. Stormont, Sec.

ACCINGTON C.B.S.

Very interesting meeting, Sept. 2; the business was very important. Decided to hold an open show for Norwich, as last year, on Oct. 22 and 23. A competition was held for the bird that was most through the moult; the competition was very keen, and the special was won by D. Harwood. The special, an electro plate cruet, was kindly presented by Mr. S. Carns, of Blackburn, and was much admired. At next meeting there will be a competition of the hottest-fed birds, and I hope members will all turn up.—D. Harwood, Sec.

BLAENAVON C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 2, Crown Hotel, Mr. C. Broom, chair. Sec. was instructed to write to Mr. J. Rohson to judge the Open Show. Also decided to postpone the Open Show until Nov. 25. Members were selected to wait upon absent members, to get them to attend the next monthly meeting held on Oct. 7. Now members rally up at our next meeting and show that you mean business. The audit of the F.F. Show shows a profit to the funds of over £4, which was very pleasing to the members present. Members elected: Messrs. W. May, T. Percy, W. Godfrey, and G. Morgan.—Geo. Broome, Hon. Sec.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting, Palmer Hall, Sept. 1, before a grand attendance. Decided to have six foreign classes at open show, providing the Foreign Exhibitors' League granted their patronage. Sec. reported the death of their youngest member, Miss Philcox, Woking, and said that although it was as far back as March, this was the first opportunity he had had of informing members. It was thought that Sec. should insert same in CAGE BIRDS. It was to be regretted that through conduct detrimental to the society a member had to be asked to resign. New members elected: Mrs. Grindle, Mrs. Smith, Messrs. Shilcott, Upton, Silk (Alder-shot), Towndrawe, and Hatch.—O. C. Smith, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 2, Mr. Jones presiding. The feature of the evening was Mr. Bingham's paper on preparing birds for exhibition. He dealt with the subject in a very able manner, and gave the members good ground to work on. He stated that birds must be kept in good condition not by soft food but hard seed, and above all be steady. Unsteadiness got many a bird misplaced. During the meeting some breeding results were obtained; the most successful being: Pickering, 75; Water, 70; Furniss, 50; Drabble, 43; Bingham, 40; Goodison, 37; Austin, 34; Jones, 32; Messrs. Woolhouse, 31; Howarth, 27; Hemmings, 22; Bagshaw, 21; Dunford, 20. Mr. J. G. Cowley has been very seriously ill since Bank Holiday and the Secretary was asked to convey to him the sympathy of the meeting and to wish him a speedy recovery. Next meeting Oct. 8. Note change. Paid show (Query Pair Show, Editor, "C.B.")—E. Sisson, Assiet. Sec.

W. STANLEY EMPIRE F. & F.S.

Meeting, Sept. 5, J. Armin presiding over a poor turn up of members. Decided not to have any catalogues this year. Will members try and get as many specials as possible and attend next meeting, Oct. 3, as the stewards will be elected for the show.—R. Hutchinson, Sec.

LEIGH C.B.S.

Second N.F. Table Show, Aug. 19; some promising youngsters faced the judges. Mr. E. Clare, Nor., and H. Taylor, Yorks., and the other two classes jointly; their awards giving every satisfaction. Nor.: 1, vhe, he, Dawson; 2, c, Collier; 3, Ordish. Yorks.: 1, vhe, Ashton; 2, Spiby; 3, he, c, Walkden. A.O.V.: 1, Walkden. Mules: 1, 2, 3, Cann.—R. Charleson, Sec.

NORTHERN BORDER C.C.

Meeting Sept. 4, Pillar's Cafe, Plink-lane, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Mr. A. Affleck chair. The prospects of the coming show season were discussed. Up to the present the club's patronage has been granted to the following shows: Newcastle, Blaydon, Haltwhistle and Carlisle. We still require two to make up the allotted number. Applications will be considered as they come to hand.—C. Farrer, Hon. Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting headquarters, Aug. 28, Mr. Farrer presiding over a good attendance. Decided to hold a Members' Show (instead of an Open Show) on Dec. 27. Messrs. Swan and Waters, together with the Sec., were asked to arrange about a suitable hall. Classification and judges were discussed, but eventually decided that same stand over to next meeting on Sept. 11. Mr. Machin won special at our Judging Competition, he coming nearest to the judge's awards; and Mr. Swan won special for most popular bird on the members' nomination, with a yellow Crest-bred.—J. Peacock, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE G.B.S.

General meeting, Sept. 2, Shield's Cafe, Bigg Market, Mr. R. Tindale, chair. Announced that the following specialist societies had granted their patronage to our open show, Oct. 29, in Co-operative Hall, Adelaide Terrace, Benwell, Newcastle, near Elswick Road tram terminus: N.N.C.C., N.Y.C.C., N.B.B. and M.C., N.B.F.C. Classification: Nor 7, Yorks. 7, Crests 4, Scotch Fancy 2, Bord. 9, A.O.V. Can. 1, Mule and Hyb. 3, Brit. 8, Sell. 2, For. 2. Judges elected: Nor. and Crests, Mr. T. C. Crawhall; Yorks., A.O.V., and Sell., Mr. T. B. Tomlinson; Bord., Mr. T. Robson; Brit. and For., Mr. C. Waters. I wish to make a special appeal to fanciers re our open show. We have been unable to get our usual hall this year owing to it being a Military hospital, and the other halls that might have done for our show being engaged by the military, we had to do our best to try and keep the interest in the Fancy. Will members and fanciers take a practical interest in our show, and not only send entries but pay a visit and help to swell the gate; also get others to patronise us. Visitors to the town can get to the hall by the Elswick Road cars, which pass the door. Members please note that subs. are overdue, and must be paid before show to enable advantage to be taken of showing at reduced rate. I hope to have schedules out in about a fortnight.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

Singing Contests.

Announcements of forthcoming contests in the nature of advertisements must be paid for at advertisement rates, three words a penny.

PONTEFRAC.

Open Linnet contest, Woodman Inn, Horsefair, Sept. 4; 19 entered for 3 prizes, 4 minutes time singing, 5 seconds a break. 1, Wingham, 62; 2, Jones, 42; 3, Blackshear, 37. Open sing Sept. 5; 19 entered for 3 minutes time singing and 3 prizes. 1, Watkies, 94; 2, Blackshear, 64; 3, Jones, 50.—J. Beard, Assiet. Sec.

Cross Keys Hotel, Half-penny Lane, open Linnet contest, Sept. 4; 4 minutes time singing for 3 prizes. 1, B. Nelson; 2, R. Plows. Open sing, Sept. 5, 3 minutes time sing for 3 prizes. 1, B. Nelson; 2, Longfield; 3, R. Plows. Members were very pleased to see some old friends from around the district to give us a visit, and we hope to see them again.—Alf. Bull, Sec.

LEEDS.

Leeds Linnet and Canary F.A. Albion Hotel, Saville Green, York-rd., open contest for quality Linnet singing, Sept. 5; 15 birds sang for 3 prizes. 1, W. Sissons; 2, Chippindale; 3, Richardson. Judges, Crane and Naylor.—W. Naylor, Hon. Sec.

Open contest for quality Linnet singing, Clarence Hotel, Skinner-lane, Sept. 4; 18 birds sang before a crowded house, and some good singing was heard. Mr. W. Crowther added the best prize ever known. 1, Parker; 2, Wigfield; 3, shared Sissons and Conliff. Sept. 5, 15 sang for 3 prizes. 1, Wigfield; 2, Parker; 3, Ward. Judges, C. Biss, T. Butterfield, A. Binner.—W. Lipman, Hon. Sec.

A very enthusiastic company of Linnet fanciers assembled at the Plasterers' Arms, Skinner-lane, and appreciated the new methods of the Club in giving two special prizes for the best plumaged birds at each match. Sept. 4, 14 Linnets entered; the singing was of a tame nature, birds only getting nicely through the moult. Quality: 1, A. Lorrman; 2, 3, shared, Lorrman and Turner. Judges, Messrs. Adams and Speight. Plumage: 1, Boyd; 2, Wright. Judges, Messrs. Hutchinson Bros., Pudsey. Sept. 5, 16 entered. 1, A. Lorrman; 2, Turner; 3, Temple. Judges, Messrs. Madden and Adams. Plumage: 1, 2, Dearlove. Judges, Hutchinson Bros., Pudsey.—F. Turner, Sec.

will doubtless have commenced to consume a little canary, begin to miss a night, giving the second supply of rape every second or third time, and gradually withdraw it, and give only the one supply in the morning until the birds eat a fair proportion of canary. If you follow these tactics I do not anticipate that you will find any real difficulty to get them to eat canary freely.

SEPTIC FEVER (G. A. B.)—Assuming that your other birds are kept in the same room, and near the place occupied by the one that died, it is rather peculiar that no others should have been affected. It will, however, be the wisest course to treat the cage and all its appurtenances as infected articles, and to thoroughly disinfect them before introducing any other birds. Simple washing will not suffice if the diagnosis is correct. Only thorough overhauling and scrubbing with a strong solution of any carbolic fluid, such as Jeyes', will be of any use. The perches and all small appliances can be much more thoroughly disinfected by well boiling, or the former may be burnt and replaced with new ones. The next best plan would be to place the cage bodily in a large box or packing case, which could be sealed and rendered practically air-tight, put in a stone on which you can stand a small tin containing a few glowing embers. When this is all arranged and ready for sealing, place on the embers a few pieces, an ounce or so, of sulphur, and close and seal for a few hours. There is really nothing wrong with your system of feeding, so if your foodstuffs are all sound and sweet, and you keep the cages, and especially the water vessels, in a good sanitary condition I do not think you need worry about this loss if nothing else happens. The theory of feeding you name will not, I fear, carry the weight of practice.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Rodmond's "Colour-feeding" (3/4); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2/4 each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ALL ABOUT NORWICH (A Very Young Fancier)—It would be quite impossible to give all the details about the breed in the space available in this column; it would really occupy many columns of space to go properly into the subject. Therefore, I cannot advise you better than to get a copy of House's "Norwich Canaries," which our Manager will send you for 1/1, post free, and which will not only give you full information on all the points you enquire about, but also tell you all you need know about the formation of a stud of your own. For fuller details on all points you would find "Our Canaries" of great assistance, or Parts XIV. and XV. for the text, and Parts II., III., and XIII. for coloured plates, if you cannot get the whole work.

A NERVOUS HEN (A. J., Cricklewood)—Give the hen a staple diet of plain canary seed only, with just a pinch of summer rape on top of it twice a week. Once a week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On each of the remaining days give a morsel of some green salad. Every second day for a week add to the drinking water as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice, and after this give instead 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. Possibly the sluggishness may be partly due to the moult impending. Keep her fairly warm and free from cold draughts, and if at the close of the above course of treatment she appears fairly active I do not suppose she will need any special form of treatment during the moulting period.

COLOUR FOOD SAMPLES (Clavis).—No. 1 contains rather more oil than I care for myself in ordinary "foods," and has quite sufficient hot Natal for anything; more than I care to use, in fact. With four ounces of soft brown sugar thoroughly incorporated in each pound of this sample it would do for the highest form of feeding, such as high-fed Norwich or Lizards. No. 2 is about the right degree of oiliness, and is also quite warm enough for all ordinary purposes. No more Natal is needed, and with the same proportion of sugar as No. 1 it will answer admirably for all ordinary feeding. No. 3 has not enough colour to be worth troubling with when you can get No. 2, which is all you really need.

MOULT AND CONDITION (Andrew McDonald).—(1) The best and safest thing to hurry on the moult is to keep the bird in a fairly warm and equable temperature when it has made a fair start in shedding its feathers; keep a light cover over the cage; and every third day during the first month give half a teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flour of sulphur and maw seed. On the day following, each time, add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. Each morning during spells of mild weather remove cover from cage for an hour or so, and hang on a bath during this interval. (2) To get bird that is soft into condition give every second day for a week, in addition to the staple seed diet, a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut slightly dusted with hot Natal and then sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days give half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, and broken groats, with just a sprinkling of mustard seed added to the bulk, and in the water give also on these days 20 drops of chemical food.

A TRIO (S. J. C.)—(1) For a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary, before the date of the show or shows at which you intend exhibiting them, treat the birds that are a bit soft the same as advised to "Andrew McDonald (2)" in this issue. (2) Sorry, but this is a matter on which you must exercise your own judgment and discretion. The morality of your advisers cannot be of the highest order, as the principle involved is bad, and if this kind of preparation were ever detected by any judge worthy the position would bring you the unenviable D. card—and justly. (3) The hen is clearly suffering from cataract in the one eye, and, as a rule, it is simply a matter of time before the other becomes affected in a similar manner. There is no remedy whatever for the complaint, and birds affected in this way should not be used for breeding under any circumstances.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

LINNET DOING BADLY (Berkacre).—You tell me the kinds of seeds you are giving your bird, but you say nothing about green food or wild seeds. At this time of the year these are essential to good health. Wild seeds can now be collected upon every piece of waste land and by the road side, and all captive birds should have a liberal supply. If your bird will eat a little soft food, such as hard-boiled egg and biscuit, or bread and milk, give him a little made fresh daily, and just dust it with powdered bismuth. Give him this for a few days, and then try him with just one drop of pure cod liver oil mixed with it, and increase this to two or three drops. Your seed should consist of the following:—Canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, rape, charlock and linseed 1 part each; this he should always have before him. Also one day give a little sound hemp, just lightly cracked, another a pinch of gold of pleasure niger and maw, and any wild seeds you can collect. If you are quite unable to get any, give a little fresh green food, and soak some rape and teazle and give a spoonful every BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERIST should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Nordbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3/4); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2/4 each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Mould British Birds." other day. If he has not commenced to moult, place his cage in a comfortable position free from draughts and partly cover the front with a thin cloth; this should start him. You should get our Nutshell booklets, one on the Linnet and one, "How to Mould British Birds," post free 2/4 each. These will assist you in your management.

AVIARY MATTERS (Novice).—Our rule is that readers seeking advice should send their name and address. This you have omitted to do; perhaps you will kindly send same on a post-card. Your aviary would hold a dozen birds, and a good stock mixture for your selection would be Canary 3 parts, teazle 1 part, rape 1 part, linseed 1 part. In addition to this sunflower seeds should be supplied daily for the benefit of the Bullfinch principally, although the Greenfinch will probably get the greater share. A spoonful per bird of mixed seeds three times a week would be beneficial; this should consist of hemp, niger, gold of pleasure, and maw. As it is the Bullfinch that you have to consider mostly, I would therefore advise you to get our booklet on that bird, and supply the different foods recommended as near as you can. They would not in any way injure the rest of the inmates of the aviary.

HEATING A BUILDING (Eucopa).—Your brick building seems to me to be a very suitable one to keep your birds in, and should be quite warm enough during the winter months, providing you make it cosy and free from draughts. I would advise you to block up one of the doors entirely, either by nailing matchboards over the door frame or by a thick canvas screen. The top of the building should have a ceiling put across it. This could be done by nailing matchboards to the inside rafters, of course leaving the window free. This would add a lot to the warmth and prevent the birds feeling the sudden changes of temperature. You could also fasten a curtain across the remaining doorway. With these improvements you should need no artificial heat, as all the birds you mention will stand the cold providing the place is not damp. My own bird-room is a wooden building standing by itself, in which there are a good many highly bred Canaries all the winter, and I do not think my losses are higher than my fancier friends who have properly heated rooms. The best form of heat is undoubtedly a few hot-water pipes, heated by gas, the burner and boiler being fixed outside, but even with this I would advise its use only in severe frosty weather or during thick fogs, or a long spell of wet weather, and then only for an hour or so to keep the place dry.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

TANAGERS & SUGAR BIRDS (Bingley) (A Correction).—In this reply last week I am made to say: "The Euphonia Tanagers, of which the Violet is one, and the Chlorophonia Tanagers, of which the Necklace is a representative, are different species." The word "different" should read "delicate."

A FEATHER PULLER (R. Pulvertaft).—Put one teaspoonful of Dinford's Magnesia in the drinking water daily so long as the vomitings are not watery-lose; when the latter occurs cease giving the magnesia and put half a teaspoonful of chemical food in the drinking water daily. Also spray it twice weekly with a tepid quassia solution, but keep it carefully out of the reach of cold winds and draught till dry. I cannot help you further—you should have included details of feeding and general treatment with your query, and when you supply these details I will try and assist you. How long has it had this habit? Feather plucking is almost incurable once a bird has become confirmed in the vice, but it is no use giving up hope, as even if an entire cure is not effected, the trouble may be mitigated; the chief annoyance with this trouble being the relapses that occur when you think the bird is cured. However, send me the information asked for, and I will see what can be done. In the meantime treat as above.

YOUNG COCKATELS BALD (E. F.)—Usually young Cockateels are well feathered when they leave the nest; some parents are given to plucking their young a little while in the nest, and I expect this is the case with yours, but now they are outside it is probable they will leave the young alone, except to feed them, and in that case the plumage will soon grow. Occasionally birds constitutionally weak will be ill feathered, but if this is not serious nature mostly makes good in the end and the bare parts are duly covered. If they will eat the following it will help the young birds:—Take a stale piece of household bread and put it in a small dish, breaking the bread into pieces about the size of cob-nuts, put a drop of cod liver oil emulsion on each piece, pour over half a teaspoonful of chemical food, then as much boiling water as the bread will absorb, and supply to the birds when cool. If they will take this it will help to build them up. Supply green food, also growing cereals in the car if any are obtainable. Keep cuttlebone in the aviary. As regards the seed menu, in addition to a mixture of canary and white millet seed in equal parts, keep a small tin of crushed oats continually in the aviary. If your birds are not properly feathered in the course of a few weeks you had better write again, fully describing their condition. I can then tell you whether they are of any use or not, but I expect by the end of the month the heads will be covered by feathers.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. Beard.—We wrote you on Aug. 30, to the Woodman Inn, in reply to your letter. Will you please enquire there, and also let us have your full address and the proper name of your club. If our reply has been mislaid we will let you have a copy upon hearing from you.

J. Slater.—In Herefordshire the taking of wild birds named in the schedule of the Act of 1880 is prohibited between Feb. 14 and Aug. 16, and in Middlesex between Jan. 31 and Sep. 1. In both counties there are additions to the 1880 Act which it would be impracticable to print here in full. Messrs. Wyman and Sons, Fetter Lane, E.C., will send you the local orders for any county (price one penny each, and postage), or you could probably get the same at your local bookseller's. Many birds are protected throughout the year in both of the counties named.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

ABOUT CRESTS (E. P. M.)—(1) If you cannot treat yourself to the complete work, "Our Canaries," wherein you would find all you need know about all varieties, in addition to the Crested variety, you should certainly try to get the separate parts, XII. and XIII., which treat fully of the Crest and Crested. (2) If care is taken to stock an outdoor aviary with Canaries which have been bred and reared under normal conditions of temperature these birds are quite capable of withstanding the weather all through the winter, particularly if you live in a mild locality, or the aviary is placed in a cosy, sheltered position.

MISS E. D. and G. B.—Replied to by post.
REFUSING CANARY SEED (G. R. M.)—Fill the seed hoppers each day with good sound canary seed, and place half a teaspoonful of rape in a heap on top of it, and do not give any more rape until the evening, when you may give another half teaspoonful per bird in the egg drawer if the birds appear not to have eaten any canary and are very ravenous. After a week or so, by which time they

Complete Bound in Cloth, 7/6 carriage paid. Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, MR. H. NORMAN.

MARVELLOUSLY COMPREHENSIVE.

First of all are considered at great length the question of cages and aviaries for hybrids. All the various methods of housing are thoroughly and carefully described. The perches are minutely detailed; nests and nesting material have a chapter to themselves. Mr. Houlton's special cage for hybrid breeding is clearly described and illustrated. All the foods, natural and artificial, are enumerated. Egg and other soft foods and their feeding values dealt with. The selection of the stock is debated at length. The hens which breed light and dark exhibition mules described. The proper breeding procedure for Dark Goldfinch Mules gone into. Egg binding and its treatment. The food supply. Care of the young hybrids. All these topics are treated with that experience and skill only an expert of Mr. Houlton's standing could bring to such a task.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a prize-winning Hybrid.

Now is the Time for Cage Bird Breeders to Secure a Bargain

A cage bird breeder who means to breed Prize Birds, and who relies upon haphazard knowledge, or on the slow and costly knowledge gained by his own experience, is like a man who sets out to dig a pit without first getting hold of the proper tool.

You can no more breed winning Birds without expert study and specialist knowledge on bird breeding than you can dig a pit without a spade.

Life is too short to depend on experience. In breeding you must avail yourself of the tabulated knowledge of the expert breeders in the past.

The book that will help you to produce winning birds is "CANARIES, HYBRIDS AND BRITISH BIRDS." And so great is our confidence that it CAN help you, that we are willing to let you use and read it for a week FREE OF CHARGE and take our chance of your buying it after that. But as there are only a few copies of this grand book for Cage Bird Breeders now unsold, you must send in the FREE APPROVAL FORM at the bottom of this page without delay if you want to take advantage of this straightforward FREE EXAMINATION OFFER. This is

Special—Very—Special

A grand lot of extra early hatched Norwich, large, good type, and practically through moult. These are quite out of the common, but still big value at following prices:—Cocks, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-; Hens, 4/6, 5/6, 6/6. Pairs, matched to produce best results, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 30/-; approval; cages 3d. As this is an opportunity to get some of the best blood in the Fancy, and yet you are not charged "fancy" prices, this chance should not be missed of getting early and genuine stock. REMEMBER I possess these birds in the flesh, and not merely a Paper lot. Hence they can be sent at once, and no waiting.

For all others, see detailed Current Price List, which includes pure-bred hens from 1/9 each.

Twitterings.

Mr. J. Chambers, Burley Hill, Leeds, will judge our annual show, December 4, 1915, writes Mr. G. Lord, sec. Radcliffe and Dist. C.B.S.

We have engaged Mr. J. Trengove, of Rishton, to judge our open show on Oct. 22 and 23, writes Mr. L. Harwood, sec. Accrington C.B.S.

Mr. G. Buck, sec., writes that the open show of the Preston O.S. will positively be held on the dates fixed, Oct. 8-9. The judge will be Mr. Alf. Wellings, and schedules will be ready Sept. 20. The show will be under the patronage of the N.P.C., the O.N.P.S., and the Green Canary Association.

The exhibition season opens with Idle Show on Oct. 6. The show will be under the experienced management of Mr. C. A. House. Fanciers should write for schedules; see advt. The annual show of the Croydon and Dist. F.A. will be held on Nov. 10, writes Mr. F. B. Roberts, sec. Nine new members were elected at last meeting; we shall be pleased to welcome more.

On behalf of our club, I thank you for mentioning in Twitterings our new enterprise re prizes for plumage, writes Mr. F. Turner, sec., Leeds Quality Linnets Singing Club. It has proved a decided success. We hope shortly to be affiliated to the Leeds C.B.S. Messrs. Smith and Lees write that Codnor Park and Eastwood C.B.S. is holding its annual open show Nov. 20. Mr. J. Admitt, South Normanton, will judge. The secs. will send schedules to all last year's exhibitors when they are printed.

The Burnley and Dist. C.B.S. has removed to new premises, 75, Lindsay Street, where we shall shortly have a reunion of old and new members, writes Mr. J. Moorhouse, sec., 102, Nairne Street, Burnley. Fanciers wishing to become members kindly send p.c.

Owing to the difficulty in obtaining a hall for our annual show, writes Mr. J. Alderslade, Eastleigh C.B.S., 64, Desborough Road, Eastleigh, Hants, we have had to alter the date from Nov. 24 and 25 to Nov. 17 and 18. We have secured the Council Chambers for those dates. This is a splendid hall, well lighted, and heated to perfection. Mr. W. R. Miles, Chichester, will judge. Schedules will be ready in due course, and fanciers are invited to write for same to the Hon. Sec.

How Pedigree Tells.

Sergt. A. W. Bacon writes, in reference to his Green Border Canary, the portrait of which was on our front page last week: "His father did equally well. I have also shown four of his youngsters this year, and have won 1st, special, and 2nd at Redhill, and two 1sts at Croydon in mixed classes. I receive my CAGE BIRDS every Friday morning, and if I have been on night duty I remain up till it arrives and take it to bed with me. I have always found its contents most interesting and instructive."

Retirement of a Celebrated Lancashire Fancier.

I expect you will be rather surprised to hear, writes Mr. F. J. Green, the well-known Lancashire Canary enthusiast, that I have fully made up my mind to clear quite out of cage-bird keeping. It has been a bit of a struggle to make up my mind to give up my birds after thirty years of breeding and exhibiting. But, as you know, my occupation keeps me moving from one part of the country to another, and I feel I really must give them up, much as I love my old fancy, the Lancashire.

The Bird-Keepers' Roll of Honour.

Pilkington.

J. BEARD, Asist. Sec.

As now there is a possibility of further discussion on this beautiful Britisher recently described in CAGE BIRDS by Mrs. Dalton, writes Mr. R. Muir, hon. sec. Lochgelly C.B.S., might I take the opportunity of reminding fanciers that we are staging a class for Yellowhammers at Lochgelly Red Cross Show, Oct. 9. Those who happen to possess a good one will be made exceptionally welcome.

OBITUARY.

MR. G. V. MOWER (Fulham).

I regret to have to tell you of the death of one of our enthusiastic members, Mr. G. V. Mower, who passed away on Sept. 11, after a painful illness. He is one we shall sadly miss, writes Mr. Garrod. His funeral takes place on Sept. 16.

MR. G. DUNCAN (Perth).

It is with deepest regret, writes Mr. J. L. Smith, Sec. City and County of Perth C.B.S., that I have to announce the death, from wounds, of the eldest son of Mr. Geo. Duncan, one of our most prominent members. The deepest sympathy is expressed by all our members in the great trouble that has overtaken Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Duncan.

It is with great sorrow and regret that I have to report the death of our Chairman's father (Mr. Atkinson, of Thackley) on Sept. 6, after a long illness, at the age of sixty-six, writes Mr. J. Taylor, Sec., Windhill C.B.S. Although not a fancier himself, he took a great interest in birds. Members of Windhill C.B.S. will deeply sympathise with our chairman and family in their sad loss. Also the members will deeply regret to hear of the loss sustained by Mr. Wm. Dawson, of Tong Park, Baildon, by having his son killed by a motor-car last week. All fanciers and friends in this district will sympathise with Mr. Dawson and family in their sad bereavement.

It is with feelings of deepest regret, writes Mr. R. Johnson, that I have to inform you of the sad blow sustained by one of our members, Mr. Wm. Tomlinson, late of Chopwell C.B.S., and treasurer of Derwent Valley C.B.S., in the loss of his wife at the early age of twenty-nine. The Derwent Valley C.B.S. will sadly miss her, as Mrs. Tomlinson was one of our greatest workers, and always ready to undertake any work, great or small. The Derwent Valley C.B.S. members purchased a globe, suitably inscribed. The remains of Mrs. Tomlinson were interred on Sept. 11, at St. John's, Chopwell, there being a large concourse of mourners. The following represented the D.V.C.B.S.—Messrs. Jos. Lindsey, Wm. Marsh, Wm. Curry, G. Barkess, G. W. Barkess, E. Jameson, R. Johnson, and G. W. Charlton. Our greatest sympathy goes to Mr. Tomlinson in his sad bereavement.

The following is a list of the Kippax Linnets Club who are serving their King and country:—

Cpl. J. Liversidge, Pioneers, Ripon; J. bath, R.A.M.C., Beekill Hospital; A. Tomlin, R.F.A., in France; A. Bath, K.O.Y.L.I., and E. Howden, K.O.Y.L.I., in camp at Beverley. We therefore have five members with the colours out of a possible 14. Not so bad for "Ruffians," is it?

R. PLOWS, sec.

Huddersfield O.S.

SIR,—We have five members from the Huddersfield O.S. now serving with the colours: Messrs. R. Rhodes, W. Charlesworth, both in the Royal Field Artillery; A. Morris, Mechanical Transport; A. Sharp and J. W. Moore, Duke of Wellington Territorial Forces.

A. LAWFORD, Sec.

SIR,—The following is a list of members who are serving with the Colours:—J. R. Fullarton, Black Watch; J. Dott, Army Service Corps; G. C. Gordon, Gordon Highlanders; W. Blyth, National Reserve; W. Bruce, National Reserve; R. Christie, Black Watch; D. Hallory, Army Service Corps; D. D. McLaren, Army Service Corps; T. Gillan, Royal Engineers.

J. L. SMITH, Sec.

Eastleigh C.B.S.

SIR,—Please will you add the following names to your Roll of Honour:—T. W. Lees, Army Service Corps, served at Mons, Ypres, and several other engagements, and returned with five shrapnel wounds, souvenirs, as he called them. He was in a very sad condition when he arrived home, but he has now returned to the field again. Mr. C. Thornback, serving on one of H.M. liners, and Mr. M. Molony, Army Service Corps. Nearly half of our members are engaged in railway work under Government at present.

J. ALDERSLADE.

(Some lists unavoidably held over.)

The members of the Bradford West C.B.A. will ramble to Morton to-day, Sept. 18. Meet at Forster Square Tram Terminus at 2.30. Fanciers are invited to join.

I have taken over the duties of secretary to the Leyton C.B.A., in place of Mr. G. King, who has left the district, writes Mr. T. Collinge, 29, Balmoral Road, Leyton, N.E. All communications should be addressed to me in future.

Mr. T. Crutcher having enlisted, I have taken over the duties of Hon. Sec. of the Plumstead C.B.S., writes Mr. Geo. H. MacAllan, 25, Speranza Street, Plumstead. Will all members please note change. All correspondence must now be addressed accordingly.

We intend holding a show at Whitehaven on Dec. 18, writes Mr. Jas. Stewart, Hon. Sec. Eleven classes for Yorkshires, 4 Borders, and 2 Linnets; prize-money 10s., 5s., 2s. 6d. for 1s. 6d. entry fee, and not, as last year, on the sliding scale. We have got the patronage of the Cumberland and Westmorland Y.C.C., also the Northern Yorkshire C.C. patronage. Secretaries please note, and avoid elashing.

MY VIEWS ON CANARY BREEDING.

By
F. G. Snell

THE breeding and rearing of cage birds is so harmless and interesting and amusing that the number of persons who indulge in it creates no surprise; indeed, those who have been induced to participate in the hobby wonder how it could be otherwise. Persons who have a little spare time on their hands could not employ it to better purpose than in the breeding of Canaries; still many employ such moments to purposes not half so pleasant, or so innocent; for birds possess all the qualities that can soothe the heart or cheer the fancy. Their bright colours, shapely forms, active manners, and sweet music, with the docility of their habits, have rendered them universal favourites. The practice of keeping cage birds is of high antiquity. Frequent references thereto occur in Oriental legends, notably in the "Arabian Nights," and it is recorded that Alexander the Great kept a Parakeet.

Home, Sweet Home.

Some people have an idea that to confine birds in cages is cruel, and that no one who had truly the love of liberty at heart would be guilty of such an offence. But it is easy to see that this scruple cannot apply to Canaries, or any completely domesticated bird, and instead of its being cruel to keep our Canaries in cages, it would be much more so to turn them into the open air, for in meeting with liberty they would also meet with death. Those who keep them must often have observed that the birds never show the least uneasiness on account of their confinement, but, on the contrary, evince great fear when set at liberty and are unhappy till they are safely lodged in their cages again. "Home, Sweet Home," seems to be their favourite song. The cage is their palace; there they love and labour, sing their song, and build their nests.

To produce and to watch the production of some of the varieties of this beautiful bird is an interesting study, and a source of enjoyment to both old and young. The Fancy has made such rapid strides during the past few years, and the number of varieties which are now in existence is so great, that the beginner hardly knows at first which variety to start with. Should the reader entertain serious thoughts of joining the already large family of fanciers, he cannot do better than attend one of the principal shows, and I am sure he will be smitten with one or more of the varieties and launch out in the Fancy as quite an enthusiast.

When Commencing Canary Breeding.

Having made up your mind, go to a breeder and exhibitor of the particular variety you wish to keep, and get him to sell you a good pair of birds matched for breeding. Do not think the cheapest birds will answer your requirements best, for it is better to pay a fair price, and get something good, as then you can make a proper start, and if success does not attend your efforts it will not be so hard to apply the necessary improvement as it would be if you started with cheaper ones.

Obtain all the information you can relating to the strain of the birds you purchase, and if the stock is good, breeding may be safely attempted with reasonable hope that all will turn out well and possibly far beyond expectation. Much depends on the skill, judgment, knowledge, and taste of a fancier of Canaries. If he will exercise a little patience and practice, the amateur or novice may produce any variety, not only to his own delight, but to the envy of others.

Supposing you intend to keep your birds in a room provided for the purpose, great care must be taken to see it is kept clean and well-ventilated. Keep the cages on light racks, with a pin underneath each corner of the cages to keep them from resting flat on the rack. This allows a current of air to pass under the cages and prevents a lodgment for red mite. The pins used may be ordinary drawing-pins.

Ventilation plays a very important part in the bird-room. But it must not allow of any draughts. In summer the tops of your windows may have a wire-netting frame placed in them in order that your birds may get all the air possible. Another plan is to place a strip of board 6 inches wide under the bottom sash; this will allow a current of air to pass upwards into the room between the two sashes. Or a grating let into the flue of the chimney is effective, and can be so arranged that a slide may allow of your opening or shutting out the air. Do not block the fireplace, as this is an excellent means for foul air to be carried off.

Clean water is essential for drinking and bathing purposes, and must be given fresh every day, or twice a day in the summer months. The best drinkers to use are the white china pottery ones with no crevices, made so that you can thoroughly clean them out by wiping your thumb around them. They should be scalded out each week.

The Canary's Menu.

As a staple diet the best Spanish Canary seed should be used, with a little German rapo seed every other day, and mixed seed occasionally. It should, however, be borne in mind that over-feeding is as bad for birds as for their masters, and as many die from too much food as from too little.

In the summer I use for green food—watercress, groundsel, chickweed, etc. Great care should be taken that the green food is quite fresh. Watercress should be gathered from a good, clean running stream, and groundsel from an old rubble bank or any poor soil on which it will grow.

Sand or grit should always be placed in the cages, also a piece of cuttlefish. These items possess beneficial properties for the birds' digestion, and keep them in splendid feather. They also assist in the formation of the egg-shells, and prevent the laying of shell-less eggs. An old piece of mortar is a splendid thing for the birds to peek at.

When the breeding season is on, egg food must be given, quite fresh, as often as possible. In feeding young ones the yolk only should be given for three days; afterwards the whole of the egg should be rubbed through a fine sieve and mixed with sweet biscuits or bread crumbs—if the latter a little castor sugar should be added. The drawers containing egg-food must be kept scrupulously clean.

WITH FEATHERED FRIENDS IN ARGYLESHIRE.

By DAN
McARTHUR
(Edinburgh).

OBAN, which was my base of operations, is very quiet this year. Instead of the usual trim white-sailed, bunting-clad yachts which used to stud the bay, one sees a grim-looking armed yacht and a patrol boat. Not a single brown-sailed fishing smack is to be seen, only a business-looking trawler. A few fisher-girls, fair of hair, grey-eyed, and sun-tanned, from some more Northern village, with their everlasting knitting, add a touch of older days to the scene. They are here for the herring gutting.

Happily on the West Coast one lives without fear of a Zeppelin raid, though a stray enemy submarine might sneak along the Sound of Mull. It was extremely interesting to note the eagerness with which the folks in the "Back of Beyond" glens looked for the latest "War News" from one, and I gladly took a morning paper with me on my tramps when I found how much it was appreciated.

Where "Cage Birds" is Late.

Of course fanciers are not numerous, save in the larger towns. I introduced the one and only CAGE BIRDS to several who had never heard of it. It was awful having to wait till Monday for my copy, by the way. The time in transit makes showing impossible, save at a few towns, and freight is very expensive. One hears the cry "Feed on canary seed only" raised now and then, and one fancier I met had solved the problem by giving none! With seed at 6½d. per lb. by the time it reached him I don't blame him. Luckily he had all sorts and conditions of wild food at his door, and could laugh at inflated war prices.

The difficulty in writing these notes is to keep to the birds, and leave the scenery alone! But a Scotsman will surely be pardoned if he digresses now and then to describe some of the glamour of "Caledonia Stern and Wild." The lure of the Highlands is strong to a townsman, and it has been my good fortune for seven years now to spend a few weeks among "the brown heath and shaggy wood." This year, in seeking "new fields and pastures green" in Argyleshire, I managed to combine "mountain, moor and loch" with the sea. I had no field-glasses with me, and so missed identifying several birds which kept at a respectful distance, and these rambling notes are not to be taken as a list of all the birds in Argyleshire,

The aspect of your bird-room will play a great part in success or otherwise. It is preferable to have the room, if possible, facing due south, if not, get as near south as you can. You want the sun in your rooms, but not too direct on to your cages, as the birds when sitting feel the heat very much, and if there is excessive sun you may see the youngsters with their heads and half their bodies stretched over the nest boxes, gasping for breath. Good light is essential, especially where your breeders are placed, so that the old birds feeding young ones may get the first and last rays. The temperature should be kept as even as possible without heat, unless under exceptional circumstances in the winter.

The Ideal Norwich.

Now for a few words respecting the variety you intend to breed. I fancy I hear you say that the Norwich Plainhead is your ideal. That being so, I will endeavour to give my impressions on this beautiful variety. There are three essentials necessary: Type, quality, and colour. The ideal specimen should be a large, bold bird, standing well across the perch; length not to exceed 6½ inches from tip of beak to end of tail. It should be smart in action and steady, and show no signs of fear. The eye should be bold and bright; the beak clear in colour, short and thick. The head should be large, with a broad skull, showing a good round sweep from tip of beak to back of head. The neck should be short and thick, running into the body with a graceful, deep sweep of the chest, giving that chubby or Bullfinch type we often hear of. The body should be pear-shaped, running away wedge-shape underneath the legs to tail; the shoulders should be wide, and the back well-filled and nicely rounded at sides. The wings should be short with the tip of the flights meeting feather to feather V shape, but should not overlap. The legs should not be too short, as this gives a bird a squat appearance, nor too long or it will appear stiltily, but they should be of medium length. The colour should be rich and level throughout and the bird should possess dense feather of short and silky texture.

A Few Words on Red Mites.

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

BEING chiefly based on practical experiments which have not yet ended, I can only regard this contribution as notes by the way which may have some little interest for those concerned in the extermination of the pest. There is, of course, no finality whatever about the results obtained up to the present, and I shall leave readers to make their own deductions; but, simple as the matter seems on the face of it, there are pitfalls that may easily lead to error, and consequently it is unwise to jump to any conclusion.

Fifteen years ago I made a series of experiments with red mites, with the object of testing their vitality and powers of survival under adverse conditions, which, I may remark in passing, produced results diametrically opposed to any theory or opinion ever published, so far as I could discover, up to that time, and when I read a suggestion in the recent correspondence on the extermination of lice that a knowledge of the length of time required for the ova, or "nits," to hatch would be useful, I turned up my notes to see if this point was included. But, unfortunately, I had preserved no notes respecting the actual period of incubation. Hence these new experiments.

My paraphernalia consisted simply of two tiny clear glass tubes in which photographic tabloids are sold. These tubes, closely stoppered with waxed corks, are practically airtight, and one can imagine that the conditions of life within them, without the slightest visible means of subsistence, are not very enviable from our point of view, even in these times of war economy. I obtained several full-grown mites, and enclosed two in one tube, which had been thoroughly cleaned and dried, on August 5.

To prevent confusion we will follow this colony first. A tiny strip of dark paper was enclosed with them to assist observation. Several ova were deposited the same night, and others during the period up to August 8, when the mites were removed. The first young to hatch came out shortly after noon on the 8th. At the first examination, on the morning of August 9, five young were out, and at night the last of a distinctive group of ova deposited on the night of August 7 was out. One ovum, which I actually saw deposited at 4 p.m. on August 6 was hatched at the first examination on the morning of August 9.

The period of incubation is therefore a matter of hours, probably about thirty hours. But considering the exceptionally wet and cool weather prevailing during the time, it is quite possible that the ova may hatch more quickly during hot, sultry weather, and it may not be far wrong to say the period of incubation is probably from 24 to 30 hours.

The question of feeding a colony of these creatures is a problem I have not attempted to solve, but it occurred to me to try the effect of introducing a freshly-plucked quill of a sprouting feather. This I did when the mites were several days old and exceedingly active, but although closely watched at frequent intervals the quill seemed to be totally ignored. Indeed it appeared to be of just as little interest to the mites, even when running over it, as the strip of paper.

walks, fluttering up to the dry-stone dyke, watching us for a second, then off again; another reconnoitre, and so on, until we are out of the danger-zone. He is an attractive little fellow if not much of a fancier's bird. The Chaffinch is perhaps the most plentiful of all the hardbills. Always brightly clad (with a nest as pretty as himself) our countryside would indeed be strange without his cheerful presence.

The Starling is also seen in great numbers. It is strange to think that this bird is met with in tremendous numbers all over the country now, yet it was quite scarce less than fifty years ago. I was amused to watch some bathing in the rain-rhones on the house-tops outside "my attic near the sky." How these birds enjoy a bath! Though there was great competition between them and the Gulls for certain cosy chimney-cans, there was no ill-feeling.

The Starling is my favourite native soft-bill (probably because he was the first bird I ever kept, and "first loves are sweetest.") and I am never without one. I have two just now at home, aged four and six years. Their lively chatter, unequal but joyous whistle, and their sociability, endear them to many, while their glossy spangled coat—"green, purple, brown and black, with specks between"—entitles them to be placed among our native beauties.

remember. I trust, however, that they will be of interest to fanciers, especially "ayont the sea."

The Seagulls are plentiful enough, both well inland and on the shores. There are two kinds—the Common and the Herring Gulls. They are as noisy as they are voracious, and are by no means fastidious in their tastes. They seem to have their regular chimney-cans, nooks and crannies, and an intrusion is warmly and loudly resented. "No aliens need apply" is their motto, apparently! They hate solitude, and if one of the habitués is missing at night-time the others kick up an awful shindy, until, after repeated calls, he is seen hovering around. After a long discussion—about the evils of late hours, I suppose—they settle down for the night.

A Noisy Breakfast Time.

The arrival of a trawler in the early morning is the signal for another commotion. Screamingly they escort the ship into the harbour, then squat all over her, waiting for a chance to beg, borrow, or steal a fish. The crew usually throw any broken fish overboard and then there's "wigs on the green" (ocean), and the bird that is lucky enough to get the fish has to swallow it entire or have it torn from it by a score of hungry Gulls. They follow the excursion steamers regularly too, and dive gracefully down for any tit-bits that are thrown out. They seem just to momentarily sit on the water in a manner that their appearance hardly credits.

The Raven breeds regularly in the Western Highlands, but I only came across one specimen; at Duart Point, on the Island of Mull. A typical bird "midst the silent grandeur of 'the grim, gaunt hills, streaked with granite grey.'" Crows, of course, are everywhere, and there are several colonies of Jackdaws, especially on the Gallanach Cliffs. Though the most of the cliffs are of what geologists term the "plum-pudding" variety, the Gallanach Cliffs are of the columnar variety similar to the famous Staffa rocks at Iona. At the now deserted old stone pier at Barr-nam-boc, on the island of Kerrera, I stopped to watch the Gulls and the plaintively screaming Terns (or Sea Swallows) while I refreshed the inner man. This pier used to be a busy ferry, and the only route to Mull, in the pre-steamboat days.

Keeping the Shows Going.

SIR,—It was with very great pleasure that I noticed a reference in CAGE BIRDS to Plymouth W.C.O.S. show. We in Cornwall always look forward to Plymouth show to give us some idea of what an exhibition bird should be, and a chance to see some real champions. I also see in CAGE BIRDS that the Southern Yorkshire Club is moving. Is the Southern Norwich Club dead? No sign of life yet; it appears to me that it is a specialist club's duty to make an attempt to keep the Fancy flourishing by supporting shows. Plymouth W.C.O.S., in holding an open show this year, will, I am sure, set a good example which many other Southern societies may follow.

J. P. ANDREW.

Patriotic Show at Barrow.

SIR,—At the meeting of the Barrow C.B.A. on Sept. 7, A. Hudson presiding, it was decided to hold our annual show, Nov. 27, for one of the noblest objects that any society could support, namely, in help of the widows of our heroes who have died at the front; 90 per cent. of the proceeds will go to the Mayoress's fund for the above object. When we remember the noble way in which the local people supported our last nest feather show, and enabled us to hand over £15 to the Patriotic fund of our Mayor, we are looking forward to a record show in every respect. We have the good fortune to obtain some good working members who are just novices, and many older members as helpers, and we have engaged Mr. Wellings, of Prescott to judge. Those desirous of becoming members kindly communicate with Breeding Rollers in an Aviary.

SIR,—In reply to your correspondent, Mr. Hainsworth (re Rollers breeding in aviary), it is one of the greatest drawbacks to breeding in an aviary that the sitting hens will eat a certain amount of the egg food put in for those which have young ones, but, naturally, they do not leave their nests so often as those feeding young, so do not eat as much, and, having plenty of exercise, they do not seem to take any ill effects from same. Re his other query, as to training young cocks, he will find it answered in the concluding portion of my article. I should advise him to get the best cock possible, and hens of the same strain, but not very nearly related. Take the young out of the aviary as soon as they can do for themselves, cage off in largest cages or flights he has at disposal, and let them hear only their tutor. When moulted, cage off singly in Roller cages, remove out of hearing of the others all young that bring any notes he does not like, as a bad bird will sometimes spoil the whole lot. I may say I won 1st in B.R.C.C. Novice Points Competition, 3rd in Champion ditto, with Rollers bred and trained under the above conditions, which speaks for itself.

A. HARPER.

In Case of Short Entries.

SIR,—I can mention more than one society with only a handful of working men fanciers who are able to have a good show and pay expenses, and produce a profit. Neither have they a very large hall, but large enough for their entries. They engage two specialist judges for about 30 classes; they have a good entry and a good gate; they allow the sec. so much per year, and so much for loss of time on the show week. If you go to the show on the second day you can have your prize-money and specials. Now some societies have the largest hall in the town, and exhibits only enough to half fill the hall. They have to pay the secretary about £10 for his services, and the consequence is their money is eaten up by too much expense.

I have seen a schedule to-day where the judge has 47 classes, of all varieties. Is that a fair day's work? I say it is too much. No judge should ever be expected to judge so many classes. I am thinking that some of those classes will be judged in the twilight or gaslight; and no doubt they will be the British bird classes. How can that society expect British bird exhibitors to send entries? At the largest show in London last year one of the judges was still hard at it late in the afternoon. Can the judge then do justice to the birds? He has to get through them the best he can.

A society should as far as possible put down a good classification, and have sufficient judges to do justice to the exhibits. Try and get members interested in certain varieties to guarantee whole or part of the prize money against loss, and give full prize-money in all classes, then, with judges who fully understand the varieties they have to judge, I feel sure the classes will fill.

Does Mr. Pope and his society expect to get exhibitors living a long distance from Plymouth to send their exhibits on the chance of winning first prize, and the prize-money not pay entrance fees and railway carriage? Exhibitors do not generally send birds to a show just for the benefit of the society and for other fanciers to have a look at their birds. No—birds cost money, and exhibitors want to get a little back for their outlay, and time and trouble. Mr. Pope wants the opinion of readers of CAGE BIRDS, and says that the Plymouth Society are graduating the prize-money. If they have decided on what they intend doing, why ask advice? Should there be six entries at 1s. 6d. in a class, and three prizes are given, 4s., 3s., 1s., that allows 1s. for the society. The exhibitor has to pay 1s. 6d. entrance fee, and perhaps 1s. 6d. or 2s. carriage, so there will not be much for all the time and trouble of getting the bird ready for the show. If entries were sent from the Midlands the birds would have to leave early on Monday morning to arrive in the evening, be on show Tuesday and Wednesday, and arrive home about Thursday evening. It would not pay carriage fare to take and fetch them from the station. Treat it as a business, give the best classification, secure the best judges, give full prize-money, and leave it to the exhibitors to send their entries—and they will, if you adopt the above.

HERBERT J. CHICK.

The Exhibition Yellowhammer.

SIR,—Surely Mrs. L. E. T. Dalton will tender an ample apology to Mr. Herbert J. Chick for trampling on his pet corn by pretending to know something about British Birds. This is a subject upon which Mr. Herbert J. Chick appears to claim a monopoly, vide a letter of his published in CAGE BIRDS some time ago, wherein, if I remember rightly, he criticised and condemned most, if not all, of our present day judges, and then unblushingly announced that he, Mr. Herbert J. Chick, was coming out as a British Bird judge. He even wrote letters to secretaries of societies begging for judging appointments, but apparently met with little success. If Herbert J. Chick will look up the shows of 1914 season where a Yellowhammer class was provided, I think he will find that Mrs. L. E. T. Dalton proved herself a good sport by guaranteeing at least one Yellowhammer class; I cannot remember Mr. Herbert J. Chick ever doing anything similar. H. J. C. suggests that if Mrs. Dalton exhibits that large-sized, full-chested Yellowhammer of hers, all other Yellowhammer fanciers will keep their birds at home. Evidently his opinion of British Bird exhibitors is on a par with his opinion of British Bird judges. As I am not out seeking judging engagements, I will just sign myself

YELLOW YITE.

SIR,—It was with great interest that I read Mr. Chick's letter relating to my short article on this subject, which he has found it fitting to condemn. I am pleased, however, that my humble effort has had the effect of eliciting a reply from such an expert on the Yellowhammer as Mr. Chick, a gentleman who is not only able to teach us the fine art of preparing an exhibition specimen, but is also in such an affluent position to offer such substantial inducements in cash as two five shilling specials.

I am quite content to leave my case in the hands of the readers of CAGE BIRDS, who will no doubt understand that whatever I have stated, was with the sole object of inducing others to come to the front. I naturally concluded that when my bird won these prizes that my method of feeding, etc., was worth consideration, whilst the remarks of the Editor will satisfactorily explain most of the other points.

Dealing with the Horticultural Hall show of 1914; I should like to inform Mr. Chick that my birds were not on the bench. Nevertheless the bird illustrated took second prize there. It was then owned by a gentleman from whom I claimed it at the last Swansea show. With reference to the Bathgate show, where I entered two Yellow Buntings, I regret to say my show case did not get through until 3.30 in the afternoon, too late for judging. I think Mr. Chick might have instituted further inquiries before writing to the press.

My reason for quoting the Buff, which is not necessarily an exhibition bird, was to explain what an improvement takes place after a moult, for the most simple reader will understand that what is required is a yellow Yellowhammer, as the name implies. If Mr. Chick is so keen on filling the classes, why has he not written before on the subject instead of leaving it to me? A few weeks prior to the last Bathgate show I appealed, through the columns of CAGE BIRDS, respecting this matter, with the gratifying result there were, I believe, sixteen entries, which is something new as far as the Yellow Bunting is concerned. This pleased me immensely, and I congratulated the winner.

LILIAN E. T. DALTON.

SIR,—I note with satisfaction the interest that is being taken in the short article subscribed by Mrs. Dalton on the Yellowhammer. Mr. Chick, if I may remark, comes a little stronger in his criticism on the subject than there is necessity for, inasmuch as the article was invited by the Editor, and did not appear as a challenge I may say. We have heard Mrs. Dalton's appeal for the Yellowhammer on more than one occasion, and it behoves us who are really interested, even although we may have some friends who can show four yellows to beat one buff, to back up the Yellowhammer as a bird worthy of a class of its own species on the show bench. One point by Mr. Chick which seems to me out of place, is that wherein he states, "another week I will take exception to her method of moulting, etc." Now, Mr. Chick, don't be tyrannical, give us your own method, and don't peck holes in another body's. If it doesn't suit you, take it for what it's worth. That is the method which we novices in that particular section have to follow.

Moulting Exhibition British Birds on Wild Seeds.

SIR,—I have read the splendid articles written by that well-known exhibitor, Mr. C. Prior, that have appeared in CAGE BIRDS during the last few months. It makes me wish that I lived in the country, or that I had the time to visit the fields and lanes to collect the valuable seeds he says are so beneficial to British Birds during the moulting season. I then wonder to myself how many of the hundreds of British Birds exhibited up and down the country, and especially those that have won premier honours, have been fed and moulted on these wild seeds. I should like to know how it is that exhibitors can, and do, improve on the field moulted specimens with the ordinary seed mixture. I know many exhibitors, including myself, who have moulted some of the very best specimens that have ever been seen on the show bench and have never used any of the wild seeds that have been recommended. I remember, years ago, articles appeared recommending this wild seed, and that wild seed, to moult birds a good colour, etc., until it became a byword amongst fanciers, "My word, your Linnet looks well, did you moult it on shepherd's purse?" I have spoken to men who have put down some of the finest Linnets and Goldfinches that have ever been staged, and they have never used these wild seeds. I should like some of the British exhibitors who have specialised on Linnets and Goldfinches and Bullfinches—men who have taken premier honours all over the country—to say whether they have moulted their champions on wild seed, or on the ordinary mixed seed as we know it.

I know dozens of bird catchers who have every opportunity of collecting wild seed never trouble to do it. Yet they can and do moult Linnets and Goldfinches as well as any one (many a champion has been moulted in their hop cages). They, with the ordinary seed, bring their birds into the best of condition; they can moult them early and get them into full song by the time the catching season commences, when the majority of birds have not really started to moult. I have asked them many times why they don't collect wild seed for their Linnets and Goldfinches. They say that when they first catch them, they are on the soft wild seed, and they take some getting on to the hard, dry seed that is going to be their staple food; many die during the process, from inflammation, or red swelling, as they call it; therefore it stands to reason that after you have got them on to hard seed, and got them thoroughly accustomed to it, to put them back on to the wild soft seed again, you have a harder task to get them on to the hard seed again, and most of them die.

Take young Hawfinches: When first caught, they have been feeding on peas, etc. You gradually get them off the soft, natural food on to mixed hard seed, and numbers die in doing so. Should you be fortunate enough to get them on to the mixed seed, and you start them on peas, etc., when the season comes round again, you will find you will have the same trouble over again—they will leave the mixed seed for the natural wild seed, and perchance will not again touch the mixed seed. Their head is soon under their wing, and do what you will, you cannot save them. There is a disease they get that I cannot fathom, and I have spoken to several who have had them die of the same complaint. Water begins to run from their eyes, the eyes swell up and gradually close (the bird keeps rubbing them on the perches) while the skin of the neck seems to stick to the throat and they are soon gone. I have lost several field moulted, but not one cage moulted. I have tried several things, but they have been no good.

Should Mr. C. Prior be judging at the L.C.B.A. show, I should like birds that are entered to be marked in the catalogue whether they have been moulted in cages on natural wild seed or ordinary mixed seed as we know it. The birds could be marked "W.S." or "M.S." I should be willing to give a special to the best bird exhibited that has been fed and moulted in a cage on mixed seed, if some other fancier will give one for the best bird moulted in cage on natural wild seed, birds to be judged for condition and colour only. It will be interesting to know whether a bird can be moulted on its natural wild seed better than on the ordinary dry mixed seed, as we know it.

HERBERT J. CHICK.

"Tortured Prisoners."

SIR,—Mr. Cox as a logician is really too funny. He reads into my letter an ergo that "because men get drunk it is right to keep wild birds in darkened captivity." I think that no others of your readers have come to the conclusion that this was my argument, but to meet Mr. Cox on logical grounds would be so easy as to afford no sport, so we will get back to his "plain facts." I notice that he has jettisoned all of these except one, and he now says "it is a plain fact, that thousands of wild birds are condemned by their jailors to deliberate and calculated cruelty." It is not for bird keepers to prove a negative, so I will simply say that during an experience of more than thirty years I have been a "jailor" of wild birds, and I certainly have not subjected them to "deliberate and calculated cruelty." On the contrary, my birds have shown by their demeanour at home that their lives have been happy, and they have shown by their condition on scores of show-benches that their treatment has been such that no wild bird of their species could compare with them in perfection of plumage. I suppose even Mr. Cox does not need to be told that horses, of which he presumably knows more than he does about birds, and animals of every kind display the first signal of distress in their coats. In any case, I can tell him that if a bird is badly treated it is in bad plumage, and here I will suggest an "ergo" to him: If a bird is in plumage better in captivity than in nature, ergo, that bird is not being subjected to "deliberate and calculated cruelty." This seems to me to be pretty fair logic, and I must leave it to Mr. Cox either to throw over his last remaining "plain fact," or to substantiate it with something more to the point than a rambling statement about birds in bird shops. Bird-dealers are not bird "jailors." They only sell the birds to the jailors.

A grievance of Mr. Cox is that "although we (himself and other professional humanitarians) who work to prevent cruelty to all living beings, men included, invariably do so in the open, our opponents as invariably oppose us anonymously," and goes on to invent his own "ergo"—that the anonymity is prompted by trade interest. The signing of his name by Mr. Cox, is a trade interest. It is his business to keep his name before the public. The anonymity of private individuals is a matter between themselves and the Editor

Club Reports.

GLASGOW (North-West) C.B.C.

Meeting Amalgamated Musicians' Hall, Aug. 31, Mr. Gibb presiding over a good attendance. Classification arranged for annual show, Nov. 20. New member admitted, J. Leslie. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chairman.—J. Houston, Sec.

PLUMSTEAD AND WOOLWICH.

Meeting Sept. 9, at headquarters, Trinity School, Mr. Newham chair. Secretary instructed to send honour list to CAGE BIRDS. Decided to carry out annual show Nov., date to fix. New sec. appointed, Andit of accounts, etc., and report next meeting.—Geo. H. Maclellan, Hon. Sec.

LARKHALL C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 4, Y.M.C.A. Hall, Mr. Randall, chair. Decided to have an extended classification, with prize-money on the sliding scale, at our annual show, Oct. 30. There will be 44 classes:—Nor., 10; Bord., 11; Crest or C.B., 1; Com. Canary, 2; Yorks., 2; A.O.V., 1; Sell, 3; Mules, 2; Brit., 10; For., 1; Gift, 1.—T. J. McGregor, Sec.

SHEETLESTON C.B.C.

Meeting, Good Templars' Hall, Sept. 11, Mr. E. Taylor chair, supported by a good turn-out of members. Classification for annual show was fixed as follows: Crests 2, Nor. 12, Bord. 9, Yorks. 10, Scotch Fancy 4, Nov. 1, Brit. 12, For. 1, and Gift class. Mr. A. Wallace was proposed for membership.—S. F. Wood, Sec.

CLAPHAM C.B.A.

Meeting held Sept. 7, Mr. R. Pearce was nominated for membership. The date of the annual show was fixed for Oct. 14, at Strathlane Hall, Clapham Junction, and Sec. was given instructions regarding the appointment of judges. The schedule for last year was again adopted, but a few new classes were added. It was resolved to adjourn the meeting until Tuesday, Sept. 21.—A. R. Coe.

CRYSTAL PALACE AND PENGE.

Meeting, Sept. 8, Alexandra Hotel, Penge, Mr. Foxen chair. A large attendance was there to see a most interesting exhibition of washing given by that well-known exponent of the art, Mr. H. Norman. Members went away much the wiser, especially the novice. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer was given, who responded with a neat little speech.—W. D. Fryett, Hon. Sec.

NEW CROSS C.B.S.

Meeting, headquarters, Sept. 2, Mr. A. W. Culham, chair, and a fair number present. Decided to hold the annual show on Nov. 4, Mr. J. Robson judge, and Sec. was instructed to see to printing, etc., as soon as possible. We shall be glad to hear from members wishing to give a special, and hope they will keep up the reputation this society has for the number of special competed for at the annual shows. A judging competition will be held Oct. 7; members please bring one or more birds.—Burton Bros., Hon. Secs.

LOANHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting Mason's Arms, Sept. 11, Mr. R. H. Douglas chair. Selection of medals was first considered, and it was agreed to ask jeweller to get birds on medals if winners desired same, after which a gold medal was selected and secretary instructed to order four of the same. Sec. brought up a motion by the President that this year's door drawings go to local relief fund, and it was unanimously agreed to let every penny go to local fund. Sec. was instructed to engage Mason's Hall for Oct. 9. Stewards were appointed for each section. Meeting closed with a vote of thanks to chairman.—W. H. Smart, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

Meeting, Sept. 6, Mr. Bartlett chair, and a very good muster to hear Mr. Ovenden lecture on colour feeding. The breeding experiences of the lecturer go back some forty years, so that all he had to say was naturally very interesting. Breeding and feeding for colour was fully gone into, and a number of questions were asked and answered. A very hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Ovenden at the close of the lecture. Members please note that no further communications should be addressed to Mr. King, who has gone up North on war service. Mr. T. Collinge has been elected Secretary in his place.—A. W. Farmer, Hon. Assist. Sec.

WALLSEND (Mid-Tyne) C.B.A.

General meeting Sept. 8, Station Hotel, Mr. L. Simpson chair, before a grand attendance. Balance sheet for N.F. Show was read, and gave every satisfaction. Schedule for annual show was drawn up. 60 classes, 11 Nor., 4 Crest and C.B., 4 Cinn. Nor., 7 Yorks., 15 Bord., 2 Liz., 2 Sell, 12 Mules and Brit. Twenty birds will be given by members to be put up for sale the day of show, and proceeds to the Red Cross fund. We have been given the B.F.C.C. patronage, so any Border fancier can become a member at next meeting; all fanciers invited to join, 1s. nom. fee and 2s. 6d. sub. Next meeting Oct. 13, electing prize money for show. All our members are enthusiastic fanciers, so we expect to make our show a success. New members, Mr. Seal, Tynemouth; Mr. Gilroy, Byker; Mr. Anderson, Wallsend; Mr. Lawson, Gosforth; Mr. Wilson, Heaton.—G. Greenwell, Sec.

SOUTHERN BORDER F.C.

Meeting, headquarters, Sept. 23, a fair number present; Mr. Norman, chair. Final arrangements were made for the Club's patronage, which has been given to the following shows, viz., Plymouth, Oct. 10 and 11; judge, Mr. Robson; Cheltenham, Nov. 3 and 4; judge, Mr. Payne; Chester, Nov. 13, judge, Mr. Battie; Redhill, Nov. 24, judge, Mr. Norman; London C.B.A., Dec. 10, 11, and 13, judge, Mr. Robson; Llanelli, Jan. 11, 1916. The special list is as follows:—S.B.F.C. cup, Newley cup, diploma for best bird at each show, 2/6 most points gained by a novice, 2/6 best 4th prize bird each show, 5/- most points in Greens and Cinnamons during the season, two highest birds at each show to count; 5/- for champion, and 5/- for novice for most points during season; two cruetts, one champions, and one novices, for most points during season gained with birds out of the money. Mr. H. C. Humphries also offers a 2/6 special at Redhill, and L.C.B.A. for best bird wearing a closed ring. It is hoped that members will support these shows as liberally as possible, as societies who run their shows as usual deserve all the support the Fancy can give them. Will members please note that subs. are due, and as they must be paid before members are eligible to compete for specials, I hope those who have not yet paid will let me hear from them at once.—Geo. Burton, Hon. Sec.

CITY AND COUNTY OF PERTH.

Meeting, Liddlow's Rooms, Leonard St., Sept. 6; Mr. D. Brown, president, in the chair. Sec. read all correspondence. Classes for Club show were fixed. Sec. was asked to write a letter of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Duncan in the sad loss of their son at the Front, also to compile a Roll of Honour of members at the Front. The meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—J. S. Smith, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Evening Show, headquarters, Sept. 8. Judge, Mr. B. S. Forster. Canary: Spl., 1, 2, 3, Bayliss; r, vhc, Reed. Greenf., 1, 2, Rev. Soames; 3, vhc, Reed; r, Bayliss. Redpoll, etc.: 1, vhc, Rev. Judges for Y.B. and Annual Shows.—A. Wasey, Hon. Sec.

ALFRETON C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 11. A very good number turned up. Mr. J. Admitt chair. Decided to hold our annual open show Oct. 29-30. Judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield). Classes were all made and a lot of other business got through, but owing to the restrictions of the time, the fixing of specials and several other important items had to be left over, and we decided to have a special meeting on Sept. 18, when all members are requested to be present.—G. Beardall, Sec.

PONTYPOOL C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 11. We decided not to hold an open show this year, but will hold a members' show Nov. 27. New members elected; Mr. J. H. Watkins and Mr. J. Lewis, both being chosen on the committee; also Mr. E. Sweet. Mr. R. Smith was elected assistant treas. Mr. Loveday vice-chair, and Mr. B. Lapping assist. sec. Mr. J. Lovell is our president. One of our members has joined the Colours, Pte. George Welsh, 54685, R.G.A., 4th Batt., C Co., now at Great Yarmouth. We are still expecting a few more members to join our society, and I would like to have their names and addresses for nomination at next meeting, or, better still, would welcome their presence.—H. H. Vaughan, Hon. Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Meeting, Sept. 4, at headquarters, Mr. J. Chambers chair. Mr. W. Hall, our worthy Pres., kindly promised two guineas to be disposed of as the members thought best, and seeing that we have such an excellent list of specials for this season, it was unanimously voted to the funds of the society. Sec. was instructed to write Mr. Hall of this decision, also to thank him for his generosity. Messrs. Hunt and Mr. Fryer were elected members. Mr. Chittenden gave a lecture on "Preparing for Exhibition," which he did in his very able manner, answering all questions put to him to everyone's satisfaction. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Chittenden, to which he suitably responded, thus bringing an interesting meeting to a close.—E. Norton, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting, Sept. 6, with a fair attendance. As we are not holding an open show this year, it was suggested that the annual subs. might be reduced but this was left over for further consideration. With a view to maintaining the interest of the members in the Fancy, several suggestions were made, which, if carried out, cannot fail to be beneficial. A table show will be held at next meeting, Oct. 4. Classes are: Yell. Nor., buff ditto, Goldf. and Linnet. There will be a judging competition. All members are requested to bring a few birds; no need to wash. We are hoping to hold two good club shows later on, Mr. E. Tams, of Longton, was recently elected a member. The Norwich members are getting up a medal competition for the best birds bred this season. We hear that Mr. Glover has a very fine youngster coming on which will take a lot of stopping, and we hope it will come up to expectations.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

CANARY QUERIES

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

WHICH IS BEST (Yorkshire).—It depends wholly upon circumstances and one's personal inclination whether it is best in breeding to have one cock to two hens or otherwise. When properly carried out the system of running one cock with two hens will almost, or quite, invariably give the highest proportional increase of stock, as the decreased number of cocks required materially reduces the number of adult breeding stock, and in no way affects the yield of each hen individually. It is a good plan where economical breeding is aimed at, and when the number of hens available is in excess of the number of cocks. But you must, of course, adopt the proper plan of keeping each hen separately in a cage by herself, as you may have seen frequently described during the past season in these replies or in "Cage Birds Annual" for 1915.

VARIED (Birdy).—(1) The partiality of the bird for a diet of summer rape solely is probably only a temporary aberration of appetite due to its moulting, which will pass away in due course. Meantime, you need have no fear at all that it will not thrive on the rape. Offer it a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar about every third day for a time, and on the intervening days give first a pinch of maw seed, and next a morsel of some green salad or sweet fruit. Add to the drinking water for one day only a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice, and after this give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week. (2) The sample of rape enclosed is a first-rate quality of summer rape, and quite suitable for the bird in question, or, indeed, any class of Canary. (3) After this lapse of time it will be best to leave the broken leg severely alone. By the time this reply reaches you, assuming the bird to be still living, Nature will have begun her own repair of the mischief, and any interference will only inflict needless torture on the bird. These cases require immediate treatment to be of any real service. Please note that British bird queries should be written on a separate paper, as they have to go to a different expert. I reply this time, as the case is urgent.

EFFECT OF GAS (B. Blackburn).—If I am right in assuming that the gas fire is provided with a flue to carry off the fumes and products of combustion, and the room is efficiently ventilated, and you also take care to keep the bird at a reasonable distance from the fire where the warmth is fairly equable, I do not anticipate any harm whatever befalling the bird, either in general health or song from the presence of the fire. The main point is to avoid too close proximity, where the heat is liable to extreme and rapid fluctuations, and at the same time not expose the bird to cold direct draughts from doors or windows. Exposure to the fumes would, of course, be harmful, but this is merely a question of a properly ventilated room, and having the fire provided with a flue.

AILING NORWICH HEN (F. E. R.).—Possibly the commencement of the moult is partly accountable for the symptoms. Make yourself sure that she is not exposed to cold draughts, rapid or extreme changes of temperature, or fumes of burning lights in the evenings, and then treat as follows for two or three weeks. In addition to the staple seed diet give a morsel of bread and milk lightly sprinkled with soft sugar every third day for a fortnight, and on the intervening days give first a pinch of maw seed, and next a morsel of some kind of green salad. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, for three consecutive days, and after this give instead four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia, and sweet spirits of nitre, every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

A YORKSHIRE SONCLESS (E. B.).—I'm afraid there is no remedy for a real cock two and a half years old which has never sung a note in spite of having all encouragement in the way of example from association with good singers. As you say, there is no doubt about his sex. I take it that it has been proved by successful mating, otherwise I should be rather sceptical about it, in spite of external appearances. When the moult is quite finished this season, you cannot expect it to begin to sing before that time, remove him to a room where no other bird is kept, but where people will be often moving about, every third day for a month, and add to the drinking water 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence. If this produces no effect I fear he is an incorrigible non-singer, for whom there is little, if any, chance of reformation.

A FATAL CLICKING (R. H. M.).—Thanks for your report. Sorry that the treatment was not successful, but probably the birds had their passports to the birdies' better laid before it was commenced. I assume that you took the necessary steps to remove the birds from the exciting causes of the trouble before commencing treatment, which is always the first and most important part of any treatment for badly ailments. Certainly, if any others fall ill I shall be most happy to assist you in any way if you write at once, giving full particulars.

TWO COCKS (S. M.).—First of all see that both birds are kept in a bright and healthful place, well ventilated, but free from direct cold draughts or sudden extremes of temperature, and do not expose them to the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, nor hang them high up near the ceiling. The temperature need not be very high, but should be fairly equable. Give this bird a staple diet of a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle, broken groats and maw seed. Every second day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and then sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice, then miss a week, and repeat the week's treatment, and repeat it again the third time. Keep a light cover over the cage until the bird seems to have changed the whole of its plumage. Then add a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a large hemp seed, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid to the water every second day for two or three weeks to tighten up the plumage. (2) Feed this bird the same as No. 1, except that you give it every second day a morsel of bread and milk with 2 drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days add to the water five drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and sweet spirit of nitre. Continue this for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary by the condition of the bird.

PERCHES ALL DAY (A.C.P.).—It is rather early yet to expect the bird to recommence singing after the moult. If it has made a complete moult it will probably resume its song within the next month or so, although you must not overlook the fact that an individual now and again turns up which will not resume singing before the following spring. See that the bird is kept in a fairly equable and mild temperature, free from cold draughts, or fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor where it will be exposed to sudden extremes of heat and cold. In addition to the staple diet of seeds give every second day for a fortnight half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion and four of sherry well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days add to the drinking water 20 drops of chemical food. At the end of a fortnight discontinue these extras for a week, and then resume them, and give for another fortnight. Give a morsel of some green salad every second or third day.

NORWICH DYING (G. Camp).—Constipation was undoubtedly the indirect cause of the death of the Norwich cock. In addition to the staple of plain canary seed give every third day half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, niger, white millet, teazle and chopped sunflower seeds, and twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a small spray of watercress daily for the next fortnight or so, and then every second or third day. In the drinking water for three consecutive days add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and then every second day for the remainder of a week, and during the second week give instead four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

BUILDING AND STOCKING AVIARY (Tiny, Ireland).—The aviary you propose building is really nothing more than a large cage. Twelve or thirteen birds the size of a Norwich Canary will stock it to its fullest limits, and for breeding this number should be reduced by at least two-thirds, or, say, one cock and three hens. For this number you should put in six nesting sites, and be careful not to place one materially higher up towards the roof than the rest, or there will be incessant quarrels for its possession. Self-supplying seed boxes, with separate compartments for canary and rape, and all other extras given as required in a separate vessel in the same way as egg food. When a number of birds are kept together self-supplying fountains at which more than one bird can drink at once are best, as these arrangements go far to prevent quarrelling. Unless the nesting sites are arranged around the cage, with a door or slide making each one quite easily accessible, it is best when breeding in this manner to leave the eggs in the nests as laid to take their chance, but when each nest is readily accessible, as suggested, the same method of removing them as laid and returning them on the evening of the third day may be followed with the same advantage as in cage breeding. To go into full details concerning the construction of aviary and all the appurtenances would take up far more space than can be spared in this column, and you would find it much more helpful to get a copy of "Aviaries, Bird-rooms and Cages," 2/3 post free from our Manager, for instructions in cage-making, and "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, for full details about all appliances and their uses.

AN ASSORTMENT (John Morrison).—(1) It is not unusual for birds to keep rather slack in feather until the moult is quite finished. Keep the bird in a fairly comfortable temperature but free from cold draughts or extremes of temperature. Add to the water for three consecutive days as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence and ten drops of lemon juice, and after this give instead a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a large hemp seed in the water every third day for a fortnight. (2) Keep this bird also in a comfortable temperature until well. Give the aperient the same as No. 1 for three days, and after this give four drops each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, tincture of lobelia and sweet spirit of nitre every second day for a fortnight. (3) I should treat a bird that caught a cold by first of all removing the causes as far as possible, putting the bird in a fairly comfortable and equable temperature, and giving some such medicine as advised for No. 2 for a week or so. Much, however, depends on circumstances. But this treatment would do good in a very great proportion of cases. (4) If you do not mind destroying the varnish on the cages, there is nothing better than a solution of camphor in methylated spirit—an ounce to the half pint—to touch up your cages now and again to keep red mites at bay. If the varnish is a consideration, however, use instead strong essence of quassia, fir tree oil, turpentine, or paraffin to touch the joints, ends of perches, joints of doors, etc., once or twice a week.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS

Answered by H. NORMAN.

MULE BREEDING IN AVIARY (Carel Cross).—Goldfinch and Linnet Mules can be bred in your aviary, as both the Finches are good breeders in captivity. I would advise you to procure half a dozen good healthy Norwich Canaries, yellows if possible, as yellow Mules are always more valuable than buffs, but even with these you are sure to produce a certain number of the latter. If you are only breeding your birds for song purposes, then you need not be quite so particular in getting yellow hens, as there is always a big demand for them, and consequently the prices are higher than for buffs, while the supply is never so large. If, on the other hand, your ambition is to produce something choice that will be fit for exhibition, your hens must be large and of good quality of feather, as it is impossible to breed high-class hybrids from poor stock. For producing dark birds you will require hens rather heavily marked or green, and, if you like, one or even two could be extra big buffs. If you prefer a sporting chance of getting light birds, then use clear hens, bred from clears, if possible. As regards the Finches, you will require a couple of big Goldies and a Linnet; it is no use putting in more than one Linnet, as they only waste their time fussing about after each other instead of attending to the Canaries. Procure all your birds as early as possible, and let them fly together occasionally during the winter.

VARIOUS QUESTIONS (G. E. S.).—All the British Finches are hardy, but I scarcely think you mean that; I fancy by the tone of your letter that you want to know which are the easiest to keep. If so, you will find the Greenfinch heads this list, and the others in the following order, though, individuals differ, a supposedly tender specimen frequently outliving a more robust one.—Redpoll, Linnet, Twite, Siskin, Bullfinch, Goldfinch. (2) The autumn is certainly the best time to secure your birds, when there is always the possibility of getting young ones that quickly settle down to caged life. (3) If your cages are the size you mention I would advise you to stock each with a single pair of birds; you will do far better, and your chances of success will be much greater than if you attempt to keep three pairs in the two cages combined. (4) As regards the hens to use, Norwich are preferred to Yorkshires, but on this matter you had better read reply to "Carel Cross." (5) Your query re Budgerigars should have been written on a separate sheet of paper for our Foreign-Bird expert. I would advise you either to consult him or procure our Nuthell booklet on the Budgerigar, which will tell you all about their breeding in captivity, etc.

GOLDFINCH ILL (Finch, Brighton).—Your Goldie requires a little special attention at once, or you will probably lose him during the coming moult. Keep him without water for a couple of hours, and then dissolve as much glauber salts as will cover a sixpence in two tablespoonfuls of water, and when nearly cold give it to him to drink, let him have it for about three hours, then take it away. Give a cube of stale bread soaked in hot milk daily, with a little powdered bismuth dusted on it. If he eats this freely he can have his usual seeds at the same time; if not, withdraw them for a couple of hours daily. When he has had this treatment for a week give a small teaspoonful of chemical food in water that has been previously boiled; he can have this every other day. Give him a spoonful of soaked seeds occasionally, or seeds that have commenced to germinate. Thoroughly examine your seeds and see that they are of best quality; it may be that one of them has been badly harvested and is the cause of the trouble. Why did you not send me a sample, with more particulars about treatment? What about wild food? He should be almost living on it just now.

BIRDS FOR LARGE CAGE (A. C. P.).—It appears to me that you have quite enough birds in your large cage already. I do not say that it would not hold more, and you could possibly keep doubly the number in it for a time, but they would require very careful management and your risk of illness would be much greater than with the smaller number.

TROUBLE WITH GREENFINCH (W. T. Manning).—The Greenfinch is naturally a big feeder, and I dare say if you examine your bird you will find he is much too fat. You say you are feeding him on mixed seeds, but this may mean anything. You had far better have sent me a sample. Anyway, discontinue its use (the mixed seed), and make the following mixture yourself, using the best and cleanest seeds you can procure:—Canary 2 parts, rape and teazle 1 part each. Give no other seeds just now, excepting wild seeds, which you can gather now almost anywhere, also privet berries, mountain ash, and berries of the hawthorn, also a little soft fruit, such as ripe pear and apple, if he will eat it, also offer him one or two mealworms daily. Put him in the largest cage you have, with the perches wide apart, so that he has to use his wings to get from one to the other, and let him bathe freely. Dissolve in his drinking water as much glauber salts as will cover a threepenny-piece, and add to it three drops of syrup of rhubarb, give him this now, and repeat a week later. I would advise you to get our Nuthell booklet on the Greenfinch, it will assist you in your management, especially as you are an exhibitor.

WINTERING BRITISH BIRDS (Bird Lover).—All the British Finches are quite hardy, and one has no difficulty in keeping them out in the open during the winter months, providing one takes ordinary precautions. The aviary should be sheltered as much as possible from rough winds, and the roof should overhang, to keep the inside as dry as possible. The food should be placed well out of reach of mice, as these are generally very troublesome during the winter. The water should be so situated that it is easily replenished from the outside, and during frosty weather this should be seen to every two hours, slightly warmed water being used.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

A FEATHER PULLER (Blunt).—If you have bought this bird on approval I should return it to the vendor at once; there are several causes for this trouble, of which improper feeding is the most frequent. But, whatever the cause, once a bird acquires this pernicious habit an entire cure is seldom effected. As regards wholesome dietary you had better get our Nuthell, "The Grey Parrot," 2d. post free, from our manager; you will get fuller details therein than can be given here. If you do not return the bird, for the next two months keep the bowels rather loose (but the voidings must not remain watery loose) by putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water as often as may be required, and on the days you are not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of chemical food in the water. The main dietary can cover seed mixture, ripe fruit and a few nuts. Parrot grit, cuttlebone, and a thick piece of a branch of a tree should be continuously supplied. Such extras as plain cake, biscuits, dry boiled potato, raw carrot, and stale crusts may be given. Do not, however, give tea, coffee, or milk sops, nor any kind of animal food whatever. In such cases improvement is only gradual, and there are frequent relapses, necessitating one beginning over again, but if these become less frequent and pronounced as time passes, then you may take hope. Pronounced feather-pickers and eaters often live for years in a state of semi-, or almost complete, nudity.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (Budge).—They have barely had time to settle down yet; they never settle down so quickly in a cage as in the aviary, and owing to the mislaid to the cock during the winter, and your not procuring another till July, the conditions are practically the same this year as last. However, as you have them in a cage and, of course, indoors, there is plenty of time yet for them to go to nest this year. So long as it lasts keep up the supply of seeding and flowering grass, when this fails give a little sweet apple and lettuce, but cut away the fleshy centre stem of the latter before supplying to the bird. As regards the other portion of their dietary, canary, white millet, millet spray, and a few white oats will suffice to keep them fit. Of course it is understood that the other essentials: cuttlebone, water, and grit, are continuously supplied. It is principally lack of room for flight exercise that retards settling down to nesting in a cage, and a few hours out of the cage two or three times a week will greatly help in keeping the birds fit. There are many problems that line round the question why they do not go to nest. There are the idiosyncrasies of individual pairs, and some are what may be termed breeding pairs, and some are not; after all, it's only a matter of patience; exercise this, and ultimate success will accrue. Get our Nuthell, "Budgerigars," 2d. post free, from our Manager, it should help you.

GREY PARROT RUNNING AT NOSTRIL (Mrs. Miller).—Of course one is handicapped considerably with a vicious bird which cannot be handled. Use a tepid dilute solution of glyco-thymoline and spray the nostril with this twice a day till the running ceases, do not wet the plumage more than you can help, but it will do no harm if the bird swallows a little of the solution. Keep the bowels moving quite freely, just short of being watery loose; you can secure this by putting one teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in the drinking water (the bird's condition must regulate the frequency of the dose). The diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, water, grit and cuttlebone, supplemented by stale crusts, plain cake, biscuits, nuts in variety, dry boiled potato and raw carrot. It is a good practice to keep a thick piece of a branch in the cage for it to exercise its mandibles upon. If you have not got it, our "Grey Parrot" Nuthell, 2d. post free from our manager, would help you in general management. There is nothing much wrong with the bird at present, and it should be quite normal again in about a month; if not, write again.

DIET FOR CALAH (M. Wright).—Calah is the vernacular name for the Roseate (Rose-breasted) Cockatoo. It is a hardy and robust species, once it has got over the hardships of the voyage to this country. It is to the bird's benefit to have a spell outside when weather conditions are favourable. There is no need to cover it up at night if it is in a position that is free from draught; at any rate it is only the sides of the cage that should be covered, the top being left open for proper ventilation. It can have any kind of ripe fruit it will eat, also nuts and plain cake, biscuits, stale crusts, dry boiled potato, and raw carrot. Water, grit and cuttlebone must be continually in the cage, also a thick piece of a branch for it to exercise its mandibles upon. A good seed mixture is as follows:—One quart each oats, sunflower seed, and hemp; one pint each giant canary, white millet, dari, maize, wheat and shelled monkey-nuts, well mix and keep in a dust-tight tin in a dry place; you can mix any quantity in the above proportions. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or animal food of any kind whatever.

PULLING ITS TAIL FEATHERS

(Mrs. A. S.).—I am not clear whether you mean boiled or dry maize; at any rate, any bird's food must be varied. If you have been giving it boiled maize, continue this, but also supply the following seed mixture: One quart each canary seed, white millet, and best white oats, one pint each hemp, sunflower seed, dari, maize, and shelled monkey-nuts—well mix and keep a supply in the cage. As a young bird, I think it will outgrow the habit of biting its tail feathers, but you should put in as large a piece of a thick branch as the cage will allow, and renew it as required; it will not only keep the bird occupied climbing about it, but will supply natural mandible exercise as well. Keep cuttlebone and Parrot grit continually in the cage, but if you have not been giving the latter, supply it cautiously, a pinch at a time, at first till the bird becomes accustomed to it. As you have the Nuthell, you will find therein such wholesome items of food as may be given as extras and to vary the normal dietary. Your treatment as to bathing and putting it outdoors is correct, but a bath will not be needed so frequently during the winter months, and you must take precautions against a chill while the plumage is damp. At present it will be sufficient if you put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving quite freely, but not often enough to cause the voiding to remain watery loose. Continue to supply ripe fruit and the chemical food.

POST MORTEM.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W.J., A.B.E.R.—The two birds died of ptomaine poisoning, the bowels were acutely inflamed, and both lungs affected with pneumonia.

Miss Beach.—Vermineous enteritis and inflammation of the bowels from the presence of worms.

Mrs. F. Barwick.—Dropsy accruing from disease of the liver of long origin.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

R. Newbury.—We think there is no other way than soldering of fixing the wires of cage-fronts, that is, of course, unless you are prepared to put them into a galvanising bath after making them. You might bind them into position by means of flexible wire, as is done with Parrot cages, and the other forms of all wire cages, but we presume that this is not what you mean.

Harvest.—The leaves and berries you send are those of the white beam tree (Pyrus aria). The berries form a very useful food for wild birds, and we believe the shrub is cultivated in France especially to encourage the presence of insectivorous birds, which are as fond of its berries as are the Fieldfares and Thrushes of our own mountain ash berries. The fruit, when dried and reduced to a powder, has been used for making bread; when fermented it is used in the making of a kind of beer, and a very powerful spirit is also distilled from the berries.

FROM A
PLAINHEADS.

The fanciers of Lancashire have become famous as exhibitors of the Norwich Canary, and our artist has here depicted two representatives from that county. Both birds were exhibited at the 1914 Crystal Palace Show by Mr. McAndrew, of Wigan, and each won first prize in its class, the variegated buff winning CAGE BIRDS £3 championship prize and diploma, and the eye, neck, and wing marked yellow the 10s. champion prize and diploma.

F. CARL, Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

SOFTBILL keepers, take expert advice before proceeding to buy and keep the larger species of insectivorous birds. You will then have no trouble in keeping your pets in the best of health. This advice is offered in "Nutshell No. 26," by H. J. Fulljames. It is a wonderful little work, dealing with most varieties in a highly interesting and instructive manner. Foods and their preparation, and the various styles of cages also receive full attention. Can you breed Mealworms? This booklet tells you how. Post free, 21d. from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C. Look at our list of agents; call on the nearest and get it for 2d.

SUPERLATIVE VALUE!

A grand lot of birds now ready to send out; such value is unobtainable elsewhere. Wastrels, and birds called anything but what they really are (and often hens sold for cocks) you can obtain, I know, at lower prices, but which, as a matter of fact, are usually dear at any price. I cordially invite you to send for one of the following on full if entire satisfaction not given. Amongst them are birds of grand quality, including some beautiful hens. Cocks, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-; hens, 2/6, 3/6, 5/-; Pairs, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 15/-, 20/-. Three hens, either variety, 6/6. Cages for one, 3d., two 4d., I advertise what I possess.—RUDD, Specialist, Norwich.

We hear that Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liver-
open show on Nov. 13.

At a special meeting held Sept. 13, writes
Mr. J. Jackson, hon. sec. Cockerham F.S., it was decided to hold our annual show on the usual date, Nov. 10. Other secs. please note, to avoid clashing.

The Accrington and Dist. C.B.S. has obtained the patronage of the O.N.P.C. and the N.P.C. for its annual show on Oct. 22 and 23, writes Mr. W. Crawshaw, Crown Hotel,
Accrington. Schedules are now ready.

Will secretaries of Midland shows who are willing to accept our patronage for 1915, kindly apply immediately to enable me to call an allotment meeting, writes Mr. W.
Wells, hon. sec. and treas. Midland Counties'
Y.C.C.

Our open show, under Yorks. Union of
C.B.S. Rules, writes Mr. A. Sutcliffe, sec.
Halifax C.B.S., will be held in the King's Cross Liberal Club on Jan. 8, 1916; instead of Jan. 22. Intending exhibitors please make note of the change.

Mr. R. Gore writes:—"I should be pleased if you will kindly inform readers of CAGE BIRDS that I have disposed of my bird business, and have no further connection with it, but am still carrying on my appliance manufacturing business at 131, Gooch Street, Birmingham, as usual.

Mr. H. L. Huggins, hon. sec., writes that the 29th annual autumn open show of the London and Provincial O.S. will be held Oct. 28 and 29 at the Lambeth Baths. Six silver challenge cups and a large number of special prizes will be up for competition.

At first we decided to have a two days' show, writes Mr. W. Curry, sec. Gateshead
C.B.S., but at our last meeting it was decided to only run a one day show, Dec. 11.
The judges will be Messrs. F. Laidlow, Newcastle, J. Stewart, Whitehaven, J. Nicholson, Haltwhistle, and J. Maddison, Newcastle.

OBITUARY.

MR. CANN, LEIGH.

It is, with deep regret, writes Mr. R. Charleson, sec., that I undertake the sad duty on behalf of the members of the Leigh C.B.S. of reporting the loss sustained by one of our members, Mr. A. Cann, in the death of his father. I am requested to express to Mr.
Cann and family the general sorrow and sincere sympathy we all feel for them in their bereavement, and we trust that time will heal the terrible wound they have sustained.

It is with great sorrow and regret, writes
Mr. D. McFarlane, hon. sec. Barrow C.B.A., that I have to report the sad bereavement that has befallen our President, Mr. A. Hudson, and his wife, in the sudden death of their little daughter, aged 6 years. It appears all the more tragic when we think she was at school on the Tuesday and died on the Friday. The members of the Barrow C.B.A. deeply sympathise with our President and his wife in this their great loss.

I am pleased to let you know, writes Mr.
E. Thomas, Sec. Cardiff C.B.S., that we intend to hold our open show, also that we have secured the Carlton Banqueting Hall.
We are increasing our classification, and trust exhibitors will rally to our aid, as we are running the show in aid of the fund for prisoners of war in Germany.

At a meeting of Pathhead Cage Birds Society held Sept. 14, writes Mr. J. Thomson, sec., it was agreed to hold our show as usual this year, confined to Fife. The date was fixed for Nov. 27. Last year we paid 10s.
1st, 5s. 2nd, 2s. 6d. 3rd, but sorry to say we showed a small deficit. We hope this year to work it up to a success.
